

Nixon to Visit Romania After Apollo Landing

By ROBERT B. SEMPLE JR.
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — President Nixon will journey to Romania in early August, the White House announced Saturday. He will thus become the first American president since World War II to visit an Iron Curtain country.

The visit to Romania, undertaken at the invitation of President Nicolae Ceausescu, will provide the climax to a tour that will take Nixon to the anticipated splashdown in the Pacific on July 24 of the Apollo 11 lunar landing vehicle, carry him through five South Asian countries in less than a week, and lead him finally to Bucharest in the first few days of August.

ACCORDING to White House sources, who briefed newsmen at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel here Saturday, the purpose of the Romanian trip is to provide visible evidence of Nixon's often-expressed desire to replace the cold-war atmosphere of "confrontation" with the new mood of "negotiations" and to demonstrate as well his continuing interest in the manifold problems of East-West relations.

"The United States," one ranking White House source declared, "is interested in dealing with the countries of Eastern Europe on the basis of mutual respect," and in exploring "the problems of East-West relations, which are very much on our mind."

"We wanted to hear the view of one of the leaders of Eastern Europe who has shown an understanding of the problems of East-West relations and who is willing to engage in a dialogue with us on these matters."

THE SOURCE said that the U.S. did not want to commit itself in advance to a rigidly precise agenda. He conceded that such specific issues as Sino-Soviet relations and matters of East-West trade were bound to arise, but he insisted that Nixon and his advisers were interested largely in an exploration of the "long-term problem of how to preserve peace" between two competing ideological and economic systems.

Although White House officials emphasized that the visit to Romania should not be interpreted as an "anti-Soviet gesture," the choice of Bucharest as the site for an American president's first visit to Communist soil since President Roosevelt's

POST DENIED KNOWLES

Nixon Names USC Dean as Aide to Finch

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon and his Administration moved swiftly Saturday to dampen the political flareup touched off by the on again, off again appointment of the government's top health official.

In New York, Nixon announced he was nominating Dr. Roger O. Egeberg, dean of the University of Southern California Medical School, to be assistant secretary of Health, Education and Welfare for health and scientific affairs.

This third-ranking post in the department was the post that was first offered, then denied to Dr. John H. Knowles of Boston because of political opposition in Congress and the medical profession.

IN WASHINGTON, HEW Secretary Robert H. Finch introduced the 65-year-old Egeberg at a news conference as "another very outstanding man." The nominee is a Democrat, the White House said.

Finch said he was accepting the rebuff on the Knowles appointment philosophically and denied any intention of resigning from the Cabinet.

"Sometimes in losing one battle, your hand is strengthened in another," he commented. "While I may not win all my battles, I'm going to fight them as I see them."

EGBERG, former physician to Gen. Douglas MacArthur, noted his position as dean of a medical school and wryly added: "A dean is supposed to be to the faculty, students and administration what a fire hydrant is to a dog."

He has differed on several occasions with the stands taken by the American Medical Association which was credited with playing a major role in blocking Knowles from the post.

Finch announced Friday that he was reluctantly dropping his effort to have Knowles, general director of Massachusetts General Hospital, named as his assistant.

THE SECRETARY, a long-time political adviser to Nixon, was asked about his relationship with the President in the light of the Knowles affair.

"I'm satisfied with the nature of that relationship," he replied.

He said he became conscious late Thursday that he had lost the battle on Knowles' behalf. "I may be naive, but I got the message," Finch told newsmen.

Then the cabinet official made it plain he didn't feel he had been deserted by the President in the controversy.

"I take the blame," he said.

He also denied that the AMA had veto power over

'Astromonk' in Orbit, Doing Well on Month-Long Flight

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — A pigtail monkey named Bonny rocketed into space Saturday for a month-long earth orbit trip intended to set medical guidelines for astronauts who will fly lengthy space station and planetary missions.

The three-year-old "astromonk" from the jungles of Thailand was strapped securely in his spaceship cabin as the two-stage Delta rocket burst away from its launch pad at 11:16 p.m. EDT.

Punishing forces 10 times the pull of gravity pressed against the primate as the Delta thundered into space, the flame from its engines brilliantly lighting the night Florida sky.

GLUE-SNIFF SNUFFS OUT SNIFF'S KICK

DETROIT (UPI) — Kids who get their kicks from smelling glue may soon be getting a sneeze instead of a sniff.

A most-tickling dose of essence of horseradish has been added to the plastic model cement made by the Ross Chemical and Manufacturing Co. of Detroit, which, the company says, "makes glue-sniffing impossible."

Ross claims the heady horseradish scent is virtually unnoticeable when the glue is used as it's supposed to be, for building models. But to take a whiff for a whiff's sake — a-choo.

Fifteen minutes after launching the National Aeronautics and Space Administration reported the satellite, called Biosatellite 3, was in a successful orbit about 250 miles high and that Bonny apparently was in fine shape despite the jolting departure from his home planet.

"No abnormalities have been noted in the test animal," NASA reported.

Bonny, named for his pleasant disposition, was to orbit for 30 days on the longest space flight ever attempted by a living creature. Scientists hope probes implanted deep in the monkey's brain, heart and other vital areas will provide data which could clear the way for future manned flights lasting for months or years.

Dr. W. Ross Adey, experiment coordinator for the Brain Research Institute at the University of California at Los Angeles, said: "This experiment is going to yield more medical data than all the American manned flights combined. This animal will be instrumented in a way we could not instrument a man."

Floating Cafe Loose in Storm

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Ragging storms tore a floating steamboat-restaurant and a full-scale replica of Columbus' Santa Maria from their St. Louis riverfront moorings Saturday night and sent both vessels drifting down the Mississippi River.

The Coast Guard said there were unconfirmed reports that the restaurant, the Becky Thatcher, was grounded miles downstream with about 100 patrons.

Stopgap Budget Likely as Demos Kill Tax Package

Refusal to Vote Beats Plan

By BOB SCHMIDT
From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO — Democratic Assemblymen virtually guaranteed Saturday that some sort of emergency budget bill will have to be enacted if California is going to continue to do business beyond midnight Monday.

The Democrats, who have repeatedly vowed they will not vote for the formal 1969-70 state budget unless provisions are first made for tax reform and school finance packages acceptable to them, killed the only tax reform package they are likely to see before the budget is laid before them Monday.

Gov. Ronald Reagan's revised tax reform program contained a penny sales tax hike.

Republicans had earlier rejected Democratic demands that Reagan's original tax reform plan be placed on the 1970 ballot. The GOP warned of major flaws in the program that could cripple school districts.

Reagan's tax reform legislation was substantially revised Friday to appease divided Republicans. The governor supported the sales tax bite, designed to finance property tax relief, but announced he "definitely opposed" other amendments.

The Assembly, meeting in its first Saturday session of the year, killed the revised plan on a 40-0 vote. The measure required 54 votes and Democrats killed it by simply not voting at all.

THE DEMOCRATS, obviously of the belief that the plan is so defective that a public debate on it would embarrass the governor, had unsuccessfully re-

HELP!

The Los Angeles County Department of Public Social Services, Metropolitan Division, 2711 Beverly Blvd., Los Angeles, is starting a summer program to reunite foster children, now living in different homes, with their brothers and sisters for periods of three days. The children, supervised by child welfare workers, will camp out at Leo Carrillo State Park. The department needs the donation or loan of large cooking equipment and utensils, Coleman stoves and lanterns and other camping equipment and monetary donations for the purchase of food. Individuals wishing to help should contact Marcia Trowbridge, supervising child welfare worker, at 387-4181, extension 491. She will arrange for the pickup of items. Any help would be greatly appreciated. M. J., Los Angeles.

No Pool Queue

Q. Whose money built the Belmont Plaza Pool Complex? Who manages it, and why isn't the pool open daily to the general public instead of a very few special groups? E. G., Long Beach.

A. The $3.7 million complex, which includes an Olympic-size indoor pool and outdoor and tiny tot pools, was paid for with tideland oil funds. The complex is operated by the Long Beach Recreation Department. Lee Bender is pool manager. The pools are used every day except Tuesday. On the four weekends, they are open for recreational swimming from 3 to 5:30 p.m. and from 7 to 8:50 p.m.; on Saturday, from 1 to 4:50 p.m. and 7 to 8:50 p.m.; and on Sunday from 1 to 4:50 p.m. A new schedule will go into effect on July 1, and a copy can be obtained by writing to the Long Beach Department of Recreation, 270 E. Seaside Ave. The hours for recreational swimming are limited because of staffing and budget problems, a spokesman explained, but the swim periods have not been overcrowded.

Home Work

Q. On March 25, I signed a contract with One Stop Builders, 4314 S. Broadway, Los Angeles, to have my kitchen remodeled. As of the middle of May, they had not done the work, so I arranged for another company to do the job. I have written One Stop Builders many times requesting my $100 deposit back, but I have received nothing. V. H., Long Beach.

A. Mike Einhorn, manager of One Stop Builders, told ACTION LINE he has work orders to prove they started the remodeling job on April 18, but you would not let them complete the job. If you still do not want the work completed, contact Einhorn at 232-4861, and

Tricia to Attend Prince Charles' Investiture Fete

Combined News Services

Tricia Nixon flew to London Saturday for a round of festivities marking the investiture of Prince Charles as Prince of Wales.

President and Mrs. Nixon came to Dulles International Airport to say good-bye to their 23-year-old daughter. Perhaps envious of the week of parties and sightseeing on Tricia's schedule, Nixon quipped to reporters: "We've decided to go too."

The President's oldest daughter was dressed for the trip in a white dress and jacket trimmed in blue with a blue bow in her long blond hair.

She said the trip, highlighted by the royal ceremony at Caernarvon Castle Tuesday, was "a great honor for me."

"I think she'll do very well," her father said smiling.

Miss Nixon's arrival appeared to take most of her fellow passengers and at least one plane crew member by surprise.

"Nobody told us anything," one of the Pan American flight attendants said.

TRICIA FLIES

President Nixon's daughter Tricia has flown to London to attend the round of festivities marking the investiture of Prince Charles as the Prince of Wales. She left quietly by commercial airliner Saturday evening. She will be the house guest of U.S. Ambassador and Mrs. Walter Annenberg.

Tricia, 23, will be an honor guest at the investiture Tuesday, along with former Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey and wife Muriel.

During her weeklong stay there will be a dinner-dance in her honor by the Annenbergs at the Claridge Hotel. Prince Charles will be on a tour following his investiture and will not attend.

She also will take in the Wimbledon tennis matches and the Henley Cup Regatta during her visit, which will wind up following the traditional Fourth of July Garden party at the American embassy.

Princess Anne of Britain, wearing a slightly nervous smile and an elegant off-white gown of nearly floor length, was the center of attention at a ball in Paris Saturday night. The princess was escorted by Nicholas Soames, 21-year-old son of Christopher Soames, Britain's ambassador to France.

BISHOP DIES

Bishop C. C. J. Carpenter, who led the Episcopal Church in Alabama for 30 years, died Saturday after a long illness.

Bishop Carpenter, 69, was named rector of the Church of the Advent in Birmingham in 1936. He was consecrated bishop in 1938 and relinquished the reins of the Alabama Diocese to Bishop George M. Murray in 1968.

MASS RITES

Eight members of the Raphael Torres family, stabbed and bludgeoned to death last week, were buried Saturday after a funeral mass in Jersey City, N.J., attended by scores of relatives, neighbors and friends. Meanwhile, Torres, 40, accused of taking a hunting knife and baseball bat and methodically killing his wife, Maria, 40 and seven of their nine children, remained in poor condition in a hospital. Officials said he was suffering from shock or an overdose of pills.

His son, Raymond, 15, who survived the slaughter at the Torres' apartment, was recovering at the hospital from stab wounds.

In Kerhonkson, N.Y., the six members of the Renaldo Perez family who died Wednesday in a multiple murder-suicide were buried together. And Ardaiz began to smile as he told about the ticket.

"We even got the ticket free," he chuckled. "Josephine has been selling Irish Sweepstakes tickets for about 10 years. She gets free tickets for it."

Pope Supports U.S. Cardinal in Dispute on Birth Control

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pope Paul VI has for the first time intervened in a local birth control dispute, coming out strongly in favor of Patrick Cardinal O'Boyle's hard-line view and urging 40 dissenting priests to reconsider their views.

In a letter to the capital's Roman Catholic archbishop, the Pope commended O'Boyle for giving "immediate acceptance" to the encyclical, Humanae Vitae, and striving to see "that all the priests and laity should give the same acceptance."

O'Boyle released the letter at a news conference Saturday.

The four-page letter amounted to a resounding endorsement of O'Boyle's view that the year-old encyclical forbids married Catholics to use any form of artificial birth control.

Forty of the archdiocese's 300 priests were stripped of at least part of their duties several months ago after they signed and refused to repudiate a "statement of conscience" asserting that married couples in some cases have the right to follow their consciences.

At a news conference after O'Boyle spoke, Rev. John E. Corrigan, a spokesman for the dissenting priests, said O'Boyle had misrepresented their position.

They do not attack the encyclical, he said, but contend that it allows room for individual conscience.

COULD END STRIKE Unions, Bottlers Reach Tentative Agreement

Tentative agreement between soft drink bottlers and six Teamsters locals was reached Saturday night in the seven-week strike which idled more than 1,400 workers including 200 in the Long Beach area.

Jack Cox, executive secretary of Long Beach Teamster Local 572, called the agreement "highly satisfactory."

He said all locals involved would "hold membership meetings at 6 p.m., tonight, to vote on ratification of the contract."

The unions had sought wage hikes amounting to about 84 cents an hour and modification of hiring practices used by six bottlers — Coca-Cola, Pepsi-Cola, Royal Crown, Canada Dry, National Drinks and Dominion Beverages — who were subsequently struck. Cox declined to say if the tentative agreement fulfilled union demands but said it was "in that neighborhood."

Soft drink shortages and some increases in prices resulted from the strike. Plants involved in the strike included one in Torrance, another in Garden Grove and a third in North Long Beach.

The Stolt Gemini docked at Berth 163 after crewmen reported a leak in its No. 1 hold, which was patched up after the flammable substance was transferred to another cargo tank.

The Esso Gloucester proceeded on its course following the accident. No injuries were reported.

Tricia to Attend Prince Charles' Investiture Fete

Combined News Services

Tricia Nixon flew to London Saturday for a round of festivities marking the investiture of Prince Charles as Prince of Wales.

President and Mrs. Nixon came to Dulles International Airport to say good-bye to their 23-year-old daughter. Perhaps envious of the week of parties and sightseeing on Tricia's schedule, Nixon quipped to reporters: "We've decided to go too."

The President's oldest daughter was dressed for the trip in a white dress and jacket trimmed in blue with a blue bow in her long blond hair.

She said the trip, highlighted by the royal ceremony at Caernarvon Castle Tuesday, was "a great honor for me."

"I think she'll do very well," her father said smiling.

Miss Nixon's arrival appeared to take most of her fellow passengers and at least one plane crew member by surprise.

"Nobody told us anything," one of the Pan American flight attendants said.

SAMMY DAVIS JR.
Gives Up Weapon

DISARMED

Customs officials Saturday seized a revolver and ammunition from Sammy Davis Jr. when the American entertainer arrived at London's Heathrow Airport from Los Angeles.

Davis, in London for nine weeks to make a film, was told he would be able to retrieve the gun and the ammunition when he flies back to the United States.

Davis said the gun was solely for protection.

"I have a permit to carry a gun in America, but the customs men informed me that laws are different in Britain and quite rightly so. I hate the idea of having to carry a gun to protect myself in America," he said.

STARVING IN VIET

Truong Dinh Dzu, a losing candidate in South Vietnam's 1967 presidential election, is being starved to death in prison, his son charged Saturday.

The son, David Truong, 23, said at a news conference in New York that the Saigon government wants to "eliminate" his father from the political scene.

The son, a former Stanford University student, said he is under a five-year prison sentence if he returns to Vietnam, for making statements against the government.

Dzu, who advocated an end to the bombing of North Vietnam and negotiations with the Viet Cong, ran second among 11 candidates in the 1967 election. He polled over 800,000 votes, nearly half the number for President Nguyen Van Thieu, who won with 35 per cent of the vote.

The Thieu regime later sentenced Dzu to five years in prison at hard labor. Truong said his father was charged with "weakening the spirit of the anti-Communist struggle."

TRICIA FLIES

President Nixon's daughter Tricia has flown to London to attend the round of festivities marking the investiture of Prince Charles as the Prince of Wales. She left quietly by commercial airliner Saturday evening. She will be the house guest of U.S. Ambassador and Mrs. Walter Annenberg.

Tricia, 23, will be an honor guest at the investiture Tuesday, along with former Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey and wife Muriel.

During her weeklong stay there will be a dinner-dance in her honor by the Annenbergs at the Claridge Hotel. Prince Charles will be on a tour following his investiture and will not attend.

She also will take in the Wimbledon tennis matches and the Henley Cup Regatta during her visit, which will wind up following the traditional Fourth of July Garden party at the American embassy.

NERVOUS

Princess Anne of Britain, wearing a slightly nervous smile and an elegant off-white gown of nearly floor length, was the center of attention at a ball in Paris Saturday night. The princess was escorted by Nicholas Soames, 21-year-old son of Christopher Soames, Britain's ambassador to France.

BISHOP DIES

Bishop C. C. J. Carpenter, who led the Episcopal Church in Alabama for 30 years, died Saturday after a long illness.

Bishop Carpenter, 69, was named rector of the Church of the Advent in Birmingham in 1936. He was consecrated bishop in 1938 and relinquished the reins of the Alabama Diocese to Bishop George M. Murray in 1968.

MASS RITES

Eight members of the Raphael Torres family, stabbed and bludgeoned to death last week, were buried Saturday after a funeral mass in Jersey City, N.J., attended by scores of relatives, neighbors and friends. Meanwhile, Torres, 40, accused of taking a hunting knife and baseball bat and methodically killing his wife, Maria, 40 and seven of their nine children, remained in poor condition in a hospital. Officials said he was suffering from shock or an overdose of pills.

His son, Raymond, 15, who survived the slaughter at the Torres' apartment, was recovering at the hospital from stab wounds.

In Kerhonkson, N.Y., the six members of the Renaldo Perez family who died Wednesday in a multiple murder-suicide were buried together. Official coroner's reports said that Renaldo, a 34-year-old plumber, shot his wife, Shirley, and four children to death with a .22 caliber rifle, then turned a shotgun on himself.

L.B. Civil Defense Goes Underground

Facility Deep in Nike Site

By DON BRACKENBURY
Staff Writer

Civil Defense in Long Beach has gone underground.

That doesn't mean that the city's civil defense activities will now be carried out in secret. It means that headquarters for disaster services are now in subterranean facilities.

Three steel-and-concrete, underground vaults southwest of Lakewood Boulevard and Spring Street, which once housed Nike missiles, have been converted by the city into an Emergency Operating Center.

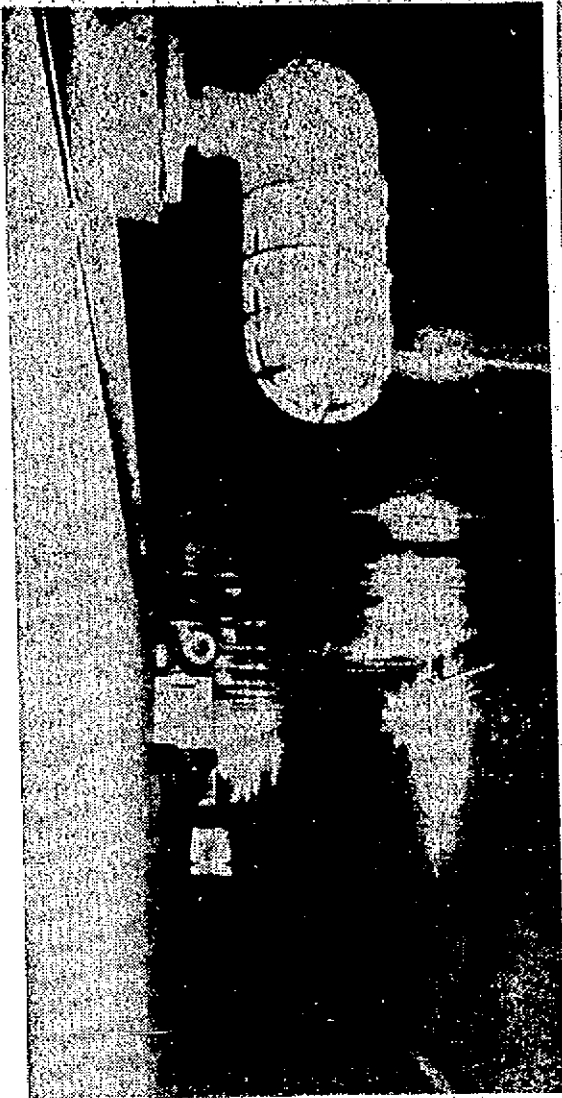

The three vaults, which provide 10,000 square feet of space, have been connected by tunnel and divided into rooms to provide a self-contained facility that could be operated for a minimum of two weeks without any contact with the outside world.

The Emergency Operating Center, whose conversion cost $315,000 — half of it federal funds, will be shown to city officials and the press at a special open house Monday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

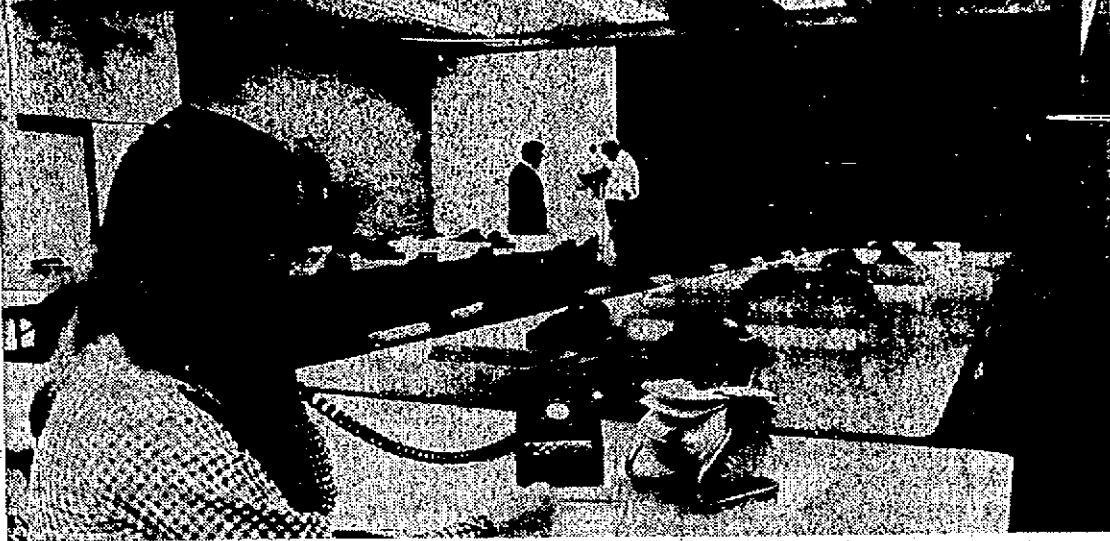

"The mission of Civil Defense," explained Evar P. Peterson, city coordinator of disaster services, "is to minimize the effects, and bring about rapid and efficient recovery, from any type of disaster, whether caused, by man, war or nature."

SUCH A MISSION calls for coordinated effort, and, in the event of a major disaster in Long Beach, all key city officials would make the Emergency Operating Center their headquarters for the duration of the disaster situation.

Fourteen radio networks will be available in the EOC to keep police, fire, utility and medical officials in touch with field units. The center also has broadcasting facilities to keep the public informed, including remote control of the local Emergency Broadcasting System station, KGER.

A TUNNEL, long as a football field connects three underground vaults that house Long Beach's civil defense Emergency Operating Center.

ASSEMBLY ROOM WOULD OPERATE AS A COMMAND POST IF A DISASTER STRUCK

IVAR PETERSON, city coordinator of disaster services, emerges from the Emergency Operating Center. The blast doors are balanced for easy operation. Behind Peterson is an intake which can filter air in case of fallout.

"Communications are the 'guts' of the operation," Peterson emphasized. "If you don't get the information, you can't function intelligently."

During an emergency, an estimated 200 people would live and work in the EOC, according to Peterson.

The three sections are organized to provide for their living and working needs. The westernmost of the three has a dining room and kitchen, an infirmary, shower, laundry and rest rooms, a 54-bed men's dormitory and a 21-bed women's dormitory. In an emergency situation, work and living would both be on a "shift" basis.

THE CENTER section contains offices for the administrative support staff — the "housekeeping" service. It also houses the two 75-kilowatt generators which would provide all light and power, three oil-burning furnaces for heating, along with storage for 6,000 gallons of fuel, and a 30,000-gallon water supply.

One of the two generators is equipped with an automatic switching system which starts the generator within seconds if the normal, outside power is cut off. Emergency lights, independent of either the regular power or the generators, also come on automatically if the power fails.

The east facility is the operating area. In normal use, this serves as the offices for Peterson and his staff.

In a disaster, the city manager — who is responsible, under the charter, for civil defense activities — would set up headquarters in this section. The assembly room has wall maps of the city on which all aspects of the disaster can be posted, and chiefs of the various emergency services have phone stations.

ADJACENT is an office where the operations group gathers data from field units, analyzes the situation and reports to the city manager and chiefs of the various services.

There is an emergency broadcasting booth for dissemination of information to the public, an information center for the news media, and a communications center, where operators are in contact with all city emergency radio networks, including the amateur radio operators' RACES and the citizens' band operators' REACT.

Messages also may be handled by telephone and teletype.

Although the Emergency Operating Center is designed primarily to provide a safeguard from radiation — where it offers 5,000 to 1 protection — it also will withstand considerable blast.

THE FLOOR of the center is 18 feet below ground level, and the subterranean structure is covered by a minimum of four feet of concrete and earth. The original vaults were designed to withstand possible explosion of missiles within the structure.

When not mobilized for some disaster, the center is used as headquarters for the city's Department of Emergency Preparedness, and for classroom instruction for a variety of city emergency services.

"We hope we'll never have to use this center for its intended purpose," Peterson said, "but we must be ready to insure the continued function of governmental services in any disaster."

"As long as a City of Long Beach exists, government must be able to operate to serve the residents of the city," he emphasized.

cials in touch with field units. The center also has broadcasting facilities to keep the public informed, including remote control of the local Emergency Broadcasting System station, KGER.

"Communications are the 'guts' of the operation," Peterson emphasized. "If you don't get the information, you can't function intelligently."

During an emergency, an estimated 200 people would live and work in the EOC, according to Peterson.

The three sections are organized to provide for their living and working needs. The westernmost of the three has a dining room and kitchen, an infirmary, shower, laundry and rest rooms, a 54-bed men's dormitory and a 21-bed women's dormitory. In an emergency situation, work and living would both be on a "shift" basis.

THE CENTER section contains offices for the administrative support staff — the "housekeeping" service. It also houses the two 75-kilowatt generators which would provide all light and power, three oil-burning fuelnaces for heating, along with storage for 6,000 gallons of fuel, and a 30,000-gallon water supply.

One of the two generators is equipped with an automatic switching system which starts the generator within seconds if the normal, outside power is cut off. Emergency lights, independent of either the regular power or the generators, also come on automatically if the power fails.

The east facility is the operating area. In normal use, this serves as the offices for Peterson and his staff.

In a disaster, the city manager — who is responsible, under the charter, for civil defense activities — would set up headquarters in this section. The assembly room has wall maps of the city on which all aspects of the disaster can be posted, and chiefs of the various emergency services have phone stations.

ADJACENT is an office where the operations group gathers data from field units, analyzes the situation and reports to the city manager and chiefs of the various services.

There is an emergency broadcasting booth for dissemination of information to the public, an information center for the news media, and a communications center, where operators are in contact with all city emergency radio networks, including the amateur radio operators' RACES and the citizens' band operators' REACT.

Messages also may be handled by telephone and teletype.

Although the Emergency Operating Center is designed primarily to provide a safeguard from radiation — where it offers 5,000 to 1 protection — it also will withstand considerable blast.

THE FLOOR of the center is 18 feet below ground level, and the subterranean structure is covered by a minimum of four feet of concrete and earth. The original vaults were designed to withstand possible explosion of missiles within the structure.

When not mobilized for some disaster, the center is used as headquarters for the city's Department of Emergency Preparedness, and for classroom instruction for a variety of city emergency services.

"We hope we'll never have to use this center for its intended purpose," Peterson said, "but we must be ready to insure the continued function of governmental services in any disaster."

SAN CLEMENTE ESTATE

Nixon Southland Home Given 'Total Protection'

five grounds to the broad, white-sand beach have been "sealed off" to public use.

Surprisingly, while the paths were private during the tenancy of the late H. H. Cotton, the public used them frequently.

You can imagine the Secret Service's surprise when a baechgoer casually strolled through the grounds, just wandering around to see the sights.

President Nixon's stay in San Clemente means communications — and lots of it.

TELEPHONE cables are being laid all over San Clemente. Crews are working overtime to beef up the number of cables available to the President and his staff.

Sectioned pipelines, carrying four cables of 1,200 pairs of lines in each, are being stretched from Mr. Nixon's Cyprus Shores retreat.

Atop the city's highest hill, off Avenida Salvador where San Clemente has a water reservoir, a powerful radio station will be built. It will be linked with radar installations on the adjoining Camp Pendleton Marine Corps base.

The summer place is adjacent to the San Mateo Point Coast Guard Station, a loran base which was never in the public limelight until its distinguished neighbor arrived.

The base made the acquaintance of more than 5,000 people who came to see President Nixon when he spent a few days at his new estate last month before his momentous mid-way island meeting with South Vietnam's President Thieu.

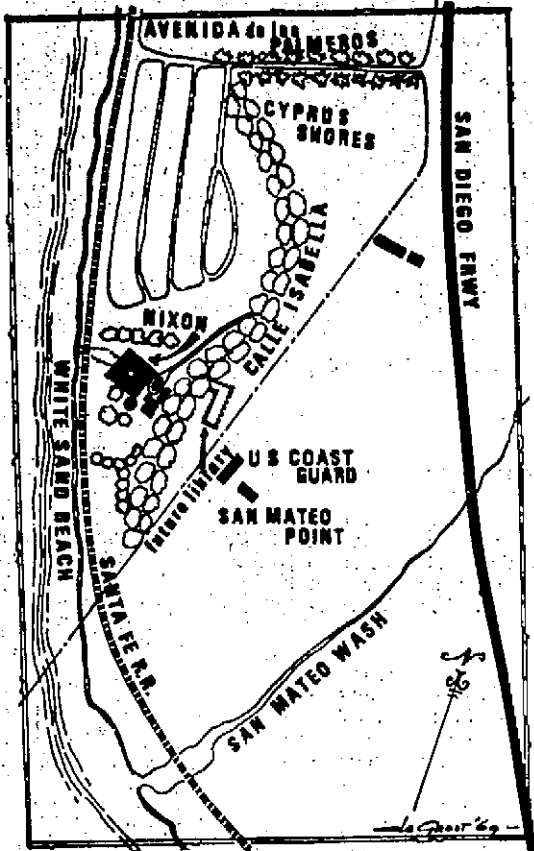

THAT VISIT, pointed up the need for security at the Coast Guard station which had no sentry at its gate because it had so few visitors.

Besides its main gate was a button, with the legend: "Ring Twice, and Wait."

Thus was the casual visitor received at San Mateo Point.

No more: the Secret Service put in a guard shack.

Next, it plans a new road from the station to Mr. Nixon's estate. This will eliminate routing the Presidential limousine over a short strip of public road leading from Avenida de Frente.

PRIVACY AND SECURITY are assured President Nixon at the summer White House at Cyprus Shores in San Clemente. Massive security measures include communications center, chopper landing pad at San Mateo Point Coast Guard Station (center of map) and seaward spotlights aimed from bluffs (left of map). No planes will be permitted over the area and new private roads are being built.

It will mean that President Nixon and his family can fly to El Toro Marine Corps Air Station near Santa Ana, helicopter to the Coast Guard Station, and then reach their home by private road. There need be no public exposure.

San Clemente police, the Orange County Sheriff's officers and the California Highway Patrol contribute men to ground security.

Security measures have been taken from the sea approach, and from the air.

THE NIXON estate is "off limits" to mariners; powerful spotlights point seaward from the bluffs. Guard shacks will block the beach.

The Santa Fe Railway ordered its engineers to slow their trains and silence their whistles as their trains pass along the beach below the presidential mansion.

Airplane pilots will find a restricted area marked out on their flight charts: it will be a mile each direction, and 4,000 feet up.

The President and his family will soon have a swimming pool to enjoy, because the Secret Service men are sort of stuffy about letting them go to the beach.

AT SAN CLEMENTE, the Nixon family will find even more privacy than in Washington, where the White House is open to public view.

The summer place is much smaller — but it's also more secluded. It cannot be seen from the roadway, and from only a few isolated spots on the beach.

In the words of the Secret Service agents: ideal for total security.

NO MORE CASUAL visitors will roam San Clemente seaside estate which is fast becoming island of security for President Nixon. Among changes are security guards, such as Michael Clancey, of Garden Grove, Guard shacks will also line beach below the presidential mansion.

Nixon Plans Visit to Romania After Apollo Recovery

wartime travels to Yalta and Potsdam was regarded here as highly significant, and carefully premeditated.

Romania and its extraordinarily popular leader, Ceausescu, have been at odds with Moscow for several years on several major issues economically. Romania has for several years resisted Soviet efforts to integrate the individual economies of Soviet-bloc nations in a Communist common market. Nationalistic and independent, she continues to seek trade with the West. About half of its trade is within the Communist bloc; the other half is outside, principally with West Germany, France, Italy, and England.

POLITICALLY, relations between Moscow and Bucharest are no better and are perhaps even worse. Ceausescu has resisted Moscow's attempts to send Soviet troops to Romania for maneuvers, and alone among Warsaw Pact countries she has refused to provide support for the Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia last August.

Ceausescu has, moreover, consistently refused to endorse Moscow's repeated efforts to condemn Communist China. He has also failed to sign a treaty of "friendship and mutual alliance" with the Soviet Union, a standard procedure among Soviet-bloc nations.

Nixon's trip was announced by press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler, at the Waldorf-Astoria, where Nixon spent much of the morning in conference with Henry A. Kissinger, his National Security Council adviser.

ZIEGLER, who said the precise details of Nixon's itinerary were still under discussion, announced that the President would leave Washington July 23 and fly to the Pacific to witness the anticipated recovery of the Apollo 11 vehicle near Johnson Island on board the USS Hornet, the recovery ship for the moon voyage. From the recovery area, he will then proceed in sequence to the Philippines, Indonesia, Thailand, India and Pakistan.

Secretary of State William P. Rogers will accompany Nixon to Manila in the Philippines, and Jakarta, in Indonesia. Rogers will then leave the presidential tour to undertake a separate mission of his own to five other Pacific nations — Japan, South Korea, the Republic of China (Taiwan), Australia and New Zealand.

Currently neither man is expected to visit Southeast Asia. White House sources explained that the fundamental purpose of the trip was not to discuss the war or the negotiations in Paris — though they conceded that discussion of these subjects was unavoidable — but to explore the longrange prospects for peace in Southeast Asia generally and "to lay the foundation for post-Vietnam Asian policy."

NIXON is expected to finish the Asian portion of his tour at the end of July, rest briefly at some undetermined location, then proceed to Romania. He is expected to arrive back in Washington on or about August 3. The trips to Asia and the trip to Romania are linked in terms of the President's schedule but not, White House officials emphasized, "substantively" or "conceptually."

Nixon Will Observe Landing

President to Dine With Astronauts, Ride Recovery Ship

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. — President Nixon will dine with the Apollo 11 astronauts the night before they blast off for the moon and he will be on the recovery ship in the Pacific to greet them when they return from their historic lunar landing mission.

The President won't shake hands with the returning heroes, however. To prevent the spread of possible moon germs, the astronauts will be transferred in biological garments to a special quarantine trailer on the deck of the aircraft carrier Hornet. Nixon will welcome them home over a telephone plugged to the outside of the trailer.

Nell A. Armstrong, Air Force Col. Edwin E. Aldrin Jr. and Air Force Lt. Col. Michael Collins are to splash down in the Pacific just before dawn July 24. White House press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler announced Nixon's plans in New York Saturday.

OFFICIALS HERE said the President will fly to Cape Kennedy the night before the July 16 launch to have dinner with the astronauts in their crew quarters. Other dinner guests will be Dr. Thomas O. Paine, administrator, and astronaut Donald K. Slayton, chief of flight crew operations.

Nixon will not stay for the launching. But large delegations are expected from Congress and the Washington diplomatic corps, possibly including Soviet representatives.

Soviet officials previously have declined to visit Cape Kennedy because they have felt they might have to reciprocate and invite Americans to view Soviet launch facilities.

AMERICAN officials expect Soviet Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin or his representative to accept an invitation to watch the launch.

Armstrong and Aldrin, who will make the landing July 20, while Collins orbits overhead, plan to take flags of all United Nations members, including the Soviet Union, to the surface.

They'll also carry the flags of all 50 states, each U.S. territory and the District of Columbia.

Mystery Fumes Fell Eleven Shoppers in Michigan Store

WARREN, Mich. (UPI) — Mysterious fumes wafting through a discount department store in this Detroit suburb Saturday afternoon caused at least 11 persons to become ill and collapse.

Fire department rescue units were sent to the store when the shoppers started collapsing. Officials said there was no explosion or fire.

Ten women and one man were treated for severe nausea and dizziness. One woman was admitted for treatment of injuries, apparently suffered when she fainted and fell.

Officials speculated the fumes might have emanated from an air conditioning unit.

BESIEGED AT BEN HET Allies Try to Rescue Green Berets

SAIGON (UPI) — More than 1,200 fresh Allied troops moved through mountainous jungles to relieve the besieged Green Beret fortress at Ben Het today and B52 stratofortresses bombed Communist positions shelling the outpost.

Allied commanders threw in fresh troops and ordered continued B52 raids to break the 55-day-old siege amid reports North Vietnamese troops were tunneling their way into the fortress just as they did at Dein Bein Phu, where they defeated the French in 1954.

Despite 10 aerial bombardment raids Saturday, Communist artillery continued to pound the camp. Military spokesmen said 53 mortar and recoilless rifle rounds hit Ben Het Saturday. They caused neither damage nor casualties, spokesmen said.

The B52s struck again early today, dumping 90 tons of bombs about two miles southeast of the camp.

ELSEWHERE in Vietnam Saturday, U.S. fighter-bombers and helicopter gunships were credited with killing 81 Communists in three separate strikes around the northern coastal city of Da-Nang, and U.S. artillery units, firing on a Communist concentration spotted by an aerial observer, killed 11 North Vietnamese soldiers about 27 miles northwest of Saigon.

The heaviest fighting, however, was developing around Ben Het as four battalions of Allied troops struck on the ground in support of the garrison of about 200 Americans and 450 South Vietnamese.

At the time, they said, an Army CH47 transport helicopter was hovering about 40 yards from the wall.

"The possibility that the helicopter's rotor wash might have contributed to the collapse is being investigated," a U.S. command announcement said.

PRIOR TO today's early morning bombing raid,

Drunk, Gaily-Garbed Tourist Pulls Knife, Hijacks Airliner to Cuba

MIAMI (UPI) — A middle-aged tourist gaily garbed in shorts and sandals and loaded with liquor pulled out a pearl-handled knife on an Eastern Air Lines jet Saturday and forced the pilot to fly to Cuba.

The plane, a Baltimore-to-Miami Boeing 727 carrying 97 passengers and a crew of seven, made the flight to Havana's Jose Marti Airport and on to Miami safely. The hijacker was left, in the arms of Cuban soldiers, for the Castro government to worry with.

It was the 32nd airliner hijacking of the year.

Saturday's hijacker was carried on Eastern's passenger manifest as "R. Anthony." Passengers said he professed to be Ray Anthony, the famous trumpeter player and orchestra leader but Eastern said it had been determined that it was not the musician but another Anthony who turned sullen and forced his way into the cockpit and told the three-man crew: "All three of you guys: Cuba."

Stewardess Lora Ann Compton, a veteran of two airline hijackings, said the hijacker whipped out a bottle and started to take a swig shortly after boarding the plane at Baltimore. She said she instructed him that such drinking was not allowed and he surrendered his bottle.

"He seemed like such a nice man," she said. "He told me he had a personal problem — that one of his brothers was very ill in Miami."

Saigon Wall Falls, Kills 18 Children

SAIGON (UPI) — An old cement wall collapsed and fell on children playing behind it in a Mekong Delta town Saturday, killing 18 and injuring four, U.S. military spokesmen said.

At the time, they said, an Army CH47 transport helicopter was hovering about 40 yards from the wall.

"The possibility that the helicopter's rotor wash might have contributed to the collapse is being investigated," a U.S. command announcement said.

East Coast Train Jumps Track; 1 Dead, 120 Hurt

GLENN DALE, Md. (AP) — A crowded New York-to-Miami passenger train jumped the track here Saturday, overturning five cars and derailing six others.

One passenger, a priest, died of heart attack and 120 other persons were sent to hospitals, most with minor injuries. Three persons were reported to have back fractures.

The 18-car train, one of two sections of the Silver Star, left Penn-Central tracks near the Glenn Dale crossing, about 18 miles east of Washington, D.C.

Five cars overturned, and another came to an immediate stop but remained upright. Five more cars bounced the ties for another mile before coming to a halt.

A Maryland state trooper quoted an eyewitness as saying the rails buckled in the near 100 degree heat just before the train with 592 passengers moved along on its 80-to-85-mile-an-hour course.

Another train had moved over the same tracks 10 minutes earlier.

THE DEAD MAN was identified as Father Anhinzio Crescenti, 55, of Montclair, N.J. Witnesses said he collapsed after climbing from one of the overturned cars.

The heat felled others, including seven firemen.

"In my car there was a lot of screaming, a lot of panic and a lot of praying," said English Wilder of New York, a passenger in one of the derailed but not overturned cars.

As the cars ground to a halt, sparks from the metal wheels touched off brush fires, complicating rescue efforts. The momentum tore up about 200 yards of track and roadbed.

"All of a sudden I could hear the car buckle," said a passenger, James Gillo-way, 42, of Landsdowne, Pa. "It was like a roller coaster."

An estimated 150 firemen and other workers helped in the rescue efforts. The uninjured sat in the stifling heat for about three hours until another train took them into Washington.

THE TRAIN was the second of two separate sections, the first of which went into Washington without mishap.

The Silver Star, a Penn-Central train between Washington and New York, is handled by the Richmond, Fredericksburgh & Potomac Railroad to Richmond and then goes into Florida over tracks of the primary operator, the Seaboard Coast Line Railroad.

Fish Story

Q. I would like some information on walking cat-fish. I have heard in Florida they are able to walk from one lake to another. Can I raise them in California? E. C., Lakewood.

A. The Clarias batrachus have really become fish out of water. They are able to move across land from one lake or canal to another by slithering and walking on the stiff spines of their pectoral fins. Once out of water, they can breathe air, because a rear part of each gill has evolved into a sort of lung. The June 1969 issue of National Geographic quotes a Florida bartender as saying that last fall he encountered "hundreds" of walking catfish slithering across a road after he left work at 2 a.m. Native to eastern India and Southeast Asia, the walking catfish were imported to Florida by tropical fish dealers. Jerry Banks, assistant chief of fisheries for the Florida Department of Fish and Game, told ACTION LINE that the fish got out of hatchery areas and invaded the canals of Florida. They are now found in a three county area surrounding Miami, but fish experts fear they will spread. "Since the fish were imported they have few natural enemies and are propagating at a rapid rate. The 13-inch-long fish are ferocious and eat smaller fish. They are destroying the ecological balance. We have tried poisoning their waters and other control methods, but it's almost impossible to stop their spread. They can just walk away," he said. Capt. Donald Stork of the California Fish and Game Department said there is no law as yet against raising the catfish in an aquarium here but you cannot put them into streams.

Girls Ask for Park

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The latest development in topless entertainment is a demand for a public park where the girls can get sunbathers "without leaving body lines that might jeopardize their constitutional right to employment."

A spokesman, Dave Rosenberg, manager of The Condor, birthplace night club of topless, said Friday: "These girls want to look good and healthy when they are performing and there's nothing better than a little sunshine, but most live in apartment houses."

"So where can they go? What can they do?"

ROSENBERG filed a formal request recently with the San Francisco Park and Recreation Department for use, by partially undraped girls of a section of Allyn Park at Greene and Gough streets. The city turned him down, but Peter Ashe, supervising director of recreation, told him:

"Your request is receiving extensive consideration — please do not hesitate to contact me."

siaed the amendments Friday.

Saturday, they failed in an attempt to amend the governor's entire package into another bill. After lengthy debate, a motion by Assemblyman Pete Wilson, R-San Diego, to table the amendment attempt passed 36-32, with the voting on a strictly partisan basis.

Then Assemblyman W. Craig Biddle, R-Riverside, sponsor of both the governor's original proposals and the controversial amendments, asked for approval of the altered measure.

But Democrats cited a Friday press statement by Gov. Reagan in which he said he preferred his own plan untouched.

They also charged that the amendments were not actual reform. Assemblyman Joe Gonsalves, D-La Mirada, pointed out that the plan gave businessmen tax relief at the same time it raised sales taxes paid by consumers.

"THE AMENDMENTS ask consumers to finance tax relief for businessmen," Gonsalves said. "I don't call that the kind of tax relief and tax reform program we promised the people of this state."

When the roll call was finally taken after numerous parliamentary hassles, all 40 Republicans present voted for the amended bill. None of the Democrats cast a vote.

So the Assembly and Senate will come back to work Monday knowing that, unless lower house Democrats change their minds, there is no chance for anything more than a short-term, stopgap budget being passed before the midnight deadline.

If no budget of any kind is passed, no state employee will be authorized to perform any work, and no bills can be paid.

SACRAMENTO — Apparently, no stone is going to be left unturned in the Legislature's effort to put together an acceptable version of Gov. Reagan's $6.2 billion-budget before the constitutional deadline of midnight Monday.

When Assembly chaplain, Father Leo McAllister, began Saturday's unusual session of the lower house, he offered the following prayer:

"Father, the busy week has grown longer, the negotiations more strenuous and the dialogue more exacting. Help the members of this body, Lord, to find the proper solutions for the problems which confront them. Keep them from being impatient with each other and with their duties. Reassure them that by June 30 at midnight, there will be a budget.

"And, whatever may be lacking in that budget, Lord, we ask you to make right. Amen."

East Coast Train Jumps Track; 1 Dead, 120 Hurt

GLENN DALE, Md. (AP) — A crowded New York-to-Miami passenger train jumped the track here Saturday, overturning five cars and derailing six others.

One passenger, a priest, died of heart attack and 120 other persons were sent to hospitals, most with minor injuries. Three persons were reported to have back fractures.

The 18-car train, one of two sections of the Silver Star, left Penn-Central tracks near the Glenn Dale crossing, about 18 miles east of Washington, D.C.

Five cars overturned, and another came to an immediate stop but remained upright. Five more cars bounced the ties for another mile before coming to a halt.

A Maryland state trooper quoted an eyewitness as saying the rails buckled in the near 100 degree heat just before the train with 592 passengers moved along on its 80-to-85-mile-an-hour course. Another train had moved over the same tracks 10 minutes earlier.

THE DEAD MAN was identified as Father Anunzio Crescenti, 55, of Montclair, N.J. Witnesses said he collapsed after climbing from one of the overturned cars.

The heat felled others, including seven firemen.

"In my car there was a lot of screaming, a lot of panic and a lot of praying," said English Wilder of New York, a passenger in one of the derailed but not overturned cars.

As the cars ground to a halt, sparks from the metal wheels touched off brush fires, complicating rescue efforts. The momentum tore up about 200 yards of track and roadbed.

An estimated 150 firemen and other workers helped in the rescue efforts. The uninjured sat in the stifling heat for about three hours until another train took them into Washington.

THE TRAIN was the second of two separate sections, the first of which went into Washington without mishap.

The Silver Star, a Penn-Central train between Washington and New York, is handled by the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad to Richmond and then goes into Florida over tracks of the primary operator, the Seaboard Coast Line Railroad.

COMMITTED TO HEW

Finch Denies He Will Resign Over Knowles

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — Secretary of Welfare Robert H. Finch said Saturday he intends to stay on the job, although he said he once told a reporter he would resign if Dr. John Knowles was not named his top aide in health affairs.

Finch, defeated in a 5½-month power struggle over the appointment, denied published reports that he would step down because of his failure to win White House approval for Knowles.

"I have a four-year commitment," Finch said. "I may not win all my battles but I plan to stay here and continue fighting them," he said.

THE COMMENTS — made in news conferences in Washington and Denver, were the first by Finch since a brief statement Friday that brought to an end his campaign to win support for Knowles as assistant secretary for health and scientific affairs.

Finch had bowed to opposition from some American Medical Association leaders and from Senate Republican leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois and picked instead Dr. Roger Egeberg, 65-year-old dean of the University of Southern California Medical School.

"He said he was so sure he could win support for Knowles that I told a reporter at 1:30 in the morning early this week that if the Knowles appointment didn't make it, I'd resign."

He said he thought Dirksen had been overly maligned by critics who said he took too much of a hand in Nixon Administration appointments.

He said Dirksen had been "by and large very helpful."

He also said he did not think the issue of the appointment had damaged the Nixon Administration.

THE NOMINATION of Egeberg is subject to Senate confirmation but no difficulty is anticipated.

However, the Administration handling of the controversy is expected to provide political grist for Democratic critics.

Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield cited the situation in declaring Nixon "is the victim of circumstances over which he should have control as the man in the White House."

"Infighting, quibbling and disruption are becoming more evident. These pressures seem to be taking precedence over the welfare of the country."

SENATE Republican leader Everett M. Dirksen, who was the most powerful of Knowles' congressional foes, said he did not know Egeberg personally.

"I'm neutral. I'm reserving judgment," he said of the appointment.

Egeberg, a big, jovial man, has nearly 40 years of medical experience with almost half of it in the public health field.

FINCH noted Egeberg had worked closely with HEW as a consultant on several health matters and was on a Nixon task force on medicine prior to the inauguration.

of Lieutenant Governors. Earlier, he appeared with Egeberg at the Washington news conference.

Egeberg said he admires the "Forward views" of Knowles, who was opposed by some AMA leaders as being too liberal. Egeberg added, "I hope I have forward views, too."

Finch told newsmen that neither the AMA nor Dirksen nor anyone else on Capitol Hill was consulted about the Egeberg appointment. He reported that Knowles had given it "very enthusiastic support."

Egeberg said he believes "the biggest problem I had is the deliver of medical care."

"If we add 40 million people as Congress has done we cannot put them through the same mill. We have to find a new way."

Egeberg did not go any deeper into his philosophies although he was questioned repeatedly.

HEW Chief Rules Out Senate Bid

Finch Says He Won't Run Even If Murphy Quits

By BAXTER OMOHUNDRO
I, P-T National Bureau

WASHINGTON — In the most emphatic terms yet, HEW Secretary Robert Finch Saturday denied that he will be a candidate for the U.S. Senate from California next year.

At a press conference announcing the appointment of Dr. Roger Egeberg as his assistant for health and scientific affairs, Finch reiterated that he will not oppose incumbent Republican George Murphy for re-election.

BUT, GOING further than he has before, Finch said he would not be a candidate for the job even if Murphy does not seek re-election.

"I regard myself as having a four-year tenure as secretary of HEW," Finch said.

There has been speculation that Murphy would retire from the Senate, pleading ill health, that Finch would step in.

However, Finch told the press conference Saturday that he believes Murphy's health is good and that he will again be a candidate.

Murphy repeatedly during the past two years has said he intends to run again and has been building a broad-based, well-financed campaign organization.

AMA Hails Egeberg Appointment

CHICAGO (UPI) — The American Medical Association, instrumental in the dumping of Dr. John H. Knowles' nomination for the government's top health post, Saturday congratulated the Nixon Administration on its nomination of Dr. Roger O. Egeberg, Los Angeles, for the position.

"We believe Dr. Egeberg will be able to bring about the necessary close coordination between government and private sectors in the health care system," Dr. Dwight L. Wilbur, AMA president, said in a statement released here.

On Friday HEW Secretary Robert H. Finch announced reluctantly that he was dropping the nomination of Knowles, a Boston physician, for the post of assistant secretary for health and scientific affairs.

President Nixon announced Egeberg's nomination in New York Saturday.

The AMA statement made no explicit reference to the Knowles affair. On Friday an AMA spokesman said the association would have a statement on the matter but later said there would be none.

The Saturday statement touched only obliquely on the controversial Knowles situation.

spread discussion about the goals and needs of the American health-care system," Wilbur said. "This has centered on the approaches that may be advocated by the Nixon Administration and the leaders who may be appointed to develop and direct its plans in health affairs."

"The goal of all participants in these discussions has been basically the same: to assure provision of quality health care for all the American people on a constantly advancing basis."

"In a highly complex situation, much of the attention has been focused only on one or two of the many factors involved. All of the factors must be considered together and on a flexible basis, so changes can be made when desirable."

"This calls for close cooperation between the medical profession and the AMA with the new assistant secretary. We look forward to the opportunity to work with Dr. Egeberg and with all other segments of the health care field in this way to help assure the best health care system for the entire American public."

Egeberg, a big, jovial man, has nearly 40 years of medical experience with almost half of it in the public health field.

FINCH noted Egeberg had worked closely with HEW as a consultant on several health matters and was on a Nixon task force on medicine prior to the inauguration.

of Lieutenant Governors. Earlier, he appeared with Egeberg at the Washington news conference.

Egeberg said he admires the "forward views" of Knowles, who was opposed by some AMA leaders as being too liberal. Egeberg added, "I hope I have forward views, too."

Finch told newsmen that neither the AMA nor Dirksen nor anyone else on Capitol Hill was consulted about the Egeberg appointment. He reported that Knowles had given it "very enthusiastic support."

Egeberg said he believes "the biggest problem I had is the deliver of medical care."

"If we are 40 million people as Congress has done we cannot put them through the same mill. We have to find a new way."

Egeberg did not go any deeper into his philosophies although he was questioned repeatedly.

HEW Chief Rules Out Senate Bid

Finch Says He Won't Run Even If Murphy Quits

By BAXTER OMOHUNDRO
I. P-T National Bureau

WASHINGTON — In the most emphatic terms yet, HEW Secretary Robert Finch Saturday denied that he will be a candidate for the U.S. Senate from California next year.

At a press conference announcing the appointment of Dr. Roger Egeberg as his assistant for health and scientific affairs, Finch reiterated that he will not oppose incumbent Republican George Murphy for re-election.

BUT, GOING further than he has before, Finch said he would not be a candidate for the job even if Murphy does not seek re-election.

"I regard myself as having a four-year tenure as secretary of HEW," Finch said.

There has been speculation that Murphy would retire from the Senate, pleading ill health, that Finch would step in.

However, Finch told the press conference Saturday that he believes Murphy's health is good and that he will again be a candidate.

Murphy repeatedly during the past two years has said he intends to run again and has been building a broad-based, well-financed campaign organization.

Miramar beach in Santa Barbara lies under a coating of newly deposited oil on the 152nd day of the oil disaster. A massive leak near Union Oil's Platform A in the Santa Barbara Channel that started on Tuesday, Jan. 28, has polluted beaches and destroyed wildlife ever since that time. The latest deposits washed up Saturday.

AMA Hails Egeberg Appointment

CHICAGO (UPI) — The American Medical Association, instrumental in the dumping of Dr. John H. Knowles' nomination for the government's top health post, Saturday congratulated the Nixon Administration on its nomination of Dr. Roger O. Egeberg, Los Angeles, for the position.

"We believe Dr. Egeberg will be able to bring about the necessary close coordination between government and private sectors in the health care system, Dr. Dwight L. Wilbur, AMA president, said in a statement released here.

On Friday HEW Secretary Robert H. Finch announced reluctantly that he was dropping the nomination of Knowles, a Boston physician, for the post of assistant secretary for health and scientific affairs.

President Nixon announced Egeberg's nomination in New York Saturday.

The AMA statement made no explicit reference to the Knowles' affair. On Friday an AMA spokesman said the association would have a statement on the matter but later said there would be none.

The Saturday statement touched only obliquely on the controversial Knowles situation.

spread discussion about the goals and needs of the American health-care system," Wilbur said. "This has centered on the approaches that may be advocated by the Nixon Administration and the leaders who may be appointed to develop and direct its plans in health affairs."

"The goal of all participants in these discussions has been basically the same: to assure provision of quality health care for all the American people on a constantly advancing basis."

"In a highly complex situation, much of the attention has been focused only on one or two of the many factors involved. All of the factors must be considered together and on a flexible basis, so changes can be made when desirable."

"This calls for close cooperation between the medical profession and the AMA with the new assistant secretary. We look forward to the opportunity to work with Dr. Egeberg and with all other segments of the health care field in this way to help assure the best health care system for the entire American public."

PRECISE MEASURE OF DISTANCE

Laser Beam Test to Answer Age-Old Doubts About Moon

By HERB SHANNON
Aerospace Editor

Shortly after the Apollo 11 astronauts make their scheduled lunar landing next month, scientists on earth will begin bombarding them with harmless laser beams in an experiment designed to answer age-old questions about the moon.

The beams will take the form of "pancake pulses" of high-power laser light 10 billionths of a second in duration. These will be fired from an Arizona mountaintop rangefinder telescope so precise it will be able to measure the relative distance to the moon within five feet.

The plused beams will take approximately 1.2 seconds to reach the moon at the speed of 186,000 miles per second, and the same length of time to bounce back to the source from a special reflector to be set up by the astronauts near their spacecraft.

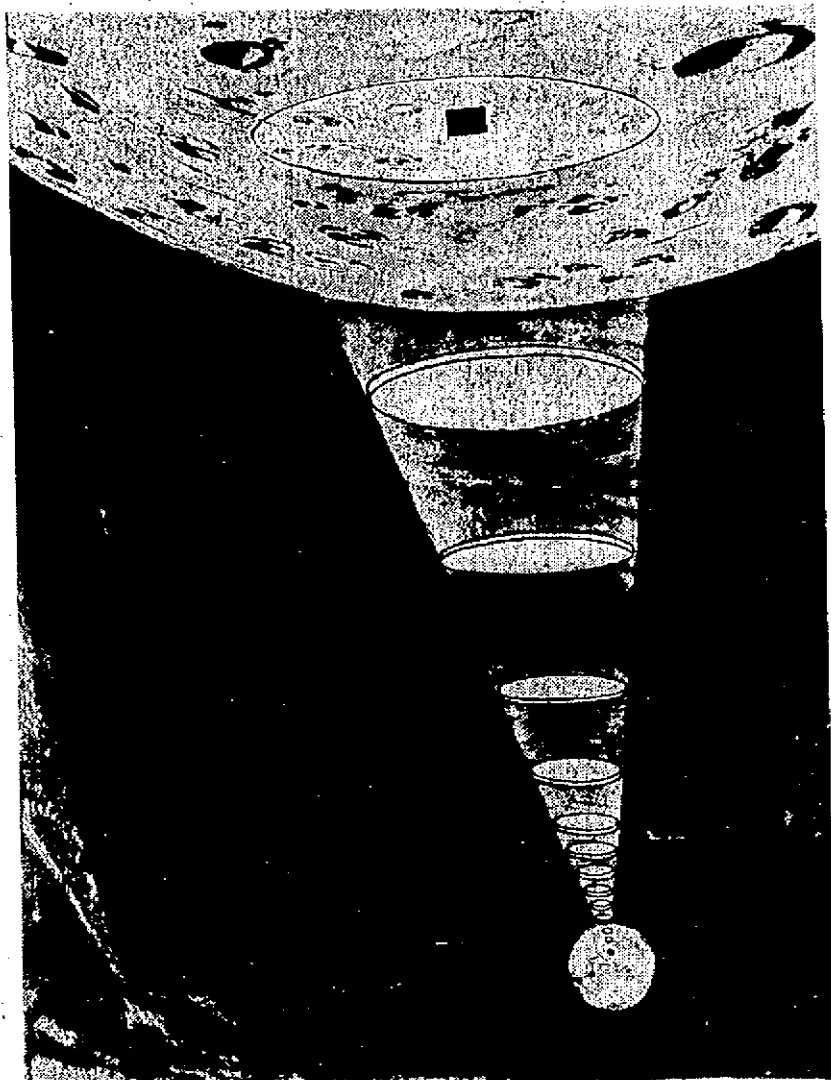

BY MEASURING the precise round-trip time with an atomic clock device, scientists will be able to compute the distance between the reflector and the telescope to within 1.5 meters, or a little less than five feet.

The range finder's amazing capability also will provide valuable information about the lunar orbit, the moon's size, its true shape and its libration, or rocking motion, according to Dr. Renne S. Julian, senior scientist at Hughes Aircraft Company in Culver City.

Analysis of the moon information in turn will provide data on the mass distribution of the earth and the movement of earth land masses, or continental drift, Dr. Julian pointed out.

HE SAID the high accuracy for the range finder, built by Hughes for the Air Force Cambridge Research Laboratories, stems from the extremely short pulse of the laser and the use of a cesium beam timing device, known commonly as an "atomic clock."

"If the laser pulse lasted for one second, the beam would be 186,000 miles long," he explained. "The laser turns on and off in the span of 10 na-noseconds, or 10 billionths of a second, forming a "squirt" of light only 10 feet long.

"This light segment will retain its original length as it travels toward the moon, but will gradually spread to a diameter of about 2½ miles when it reaches the lunar surface."

A tiny portion of the light will strike a two-square-foot reflector to be placed about 30 feet from the astronauts' landing craft and left there after they depart for further experiments.

THE RETRO-reflector is made up of an array of 100 high-quality quartz corner reflectors arranged like a checkerboard. Corner reflectors, Dr. Julian explained, are made up of three reflective surfaces arranged like the walls and floor of a corner of a room. A laser beam striking any of the surfaces is returned along the same path by which it arrived.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration reflector will be available for use by any country that has the capability and wishes to do so. Dr. Julian said Russia is believed to have an operating lunar range finder and France and other countries are at work on similar devices.

To find out how the earth's land masses are moving, he explained, measurements could be made from a site in the United States and a site in Russia or France at intervals of several years, and then be compared.

The range finder has been installed on a 60-inch telescope in the Catalina Mountains near Tucson, Ariz. It will be operated by Air Force and University of Arizona scientists.

Astronaut Raises 'Moon Dust' Starvation Cause for 2 Deaths in Lunar-Landing Rehearsal

HAMPTON, Va. (UPI) — Astronaut Edwin E. Aldrin ran through rehearsals Saturday for his epic lunar landing attempt scheduled for July 20.

Aldrin piloted a simulated lunar landing module through a 250-foot high structure at Langley Air Force Base near here.

He made three series of landings on the simulated lunar surface, with the engines of the lunar module kicking up simulated "moon dust."

Aldrin began his landing practice shortly before 1 p.m. after a series of delays postponed the flight some 18 hours.

The exercise took place in the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's lunar-landing research facility, which measures 250 feet high, 400 feet long and is approximately 43 feet wide.

Aldrin made the first two series of approaches and landings without the aid of the simulated lunar module's engines, and the third with the engines roaring.

The 12,000 pound vehicle was suspended from the top of the structure by cables designed to carry five sixths of the module's weight, which could let Aldrin manipulate the ship in conditions similar to the moon's gravity.

The tests were originally scheduled to be held Friday night in order to simulate nighttime landing on the moon. A NASA spokesman said the tests were held in daylight because "any flying is better than none."

Utah Migrant Council Reveals Navajo Plight

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — An official of the Utah Migrant Council said Saturday two infants of migrant workers have died in Utah of malnutrition. The report was denied by the office of Gov. Calvin L. Rampton.

Arthur Estrada, executive director of the council, said one of the children was the 9-month-old son of a Navajo family that migrated to Utah with an estimated 500 other families anticipating employment as cherry harvesters.

However, torrential June rains have nearly destroyed this year's crop and left 2,500 to 3,500 migrants without employment, Estrada said.

ACCORDING to Estrada, the other death, an unidentified child, occurred in Weber County. His information, he said, came from his staff workers in the field.

"These people are living in migrant camps — in houses without heat or insulation — and are doing without food or blankets."

"They stay wherever they can find a place to live," Estrada said. "Many are huddled in one room because of the low temperatures we've been having. We need as much help as we can get."

The governor's press secretary denied earlier reports that migrant children had died. However, a later statement acknowledged the deaths but not the cause.

OUT OF THE FRYING PAN....

Handcuff Trouble Leads to Jail

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A 49-year-old Los Angeles woman accidentally locked herself in a pair of handcuffs Saturday.

But when police arrived to help her out, they discovered she had a nearly three-year-old arrest warrant outstanding for her and they took her into custody.

Mrs. Beatrice Hancock

called the police to report that her 12-year-old son had found a pair of handcuffs in the street and she had put both of them on her left wrist and had inadvertently locked them.

While a pair of officers were helping her out of the predicament, a quick check of police records showed that Mrs. Hancock had a bench warrant outstanding for her for failure to appear for sentencing Oct. 11, 1966, on an assault with deadly weapon conviction.

The woman was taken into custody and will appear in court Monday.

COOL CAT GOES FREE

CHATTAHOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Nat Willis sauntered into City Court here Saturday to face a charge of public drunkenness blowing some New Orleans blues on his harmonica.

Judge Bennie Harris was impressed and asked for more. Willis encored with "Got Me Dizzy" and "Scratch My Back."

The judge was so pleased he told Willis, "go home and take everybody else with you," dropping drunkenness charges filed against Willis and 24 others.

Southland Employment Hits New High Point

Employment records in seven Southern California counties were broken in May for the fifth consecutive month.

According to figures compiled by the economic research department of Security Pacific National Bank, May employment was estimated at 4,582,900, up from the previous record of 4,578,000 in April.

The increase over May 1968 was listed as 3 per cent for the seven counties, 3.4 per cent for the state and 1.8 per cent for the nation.

May unemployment ratios remained at 3.5 per cent nationally, 4.2 per cent for California and 3.9 per cent for both Southern California and Los Angeles County.

Other counties used in the compilation were Orange, Riverside, San Bernardino, San Diego, Santa Barbara and Ventura.

Berkeley Barb Staff to Purchase Paper

BERKELEY (AP) — The staff of the Berkeley Barb is organizing a corporation to buy the underground weekly paper from founder Max Scherr for a reported price of $104,000.

Scherr, 53-year-old rebel journalist who started the Barb in 1965, said some contract details remain to be worked but that the deal is all but final.

Caltech to Study Rocks Taken From the Moon

PASADENA (AP) — Caltech scientists said Saturday they hope to learn, by studying pieces of the moon returned by Apollo 11 astronauts, how it evolved in relation to Earth and the solar system.

Six Caltech experts will be members of a team of 140 analyzing samples.

By using special equipment in dust-free rooms, they hope to learn the age and trace the history of the moon and also determine the temperature to which moon minerals were formed; learn about interaction between lunar rocks and any water that once existed; check the abundance of certain minerals.

PRECISE MEASURE OF DISTANCE

Laser Beam Test to Answer Age-Old Doubts About Moon

By HERB SHANNON
Aerospace Editor

Shortly after the Apollo 11 astronauts make their scheduled lunar landing next month, scientists on earth will begin bombarding them with harmless laser beams in an experiment designed to answer age-old questions about the moon.

The beams will take the form of "pancake pulses" of high-power laser light 10 billionths of a second in duration. These will be fired from an Arizona mountaintop range finder telescope so precise it will be able to measure the relative distance to the moon within five feet.

The pulsed beams will take approximately 1.2 seconds to reach the moon at the speed of 186,000 miles per second, and the same length of time to bounce back to the source from a special reflector to be set up by the astronauts near their spacecraft.

By measuring the precise round-trip time with an atomic clock device, scientists will be able to compute the distance between the reflector and the telescope to within 1.5 meters, or a little less than five feet.

The range finder's amazing capability also will provide valuable information about the lunar orbit, the moon's size, its true shape and its libration, or rocking motion, according to Dr. Rene S. Julian, senior scientist at Hughes Aircraft Company in Culver City.

Analysis of the moon information in turn will provide data on the mass distribution of the earth and the movement of earth land masses, or continental drift, Dr. Julian pointed out.

HE SAID the high accuracy for the range finder, built by Hughes for the Air Force Cambridge Research Laboratories, stems from the extremely short pulse of the laser and the use of a cesium beam timing device, known commonly as an "atomic clock."

"If the laser pulse lasted for one second, the beam would be 186,000 miles long," he explained. "The laser turns on and off in the span of 10 nanoseconds, or 10 billionths of a second, forming a 'squint' of light only 10 feet long."

Caltech to Study Rocks Taken From the Moon

PASADENA (AP) — Caltech scientists said Saturday they hope to learn by studying pieces of the moon returned by Apollo 11 astronauts, how it evolved in relation to Earth and the solar system.

Six Caltech experts will be members of a team of 140 analyzing samples.

By using special equipment in dust-free rooms, they hope to learn the age and trace the history of the moon and also determine the temperature to which moon minerals were formed; learn about interaction between lunar rocks and any water that once existed; check the abundance of certain minerals.

GIANT PANCAKES of laser light, two and a half miles wide and 10 feet thick, will be squirted at the Apollo 11 moon-landing site by a laser range-finder in a scientific experiment to measure the precise distance between Earth and moon. A reflector, to be placed on the moon by the astronauts, will return part of the light to the Earth where an "atomic clock" timing device will measure the light's round-trip travel time and compute the distance to within one and a half meters.

The retro-reflector is made up of an array of 100 high-quality quartz corner reflectors arranged like a checkerboard. Corner reflectors, Dr. Julian explained, are made up of three reflective surfaces arranged like the walls and floor of a corner of a room. A laser beam striking any of the surfaces is returned along the same path by which it arrived.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration reflector will be available for use by any country that has the capability and wishes to do so. Dr. Julian said Russia is believed to have an operating lunar range finder and France and other countries are at work on similar devices.

To find out how the earth's land masses are moving, he explained, measurements could be made from a site in the United States and a site in Russia or France at intervals of several years, and then be compared.

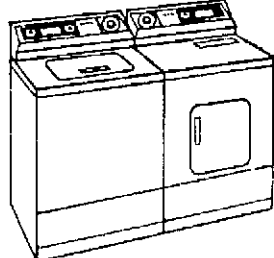

The range finder has been installed on a 60-inch telescope in the Catalina Mountains near Tucson, Ariz. It will be operated by Air Force and University of Arizona scientists.

Astronaut Raises 'Moon Dust' Starvation in Lunar-Landing Rehearsal

HAMPTON, Va. (UPI) — Astronaut Edwin E. Aldrin ran through rehearsals Saturday for his epic lunar landing attempt scheduled for July 20.

Aldrin piloted a simulated lunar landing module through a 250-foot high structure at Langley Air Force Base near here.

He made three series of landings on the simulated lunar surface, with the engines of the lunar module kicking up simulated "moon dust."

Aldrin began his landing practice shortly before 1 p.m. after a series of delays postponed the flight some 18 hours.

The exercise took place in the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's lunar-landing research facility, which measures 250 feet high, 400 feet long and is approximately 43 feet wide.

Aldrin made the first two series of approaches and landings without the aid of the simulated lunar module's engines, and the third with the engines roaring.

The 12,000 pound vehicle was suspended from the top of the structure by cables designed to carry five sixths of the module's weight, which could let Aldrin manipulate the ship in conditions similar to the moon's gravity.

OUT OF THE FRYING PAN....

Handcuff Trouble Leads to Jail

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A 49-year-old Los Angeles woman accidentally locked herself in a pair of handcuffs Saturday.

But when police arrived to help her out, they discovered she had a nearly three-year-old arrest warrant outstanding for her and they took her into custody.

Mrs. Beatrice Hancock

called the police to report that her 12-year-old son had found a pair of handcuffs in the street and she had put both of them on her left wrist and had inadvertently locked them.

While a pair of officers were helping her out of the predicament, a quick check of police records showed that Mrs. Hancock had a bench warrant outstanding for her for failure to appear for sentencing Oct. 11, 1966, on an assault with deadly weapon conviction.

The woman was taken into custody and will appear in court Monday.

COOL CAT GOES FREE

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Nat Willis sauntered into City Court here Saturday to face a charge of public drunkenness blowing some New Orleans blues on his harmonica.

Judge Bennie Harris was impressed and asked for more. Willis encored with "Got Me Dizzy" and "Scratch My Back."

The judge was so pleased he told Willis, "go home and take everybody else with you," dropping drunkenness charges filed against Willis and 24 others.

Starvation Cause for 2 Deaths

Utah Migrant Council Reveals Navajo Plight

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — An official of the Utah Migrant Council said Saturday two infants of migrant workers have died in Utah of malnutrition. The report was denied by the office of Gov. Calvin L. Rampton.

Arthur Estrada, executive director of the council, said one of the children was the 9-month-old son of a Navajo family that migrated to Utah with an estimated 500 other families anticipating employment as cherry harvesters.

However, torrential June rains have nearly destroyed this year's crop and left 2,500 to 3,500 migrants without employment, Estrada said.

According to Estrada, the other death, an unidentified child, occurred in Weber County. His information, he said, came from his staff workers in the field.

"These people are living in migrant camps — in houses without heat or insulation — and are doing without food or blankets."

"They stay wherever they can find a place to live," Estrada said. "Many are huddled in one room because of the low temperatures we've been having. We need as much help as we can get."

The governor's press secretary denied earlier reports that migrant children had died. However, a later statement acknowledged the deaths but not the cause.

In the last two articles we explained that fine jade is green jadeite from Burma, that jadeite could be white, pink, purple or any other color but the most valuable color is green. Taiwan Jade and Nephrite are other forms of a green-colored stone that closely resembles green jade but is relatively inexpensive and quite attractive in jewelry.

There is one other stone that closely resembles green jadeite. In fact, when you are in the Orient, you will see this stone quite often. You probably would not be able to detect any difference between the green color of this stone and the very fine "apple-honey" color of green jadeite.

This stone is CHRYSOPRASE, the most sought after of all chalcidionites. It is mined in Australia and in that country, is known as the Jade of Australia. It is found in the province of Queensland and mined from a mountain range. The various shades of green color produced from this mountain are the result of the location of the rough stone in relationship to the sun. The more exposure to the sun, the lighter and more translucent the stone. It is marketed in this country under the trade-name "Queensland Jade". It is a natural stone, not dyed or treated like Taiwan Jade and Nephrite sometimes are.

Queensland Jade is a bright green color, ideal in any ring, pendant, earring, or other item of jewelry. When carved, it is truly exquisite and almost impossible to detect the difference between Queensland Jade and the Jadeite of Burma.

No Swap Meets Wanted in L.B.

By TONY CILLO
Staff Writer

"We've never had a swap meet in Long Beach, and we don't want one," say Long Beach police.

Why? "It's the most beautiful operation for stolen property you can find," said Sgt. W. W. Bertz, of the city police department's bunco-fraud detail.

Not that everybody who sells at a swap meet is a crook, he emphasizes. And not that all goods sold at swap meets are stolen.

But swap meets are an "open opportunity" for the "fence" — a person who disposes of stolen property — said Bertz. Today's swap meets have departed from the days when a person toted an unwanted television set someplace to bargain with someone trying to dispose of another item. Nowadays, they are mainly places for "sales" of items, new and used.

While professionally-operated swap meets are not near to the hearts of city officials and police, some seemingly related activities, such as rummage sales, are more readily acceptable because they are operated for charitable purposes.

Still, there is no ordinance which specifically bans swap meets. There is something which may be tougher to deal with: a complicated set of requirements which must be met before a license or permission is granted.

According to the city license bureau, there are only two types of zones in which a swap meet could be held in the first place: commercial and manufacturing.

Were a swap meet to be held in an area zoned for commercial use, requirements would be a building and inspections by the city building and safety department and by the city fire department. Among items checked are adequate parking, adequate exits and adequate toilet facilities.

If a swap meet were to be held in an area zoned for manufacturing use and outside a building, there still are required toilet facilities for employees and the same building-safety and fire departments inspections.

Also required are licenses. The person who would operate the swap meet must obtain a second-hand dealer's license at $40. All those who would sell at the swap meet would be required to obtain the same $40 license. Excepted are those who would deal only in new items. They would be required to obtain a $30 retail license.

And each person involved must obtain a police department clearance.

Sgt. Bertz noted the licensing procedure and clearances are for the public protection. He said the police clearance requirement provides a "check and balance," just in case some information were overlooked in interviews up to then.

During recent days, the ban on swap meets in the city tossed one group into a quandary. The Boosters Club of St. Anthony Boy's High School has been planning what is billed as the "first giant Long Beach-Lakewood Swap Meet Flea Market and Family Fiesta."

The event was set for July 13 on a lot at the corner of Del Amo Boulevard and Clark Street, and it was to be the first of monthly events.

Originally, the location was believed to be in Lakewood. But then city officials learned it is just within city limits.

Would-be operators of the affair, hoping to begin monthly events to raise funds for the school with volunteer workers, were "up in the air" for a while. But later they received indication they would likely be able to proceed, as a charitable organization, but with a label other than "swap meet" for the event.

East Swelters Under Scorching Sun as Rains Drench Interior

Associated Press

Temperatures boiled up to record levels in some sections of the East Saturday while storms broke out again over the nation's broad interior.

Baltimore's 98 and New York City's 95 set high marks for June 28 and Washington's 99 tied the record.

The week-long series of storms kept going in the plains and prairie regions.

WINDS UP to 80 mph swept through Carroll, Iowa. Gusts up to 70 mph buffeted Omaha. And almost an inch of rain drenched Sioux City, Iowa, in an hour.

The Cedar River, swollen from midweek downpours, overflowed its banks in Cedar Falls and Waterloo in Iowa. More than 400 residents of Cedar Falls were under an evacuation alert.

Heat broiled much of the rest of the country. The thermometer registered 102 early in the afternoon in Garden City, Kan., and soared to 106 at the Atlantic City, N.J. Airport but later eased down to 80 under the influence of a sea breeze.

Readings in the 90s were common in the East, South and Southwest.

THE 2 P.M. temperatures and conditions included: Boston 89 thunderstorm, New York City 92 partly cloudy, Philadel-

Draft End Depends on U.S. Commitments—Laird

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird Saturday told a presidential commission charged with developing a plan to end the draft that conversion of the military into an all-volunteer force would depend partly on whether there are other Vietnam-type involvements.

The commission on an all-volunteer armed force, headed by former Secretary of Defense Thomas Gates Jr., received the first of two days of briefings by military officials at the Pentagon.

In welcoming members to the nerve center of the nation's military establishment, Laird said:

"I can think of no studies initiated by the present administration which have more profound implications for the future of our armed services or for the young men of this country."

He said the defense department shares "enthusiastically" the goal of making military service careers so attractive that we will be able to maintain our future military forces on a completely voluntary basis.

But he cautioned:

"I know that President Nixon in his guidance to you and in other recent public statements on this subject recognized that attainment of an all volunteer force will depend to some extent upon factors which none of us here can fully anticipate or control — namely the extent and nature of future commitments in Southeast Asia and elsewhere."

The 15-member commission was appointed March 27 by President Nixon to develop a plan for ending the draft, determine what standby machinery would be necessary in the event of a national emergency, and what the requirements for an adequate reserve forces program.

Mayor Vows to Challenge Hippie Election Bid

SAND CITY (UPI) — A millionaire construction boss who runs his own seaside town from the mayor's office said Saturday he'll challenge the legality of what he called a "hippie" attempt to oust his city council.

"Who's behind it? Hard narcotics," said Phil Calabrese, mayor of this Monterey county community of 500 persons which he said is the target of a takeover attempt by a colony of hippies.

"Quite a few Peace and Freedom Party people have come down here, I don't know how many," Calabrese said over his radio-telephone from a construction site. "But you have to challenge these people. Legally I don't think they can do it, but hippies think they can do anything they want. There is no question in my mind that I'll challenge this election."

Calabrese referred to the recall election scheduled for Aug. 19 which was set after his opposition got enough signatures on a petition. Five men, including a self-styled hippie potter and a Peace and Freedom Party member, officially filed as candidates for election to the city council.

Calabrese's opponents conducted a last minute campaign Thursday to swell the voter registration rolls in a town where only 98 people were registered as of last February. Thursday was the deadline for new registrations.

City Clerk Mrs. Theresa Hawks said "hippies and Peace and Freedom People moved in and registered like mad, specifically for this election."

The latest count Friday showed 151 persons qualified to vote, but Mrs. Hawks estimated the final tally will be 175 to 200.

Calabrese's opponents denied it was a "hippie" movement or that the Peace and Freedom Party was closely involved. "The party offered to let us use their ditto machine and their hall, but that's all," one said.

Calabrese left no doubt about his distaste for his chief opponent, the 40-year-old potter Robert Lynn.

Another man on the opposition slate, Brady Avery, a member of the Peace and Freedom Party, said "we don't anticipate any type of roughness or harassment, nothing big. It'll be a clean, fair, legal fight, and I would like to say we hope to come out with the biggest majority."

With Lynn and Avery in the election campaign are H. Roy Van Slyke, an auto body worker; Dewey L. Kennedy, a service station owner; and Jerry D. King, an auto mechanic.

Avery, a Negro, has charged Calabrese with racial discrimination for ordering "no parking" signs installed outside his auto repair shop. Avery also claims the city government has ordered at least 25 houses condemned or torn down in the past two years without any attempt to relocate the residents. And, Avery said, Calabrese's company got all the demolition business.

No Swap Meets Wanted in L.B.

By TONY CILLO
Staff Writer

"We've never had a swap meet in Long Beach, and we don't want one," say Long Beach police.

Why? "It's the most beautiful operation for stolen property you can find," said Sgt. W. W. Bertz, of the city police department's bunco-fraud detail.

Not that everybody who sells at a swap meet is a crook, he emphasizes. And not that all goods sold at swap meets are stolen.

But swap meets are an "open opportunity" for the "fence" — a person who disposes of stolen property — said Bertz.

Today's swap meets have departed from the days when a person toted an unwanted television set someplace to bargain with someone trying to dispose of another item. Nowadays, they are mainly places for "sales" of items, new and used.

While professionally-operated swap meets are not near to the hearts of city officials and police, some seemingly related activities, such as rummage sales, are more readily acceptable because they are operated for charitable purposes.

Still, there is no ordinance which specifically bans swap meets. There is something which may be tougher to deal with: a complicated set of requirements which must be met before a license or permission is granted.

According to the city license bureau, there are only two types of zones in which a swap meet could be held in the first place: commercial and manufacturing.

Were a swap meet to be held in an area zoned for commercial use, requirements would be a building and inspections by the city building and safety department and by the city fire department. Among items checked are adequate parking, adequate exits and adequate toilet facilities.

If a swap meet were to be held in an area zoned for manufacturing use and outside a building, there still are required toilet facilities for employees and the same building-safety and fire departments inspections.

Also required are licenses. The person who would operate the swap meet must obtain a second-hand dealer's license at $40. All those who would sell at the swap meet would be required to obtain the same $40 license. Excepted are those who would deal only in new items. They would be required to obtain a $30 retail license.

And each person involved must obtain a police department clearance.

Sgt. Bertz noted the licensing procedure and clearances are for the public protection. He said the police clearance requirement provides a "check and balance" just in case some information were overlooked in interviews up to then.

During recent days, the ban on swap meets in the city tossed one group into a quandry. The Bonsters Club of St. Anthony Boy's High School has been planning what is billed as the "first giant Long Beach-Lakewood Swap Meet Flea Market and Family Fiesta."

The event was set for July 13 on a lot at the corner of Del Amo Boulevard and Clark Street, and it was to be the first of monthly events.

Originally, the location was believed to be in Lakewood. But then city officials learned it is just within city limits.

Would-be operators of the affair, hoping to begin monthly events to raise funds for the school with volunteer workers, were "up in the air" for a while. But later they received indication they would likely be able to proceed, as a charitable organization, but with a label other than "swap meet" for the event.

Draft End Depends on U.S. Commitments—Laird

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird Saturday told a presidential commission charged with developing a plan to end the draft that conversion of the military into an all-volunteer force would depend partly on whether there are other Vietnam-type involvements.

The commission on an all-volunteer armed force, headed by former Secretary of Defense Thomas Gates Jr., received the first of two days of briefings by military officials at the Pentagon.

In welcoming members to the nerve center of the nation's military establishment, Laird said:

"I can think of no studies initiated by the present administration which have more profound implications for the future of our armed services or for the young men of this country."

He said the defense department shares "enthusiastically" the goal of making military service careers so attractive that we will be able to maintain our future military forces on a completely voluntary basis."

But he cautioned: "I know that President Nixon in his guidance to you and in other recent public statements on this subject recognized that attainment of an all-volunteer force will depend to some extent upon factors which none of us here can fully anticipate or control — namely the extent and nature of future commitments in Southeast Asia and elsewhere."

The 15-member commission was appointed March 27 by President Nixon to develop a plan for ending the draft, determine what standby machinery would be necessary in the event of a national emergency, and what the requirements for an adequate reserve forces program.

Mayor Vows to Challenge Hippie Election Bid

SAND CITY (UPI) — A millionaire construction boss who runs his own seaside town from the mayor's office said Saturday he'll challenge the legality of what he called a "hippie" attempt to oust his city council.

"Who's behind it? Hard narcotics," said Phil Calabrese, mayor of this Monterey county community of 500 persons which he said is the target of a takeover attempt by a colony of hippies.

"Quite a few Peace and Freedom Party people have come down here, I don't know how many," Calabrese said over his radio-telephone from a construction site. "But you have to challenge these people. Another man on the opposition slate, Brady Avery, a member of the Peace and Freedom Party, said "we don't anticipate any type of roughness or harassment, nothing big. It'll be a clean, fair, legal fight, and I would like to say we hope to come out with the biggest majority."

With Lynn and Avery in the election campaign are H. Roy Van Slyke, an auto body worker; Dewey L. Kennedy, a service station owner; and Jerry D. King, an auto mechanic.

Avery, a Negro, has

East Swelters Under Scorching Sun as Rains Drench Interior

Associated Press

Temperatures boiled up to record levels in some sections of the East Saturday while storms broke out again over the nation's broad interior.

Baltimore's 98 and New York City's 95 set high marks for June 28 and Washington's 99 tied the record.

The week-long series of storms kept going in the plains and prairie regions.

WINDS UP to 90 mph swept through Carroll, Iowa. Gusts up to 70 mph buffeted Omaha. And almost an inch of rain drenched Sioux City, Iowa, in an hour.

The Cedar River, swollen from midweek downpours, overflowed its banks in Cedar Falls and Waterloo in Iowa. More than 400 residents of Cedar Falls were under an evacuation alert.

Heat broiled much of the rest of the country. The thermometer registered 102 early in the afternoon in Garden City, Kan., and soared to 106 at the Atlantic City, N.J. Airport but later eased down to 90 under the influence of a sea breeze.

Readings in the 90s were common in the East, South and Southwest.

THE 2 P.M. temperatures and conditions included: Boston 89 thunderstorm, New York City 92 partly cloudy, Philadelphia 94 partly cloudy, Washington 99 partly cloudy, Miami 89 clear, Atlanta 95 clear, Detroit 85 clear, Chicago 85 clear, Minneapolis-St. Paul 67 cloudy, Kansas City 86 clear, Denver, 92 clear, Dallas 95 partly cloudy, Phoenix 97 clear, Los Angeles 70 clear, San Francisco 69 clear, Seattle 65 clear, Anchorage 60 clear, Honolulu 81 partly cloudy.

'Too Many Solutions' for Social Ills

By BILL HOMER
Staff Writer

The 1968 "Kerner Report" on civil disorders was "perhaps the most extensive short-term sociological study ever made" by the federal government, but it fell far short of its goal, Rep. Alphonso Bell, R-West Los Angeles, said Saturday.

REP. ALPHONSO BELL

Bell, who said he believes the report suggested too many solutions to America's racial and economic problems to become a practical document for dealing with the situation, spoke at the Intercom '69 program at Rolling Hills High School, Palos Verdes Peninsula.

"I believe we must now establish a few long-term priorities in our effort to right some of the social ills of our society," the Congressman told newsmen prior to his speech.

He said the riots report, officially known as the Report of the National Advisory Commission on Civil Disorders, tended to view American Negroes as holding virtually the same the law-maker said, "Think the report told the truth (about America's racial ills), but not the whole truth."

(The "Kerner Report" got its name because Illinois Governor Otto Kerner headed the riots committee, established by former President Johnson.)

Bell said the federal government has been hampered in efforts to properly finance an all-out attack on social problems because of the war in Vietnam, but forecast lengthy congressional deliberations on how to slice up the federal budget once the Southeast Asian conflict ends.

He said the federal government must set a few, long-term national priorities in its poverty war and that the lion's share of work toward curing America's social ills must be centered in urban areas, where the problem is most acute.

"THE PRIORITIES I am suggesting are such things as jobs and education," said Bell, who told the audience the federal government's antipoverty war is being hampered by bureaucracy.

He said presidential spokesmen report some $9,000 in federal, state and local funds is spent yearly on every family in America eligible for public assistance, but most of the money is bottled up by bureaucratic expenses and never reaches those whom poverty programs are trying to assist.

"The Kerner Commission suggests legislation on the federal level is the key to success, but it may be just the opposite," Bell said in calling for increased local programs.

"The closer the action gets to the cities — that's where the problem is — the more chance I believe there is for success," he said.

"Times are changing, but I believe they are getting better — not worse," Bell said.

The Intercom program, which also was held last year, is sponsored by the Peninsula Citizens Human Relations Council and provides a public forum on minority problems.

Hospital Talks Stall on Rehire

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — The second of two Charleston hospitals involved in a long and bitter strike refused Saturday to rehire all of its striking employees, a demand the workers said is essential to a settlement.

The refusal came from the Charleston County Council, governing authority for the County Hospital in a day-long session with representatives of the striking workers.

It had been hoped the session would produce a settlement similar to the one reached Friday at the larger Medical College of South Carolina Hospital, where rehiring of striking workers was one of the major issues.

Spokesmen for the two sides said another meeting will be held Monday, with telephone contacts maintained Sunday in the event of developments.

Mitchell Graham, chairman of the Charleston County Council, said the County Hospital could take back 35 of the striking workers immediately at last count there were 69 — and he offered to find jobs elsewhere for the others.

Both sides reported that the rehiring issue was the only matter blocking settlement.

Nuns Want Cannonball to Run On

ADRIAN, Mich. (AP) — About 50 nuns waited more than 45 minutes Saturday to stage a peaceful protest against management of the Norfolk & Western Railroad which seeks permission to discontinue the famed Wash Cannonball.

The nuns, members of the Sisters of St. Dominic, waited at the station here for the Cannonball, which was 45 minutes late in its run from Detroit to St. Louis. There were about 100 other persons waiting to watch the train in what will probably be one of its last runs. Four boarded for the trip south.

A decision on the railroad's request is expected from the Interstate Commerce Commission July 3. The railroad contends the service is unprofitable because of lack of passenger interest.

However the Dominican nuns, through their spokesman Sister Ann Joachin, have protested to the railroad, the ICC and the public. They contend the Cannonball is a major source of transportation for nuns traveling to and from the order's headquarters in Adrian. About 1,200 members of the teaching order fan out from the Dominican community each school year and return often for conferences, retreats and other matters.

Student Blows Self Up Over Bad Report Card

KREMS, Austria (AP) — A high school junior turned himself into a human bomb after getting a bad report card, police here said Saturday.

They said the body of Friedrich Wegl, 17, was found by a hunter in the Danube Woods near here, the day after report cards were issued in most East Austrian schools.

Police said on-the-spot checks showed he had killed himself Friday night with a grenade.

TOKYO (UPI) — Red China Saturday denounced a reported Soviet plan for a broad, Moscow-backed security alignment of Asian nations as an "anti-China alliance" and said it would never succeed.

In a New China news agency broadcast monitored in Tokyo, the Chinese said the proposal was merely a "tool for pushing further its (Soviet) social-imperialist policy of aggression and expansion in Asia."

According to diplomatic sources in London, the Kremlin wants the alignment to embrace the largest possible number of nations — from India to Ceylon and Mongolia. The Soviets reportedly envisage an alignment involving non-aggression pacts, mutual assistance, economic cooperation and an overall security pact with Soviet backing.

The Chinese broadcast said the "system of collective security" mentioned by Soviet Communist Party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev during the recent Communist summit meeting in Moscow was "something Russia picked up from the garbage heap" of the late U.S. Secretary of State John Foster Dulles.

"The so-called 'system of collective security in Asia' is actually an anti-China military alliance," the agency said.

"It is another unbridled step taken by Soviet revisionism in its collusion with U.S. imperialism in recent years to rig up an anti-China ring of encirclement and to make war clamors and threats against China."

Life Policy Taken Out 74 Years Ago Paid Off

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — An insurance company spent nine years looking for a survivor of policyholder Thomas Keenan.

A representative of the company handed a check for $645.94 to Keenan himself.

Keenan, now 104, had taken out the policy in 1895, making his wife the beneficiary. However, the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co. had lost track of him by the time the policy came due in 1960.

By then his wife, two brothers and three sisters—his only relatives had died.

The insurance company pressed its search early this week because the 10-year grace period — after which the money would have to be turned over to the state—would end in October. Its representative, Robert L. Martin, checked futilely through death records at the state health department, and finally found Keenan, still alert and walking around.

NAACP to Open Annual Convention in Mississippi

JACKSON, Miss. (UPI) — The 60th annual convention of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People begins in this Deep South state this week with housing, employment, education and other problems on the agenda.

Secretary George W. Romney of the Department of Housing and Urban Development, and Bishop Stephen G. Spotts-wood, chairman of the NAACP board of directors, are scheduled to speak during the six-day session opening Monday.

An estimated 2,000 delegates are expected, representing the organization's 452,000 members across the nation. The NAACP youth and college division, with an estimated 67,000 membership nationally, was to hold its own convention simultaneously.

China Denounces Russ 'Encirclement Pact'

TOKYO (UPI) — Red China Saturday denounced a reported Soviet plan for a broad, Moscow-backed security alignment of Asian nations as an "anti-China alliance" and said it would never succeed.

up from the garbage heap" of the late U.S. Secretary of State John Foster Dulles.

"The so-called 'system of collective security in Asia' is actually an anti-China military alliance," the agency said.

"It is another unbridled step taken by Soviet revisionism in its collusion with U.S. imperialism in recent years to rig up an anti-China ring of encirclement and to make war claims and threats against China."

"Since its intrusions into China's territory Chenpao Island (called Damansky Island by the Soviets) in March of this year, the Soviet revisionist renegade clique has dispatched more than 20 delegations . . . on merry-go-round trips and conspiratorial missions to countries and regions around China."

"Such feverish eagerness on the part of the Soviet revisionist renegades to establish 'collective security' shows precisely their feeling of extreme insecurity under the pounding of the storms of the peoples' revolution throughout the world."

'NOT ONE BAD PEOPLE'

Kindness Smooths Trip for 2 Young Europeans

By TOM WILLMAN Staff Writer

Two young European tourists, who reached New York friendless and with just $3, arrived in Long Beach last week — through an incredible combination of luck, determination and the good will of people all across America.

Hans Pelz, a two-time escapee from East Germany, and Bo Eklund, of Sweden, marvel at the "amazing" good fortune and kindness they encountered in gestures that communicate what their broken English cannot.

"We decided we would like to see how people are all like," the 23-year-old Swede said slowly. "Hans got an atlas in the mail from his mother," he added, "and when we saw the maps, we started thinking how about being there, or there — so we came."

THE ATLAS was a Christmas present, the only thing Hans' mother could send through the mail from East Germany.

Jailed once for an escape attempt that failed, the 30-year-old German tried again in 1959 and reached the safety of the West. He returned illegally in 1968 and smuggled his sister across the border on a train.

The travelers' luck began when Hans' employer, a boat manufacturer, outfitted them with camping equipment. But the $250 they left Sweden with was virtually gone by the time they reached New York.

Hitch-hiking to Albany, they asked to pitch their tent outside a hotel. But it was raining, and in a scene that occurred often in their travels, the proprietor gave them a room without charge.

"And we was the happiest boy in the whole world," laughed Bo.

In Cleveland, a man gave them $10 despite protests from the two. A ride with two young men to Omaha led to an invitation to party for an engaged couple.

"At the party, the girl asked us to stay for her wedding," said Bo, his disbelief obviously coming back. "They even gave us clothes to wear, and it was high society. The governor of Nebraska was there!"

IN PHOENIX, where they took temporary work on a man-made lake, the pair killed a rattlesnake. "I have his skin," said Hans proudly.

After a hike to the bottom of the Grand Canyon with a minister's family, the two reached Long Beach, and met with their best luck of the journey — advertising executive Bill Halpin, who befriended them on a whim.

"I had recently seen a government commercial on television that showed how an American made friends with two Mexicans," said Halpin, "and they looked lost."

So he hailed Hans and Bo on the street and took them home for a meal. He gave them clothing, found jobs for the pair at Rickett's Motors in Long Beach, and bought the tools Hans needed in his new work as a mechanic.

"He only knew us for a few minutes," chuckled Bo, "and he brings us home and asks his wife to meet his friends from Sweden."

The two are still Halpin's guests at 123 Loreta Walk, but he is helping them search for an apartment.

"WE DIDN'T ASK for anything," Bo stated. "We said to ourselves before we left Sweden, that even if we are hungry we don't take anything."

Hans, coupling gestures with rapid English and German phrases, made it plain, too, that he would rather "wash dishes with the women" than accept charity.

The pair will remain in Long Beach "for maybe half a year — as long as we enjoy it," according to Bo, and then start for Uppsala, Sweden via Hawaii, Japan and the Middle East.

When they leave, they will take with them the memory of all the charitable acts they never sought. "We didn't meet one bad people in all the U.S. — only the rattlesnake," smiled Bo.

"We think of them all," he said. "Every favor was a big favor."

MARTINEZ (AP) — Shock rippled through the Oakland suburbs of Piedmont and Danville Saturday after authorities said a "sweet and motherly" housekeeper is really Winnie Ruth Judd, Arizona trunk murderer of the Depression days.

A woman known as Marian Lane, Contra Costa County Sheriff Walter Young said Friday, has been identified through fingerprints as the "tiger woman" who disappeared from the Arizona State Mental Hospital in Phoenix in 1962.

Mrs. Judd was declared insane in 1933 after she was convicted in the 1931 fatal shootings of her two girl friends, Agnes Anne LeRoi and Hedvig Samuelson. Their bodies turned up in trunks at a Los Angeles railroad station. Miss Samuelson's body had been dismembered.

"I don't know what this is about," the plump, auburn-haired woman remarked as she was booked Friday.

Wearing glasses but looking 10 years younger than Mrs. Judd's 64 years, the woman refused to leave behind two poodles when she was taken into custody at Danville. Later, deputies turned the poodles over to friends.

"I don't believe it," exclaimed Mrs. Robert E. Palmon of Piedmont, where Marian Lane was a housekeeper five years for the late Mrs. Henry D. Nichols.

"It couldn't be her," added Mrs. Palmon. "She was wonderful. She used to babysit with my 12-year-old."

"We all liked her very much," said another neighbor, Dr. Albert H. Rowe, 79. "When Mrs. Nichols had a stroke about two years ago, Mrs. Lane took the very best care of her."

"I used to ride around with her in the car," said Clara Perrin, Dr. Rowe's cook. "You mean she's a murderer?"

"She was a wonderful friend and a very good housekeeper," said Mrs. Nichols' son, Herman, 38. "I just can't believe this."

The sheriff's office reported Mrs. Judd was quiet and friendly, still maintaining that she was not the woman who was recaptured in six escape tries before 1962.

Paper Gold Hangs on Nixon Economy

PARIS (AP) — Success or failure of President Nixon's drive to stop inflation will determine how fast the rest of the non-Communist world will go in creating the "paper gold" that may some day replace metal in the nations' treasuries.

Talks in Paris which started this weekend will continue all summer on how big the first issue of paper gold should be. A decision is due toward the end of September, at the annual Washington meeting of the International Monetary Fund.

Gold reserves outside the Communist countries amounted to $40.89 billion last year, $715 million less than the year before. New gold has been going into private hoards, and into industrial uses.

At the same time, world trade has been increasing quickly. Imports in the non-Communist world totaled nearly $23 billion more last year than in 1967.

Advocates of paper gold argue that new resources are needed to finance this trade, resources not dependent on the gold sales of the Soviet or South African governments. Paper gold, they point out, can be created as needed. They warn that if it is not, the cost of borrowing money — interest rates — may be kept so high that world exchange of goods will be discouraged.

A drop in world trade would reverse the trend since World War II toward closer ties among nations and an increased choice of goods for their consumers.

In recent years, new money has been pumped into the world system, because the United States has been spending more abroad than it was taking in. Britain has been doing the same. Other countries added the extra money to their reserves and used it in the form of Euro-dollars for more trade and investment.

If President Nixon succeeds in keeping U.S. prices down, Americans will be buying less abroad and selling more. Other countries will not be getting so many extra dollars. New money will be needed.

Planning for this, American experts are reported to have suggested the creation of as much as $8 billion a year in paper gold. Other countries, especially those with comfortable surpluses in their reserves, want to move more slowly. They are skeptical about the U.S. ability to control inflation.

West Germany, Japan and Italy are the major surplus countries. Oddly enough, they also are the major defeated enemies of the U.S. and Britain in World War II. Due in part to U.S. aid and the fact that they were not allowed to spend much money on military forces in the immediate postwar years, they have become more prosperous than they ever were at the peak of their efforts to conquer the world.

Official discussion of figures for an issue of paper gold took place for the first time Saturday at a meeting of the "Group of 10," where the most powerful financial nations try to agree on monetary issues. The range of figures mentioned was from $1 to $4.5 billion a year.

Israel, Egyptian Guns Duel Across the Suez

United Press International

Egyptian anti-aircraft guns shot down an Israeli spotter plane Saturday during a four-hour artillery and mortar battle across the Suez Canal, an Egyptian military spokesman said.

Elsewhere, Israeli and Jordanian troops exchanged gunfire across their frontier, and Arab guerrilla bombs damaged an Israeli water reservoir near Lebanon and an army truck in the canal sector.

The firing across the canal was centered in the El Kantara and El Balah sector of the waterway, Egypt said. There were no reports of casualties.

An Israeli military spokesman said three soldiers were wounded by the explosion that damaged the truck north of the Bitter Lakes in the occupied Sinai Peninsula. There were no injuries, he said, in the explosion Friday night at the Zarit Kibbutz reservoir on the Lebanon border.

A Jordanian military spokesman said Israeli troops hit the Al-Adassiyah area three miles south of the Sea of Galilee with tank and machinegun fire Saturday, damaging a Jordanian vehicle and scattering workers repairing a canal damaged by Israeli fire earlier in the week. He said Jordanian troops returned the fire, and there were no casualties in the 25-minute battle.

'Good Samaritan' Convinced Them They Should Stay Here

'NOT ONE BAD PEOPLE'

Kindness Smooths Trip for 2 Young Europeans

By TOM WILLMAN
Staff Writer

Two young European tourists, who reached New York friendless and with just $3, arrived in Long Beach last week — through an incredible combination of luck, determination and the good will of people all across America.

Hans Pelz, a two-time escapee from East Germany, and Bo Eklund, of Sweden, marvel at the "amazing" good fortune and kindness they encountered in gestures that communicate what their broken English cannot.

"We decided we would like to see how people are all like," the 23-year-old Swede said slowly. "Hans got an atlas in the mail from his mother," he added, "and when we saw the maps, we started thinking 'how about being there, or there' — so we came."

THE ATLAS was a Christmas present, the only thing Hans' mother could send through the mail from East Germany.

Jailed once for an escape attempt that failed, the 30-year-old German tried again in 1959 and reached the safety of the West. He returned illegally in 1968 and smuggled his sister across the border on a train.

The travelers' luck began when Hans' employer, a boat manufacturer, outfitted them with camping equipment. But the $250 they left Sweden with was virtually gone by the time they reached New York.

Hitch-hiking to Albany, they asked to pitch their tent outside a hotel. But it was raining, and in a scene that occurred often in their travels, the proprietor gave them a room without charge.

"And we was the happiest boy in the whole world," laughed Bo.

In Cleveland, a man gave them $10 despite protests from the two. A ride with two young men to Omaha led to an invitation to party for an engaged couple.

"At the party, the girl asked us to stay for her wedding," said Bo, his disbelief obviously coming back. "They even gave us clothes to wear, and it was high society. The governor of Nebraska was there!"

IN PHOENIX, where they took temporary work on a man-made lake, the pair killed a rattlesnake. "I have his skin," said Hans proudly.

After a hike to the bottom of the Grand Canyon with a minister's family, the two reached Long Beach, and met with their best luck of the journey — advertising executive Bill Halpin, who befriended them on a whim.

"I had recently seen a government commercial on television that showed how an American made friends with two Mexicans," said Halpin, "and they looked lost."

So he hailed Hans and Bo on the street and took them home for a meal. He gave them clothing, found jobs for the pair at Rickelt's Motors in Long Beach, and bought the tools Hans needed in his new work as a mechanic.

"He only knew us for a few minutes," chuckled Bo, "and he brings us home and asks his wife to meet his friends from Sweden."

The two are still Halpin's guests at 123 Loreta Walk, but he is helping them search for an apartment.

"WE DIDN'T ASK for anything," Bo stated. "We said to ourselves before we left Sweden that even if we are hungry we don't take anything."

Hans, coupling gestures with rapid English and German phrases, made it plain, too, that he would rather "wash dishes with the women" than accept charity.

The pair will remain in Long Beach "for maybe half a year — as long as we enjoy it," according to Bo, and then start for Uppsala, Sweden via Hawaii, Japan and the Middle East.

When they leave, they will take with them the memory of all the charitable acts they never sought. "We didn't meet one bad people in all the U.S. — only the rattlesnake," smiled Bo.

"We thank of them all," he said. "Every favor was a big favor."

WINNIE RUTH'S RECAPTURE SHOCKS SUBURBS

MARTINEZ (AP) — Shock rippled through the Oakland suburbs of Piedmont and Danville Saturday after authorities said a "sweet and motherly" housekeeper is really Winnie Ruth Judd, Arizona trunk murderer of the Depression days.

A woman known as Marian Lane, Contra Costa County Sheriff Walter Young said Friday, has been identified through fingerprints as the "tiger woman" who disappeared from the Arizona State Mental Hospital in Phoenix in 1962.

Mrs. Judd was declared insane in 1933 after she was convicted in the 1931 fatal shootings of her two girl friends, Agnes Anne LeRoi and Hedvig Samuelson. Their bodies turned up in trunks at a Los Angeles railroad station. Miss Samuelson's body had been dismembered.

"I don't know what this is about," the plump, Auburn-haired woman remarked as she was booked Friday.

Wearing glasses but looking 10 years younger than Mrs. Judd's 64 years, the woman refused to leave behind two poodles when she was taken into custody at Danville. Later, deputies turned the poodles over to friends.

"I don't believe it," exclaimed Mrs. Robert E. Patmont of Piedmont, where Marian Lane was a housekeeper five years for the late Mrs. Henry D. Nichols.

"It couldn't be her," added Mrs. Patmont. "She was wonderful. She used to babysit with my 2-year-old."

"We all liked her very much," said another neighbor, Dr. Albert H. Rowe, 79. "When Mrs. Nichols had a stroke about two years ago, Mrs. Lane took the very best care of her."

"I used to ride around with her in the car," said Clara Perrin, Dr. Rowe's cook. "You mean she's a murderer?"

"She was a wonderful friend and a very good housekeeper," said Mrs. Nichols' son, Herman. "I just can't believe this."

The sheriff's office reported Mrs. Judd was quiet and friendly, still maintaining that she was not the woman who was recaptured in six escape tries before 1962.

Evans Testimony Shows Officers Did Their Best

MANILA (UPI) — The testimony of 78 witnesses has failed to bring out any evidence of willful wrongdoing on the part of the two young officers on the bridge of the U.S. destroyer Frank E. Evans when it collided with the Australian carrier Melbourne June 3.

Not a derogatory word was spoken of Lt. (j.g.) Ronald C. Ramsey or Lt. (j.g.) James A. Hopson during the three weeks of open sessions conducted by a six-man U.S.-Australian board of inquiry at the Subic Bay Naval Base, 90 miles north of Manila.

The board began reviewing testimony Saturday in preparation for writing its joint reports which will not be made public. Public hearings were suspended late Friday.

RAMSEY, 24, of Long Beach, the handsome Purdue University graduate who was the senior officer on the Evans bridge, refused to testify on constitutional grounds.

Hopson, 28, of Kansas City, Kan., a jut-jawed crew cut former enlisted man, was the junior officer on the bridge but testified he plotted the maneuver which placed the Evans and the Melbourne on a collision course.

Ramsey's refusal to testify left several questions unanswered.

They included why Hopson turned the ship toward instead of away from the carrier when changing station, why he used the wrong base course and speed for his maneuver, why Evans captain Cmdr. Albert S. McLeMORE, 40, of Vallejo, was not called to the bridge and why Ramsey ordered the final sharp right turn which spun the 2,200-ton destroyer back across the path of the 20,000-ton carrier.

The Evans was cut in half and 74 lives were lost, most of them in the ship's sunken forward section.

Ramsey refused to testify on the advice of his counsel, Lt. Fredric F. Tilton, 27, of Mariemont, Ohio, after the board said it had no authority to allow Tilton to examine testimony or to recall and cross examine witnesses.

TILTON, a thin intense officer, said he hoped his "Australian friends" and "all Americans" would understand.

Some did not, because the board has no powers to punish or to recommend legal action. Its report will be of "facts and opinions" submitted to the commander of the U.S.

NEW DELHI (UPI) — A student shot by police Friday during a mob attack on a train at Hindaun in Rajasthan state died in a hospital Saturday. Nine other students were wounded by police bullets in the attack, reportedly made to dramatize their demands that a local school be upgraded to a higher educational level.

Seventh Fleet and the Australian naval headquarters.

Hopson and Ramsey were warned they were "suspected" of negligence in the collision, a requirement under the U.S. uniform code of military justice.

Should they later be charged and convicted of "negligently hazarding a vessel of the armed forces" they could be sentenced to two years at hard labor and drummed out of the service.

TESTIMONY over the three-week period makes it seem unlikely they will ever face a court martial although stern reprimands may be in order.

Whatever Hopson did, he appeared to have done it honestly.

He seemed genuinely puzzled as to why his maneuver had placed his ship on a collision course during his three appearances before the board.

Ramsey's apparent responsibility was in not checking Hopson's proposed course change and then in being slow to come up with the proper order to avoid the collision.

3 Nabbed in Plot to Bomb Prince

CAERNARVON, Wales (AP) — Three young Welshmen were held in an alleged bomb plot Saturday and police mounted a vast security operation to protect Prince Charles, heir to the British throne.

Security officials, worried that an attempt on Charles' life will be made at his investiture as Prince of Wales at Caernarvon Castle Tuesday, indicated that more plots are suspected.

The three arrests were made at nearby Holyhead, where a time bomb was found last Tuesday near a tablet commemorating the 20-year-old prince's first visit to Wales 10 years ago. The bomb had been planted on a pier only 10 yards from where Charles will meet the royal yacht after the investiture.

The three men, municipal government employees, were all named Jones, though not related — Dewi, 26; Glyn, 22, and John Allan, 20.

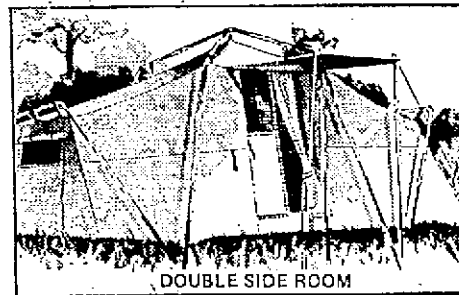

They were charged with conspiring together and with other persons unknown "to cause explosions of a nature likely to endanger life or to cause serious injury."

902 CITIES ELIGIBLE FOR 'SLUMP' AID

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A total of 902 communities, apparently bypassed by the national business boom, will be eligible for depressed areas aid funds during the government business year beginning Tuesday, the Commerce Department announced Saturday.

The department's Economic Development Administration said 73 areas improved their economies enough to be removed from the list as a result of the annual review of the program. But increasing local unemployment added 70 other communities to the program.

Communities with persistent unemployment over

6 per cent or with median family incomes less than 40 per cent of the national median are eligible for public works grants and loans and business development loans.

The administration said only four major cities, Newark, N.J., Oakland, Calif., Cleveland and Washington, D.C., will be eligible for aid during the next 12 months. Parts of three other cities, the stockyards areas of Chicago and Omaha, Neb., and the area surrounding the Brooklyn Navy Yard, also are eligible.

Two cities, San Diego, Calif., and St. Louis, were dropped from the list.

French Delivery of Jets to Israel Appears Likely

PARIS — The government of President Georges Pompidou appears to be moving toward a reappraisal of French policies in the Middle East and eventual abrogation of the embargo under which 50 Mirage fighter-bombers are being withheld from Israel.

Deliveries of some spare parts for Israeli military equipment have in fact already been resumed, according to reliable reports.

All such deliveries were stopped last January on personal orders by former President Charles de Gaulle after an Israeli commando raid on the airport at Beirut and destroyed civilian aircraft on the ground.

The embargo on the 50 jet planes dates back to the six-day Arab-Israeli war of 1967. The planes, which cost slightly more than $1 million each, have been paid for in full by Israel.

Surtax Backers See Close Win in House

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House vote scheduled Monday on extension of the income surtax will test political skills in steering an essentially unpopular measure — as well as the country's mood on tax equity and inflation.

Backers are cautiously predicting a very close but favorable vote.

The closeness was dramatized Tuesday, the eve of the originally planned showdown, when House Democratic leaders postponed the test. A day later, on favorable reports from the Republican side, they agreed to a vote Monday rather than after the July 4 holiday.

APART FROM natural aversion to taxes, the surtax bill is carrying a special handicap. It comes at a time when taxpayers' hopes — reflected in bushels of letters to Congressmen — have been whetted by the beginning of work on wide-ranging tax reform.

Surtax extension, to fight inflation, had been recommended by President Lyndon B. Johnson. When President Nixon, despite earlier criticism of the tax, seconded the recommendation, the new administration kept its campaign for extension on a high economic level.

It took the position that inflation is such an evident danger that everyone should see the necessity for continuing a tax that would produce a dampening $6.3 billion unified budget surplus.

BUT THE push for what came to be known as loophole-closing was well under way by then. Despite repeated warnings that no great immediate pickup of revenue could be expected from tax reform, voters remained convinced that if tax avoidance could be curbed, the surtax might not be necessary — at least not at the rates of the length Nixon recommended. This was six months at 10 per cent and six at five per cent.

Republicans in Congress sent urgent messages to the White House that they needed help. Finally, only about two weeks before the expected showdown, the administration spokesmen began talking louder and more direfully. There was even a hint — fuzzed by subsequent explanations — that wage and price controls might be on the way if the surtax failed.

THE OPPOSITION campaign also stepped up. Seventy-one members of the House, mainly liberal Democrats, issued a demand that the surcharge be continued only briefly while tax reforms were worked out. Labor organizations started a concerted drive against extension.

The House Ways and Means Committee took time out from its tax reform work to put together a tax extension package. Its task was made more difficult by the illness of Chairman Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., one of Congress' most respected experts in politics — as well as taxation.

BY INTERIOR DEPARTMENT Oil Link Denied in Death of Seals

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interior Department said Saturday there is no evidence that oil pollution from the leak of an undersea well five months ago killed any seals or sea lions on San Miguel Island off California.

The department released a report which said oil from the well off Santa Barbara washed ashore on or about March 19, polluting about one-sixth of a mile — half of one per cent — of the total shoreline of San Miguel, a Marine wildlife refuge.

THE REPORT said the natural death rate from injuries, premature birth, and other causes apparently accounted for any dead seals and sea lions found on the island.

Autopsies indicated that oil had not been responsible for the deaths, the report said, adding: "Blood samples from live elephant seals showed no evidence of petroleum."

The report said evidence so far does not indicate any reduction of the animals' food supply by the oil.

It said no new oil has appeared on any beaches on San Miguel since the original pollution of March 19.

The report said the Interior Department is continuing to monitor the condition of the marine mammals on San Miguel Island daily.

The oil spill, the report said, affected four beach areas, all on the extreme western tip of the island.

"THE LARGEST area affected was inhabited by only about 200 elephant seals during March and April; and by about 200 sea lions and elephant seals during May and June," the report said.

"There were, by comparison, thousands of sea lions and elephant seals on beaches on the south side of San Miguel Island during these same times — beaches that were completely unaffected by any oil."

3 Brothers Decide Who Goes to Jail

LIMERICK, Ireland (UPI) — The judge Saturday left it up to the three brothers to decide which of them would go to jail and which would stay home.

John Clifford, at 45 the oldest, won the right to remain free. — But only for a year. He will have to go to prison when his brothers, Alphonsus and Cecil, finish their one-year prison sentences.

THE CLIFFORD brothers were convicted of stealing meat from a mental hospital. But Judge Barra O'Brien said it would be "castrophic" for the wives, their 11 children and the family butcher business if they were all jailed at once.

It took the brothers a three-minute huddle to decide John would keep the butcher business going. "But I'll be thinking about prison for the next 12 months," he said.

Israel Holds Man Wanted in California

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israeli officials are holding a Californian wanted in his home state on charges of drug smuggling.

Dick Scott, 36, of Alamo, was arrested Thursday after California Gov. Ronald Reagan asked for his extradition through the U.S. State Department.

The police prosecutor here said Scott was involved in a $500,000 scheme to fly narcotics into the United States, apparently from Mexico. Scott's attorney, however, maintains his client is "involved in a vital and important project" for the good of Israel.

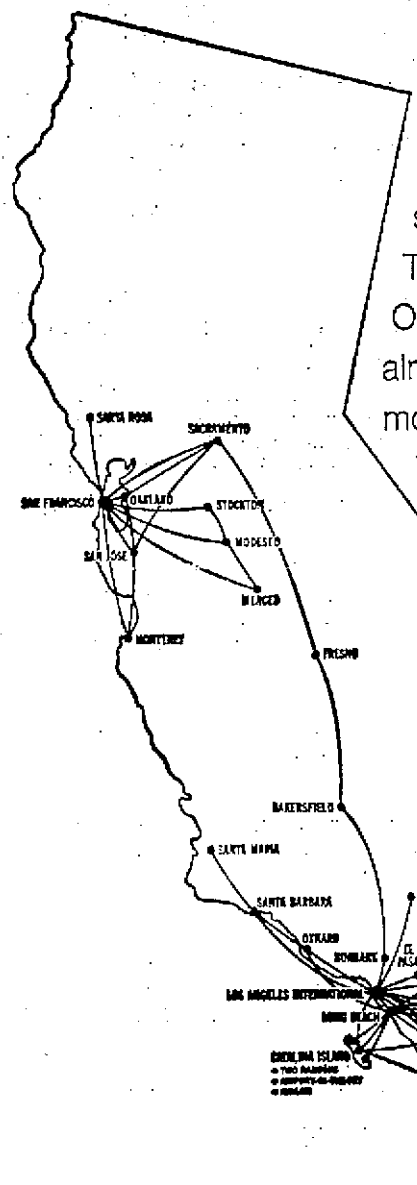

The attorney said Scott came to this country after the 1967 Arab-Israeli war and helped found Ramat Shalom, a Golan heights settlement in occupied Syria which Scott claims will become a multimillion-dollar resort with the construction of a large hotel. The prosecution said he jumped bail in California to come to Israel.

U.S., Japan Flags Mark Dual Tribute

IWO JIMA, Japan (UPI) — Mt. Suribachi, where the U.S. Marines raised the Stars and Stripes on Iwo Jima in a historic gesture of victory in World War II was crowned Saturday with two monuments.

One honors the 6,281 Americans killed in the conquest of the island in 1945, one of the war's bloodiest battles. The other is for the 23,000 Japanese who died in Iwo Jima's unsuccessful defense. American and Japanese flags fluttered side by side.

Diplomatic Break Over Soccer Game

By DON HASTINGS

The World

El Salvador broke diplomatic relations with neighboring Honduras Friday in a feud that began with a World Cup soccer match earlier in the month. The break was announced from the office of President Fidel Sanchez-Hernandez after thousands of Salvadorans were expelled from Honduras.

The Salvadoran government said 10,000 refugees from Honduras were back in their native El Salvador, living in parks, schools and public buildings. The government also charged Salvadorans were being beaten, raped and murdered by Honduran mobs.

The feud grew out of rivalry on the soccer field, where fans from each country attacked the other's national team in El Salvador and Honduras.

ALL MAJOR, PRIVATELY-OWNED land tracts in Peru are being expropriated and divided among the people, the government announced Tuesday. President Juan Velasco Alvarado pledged "just compensation" for foreign and Peruvian land holders whose properties will be turned over to peasants under a national agrarian reform program. Among American investors with substantial property interests in Peru are Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller and the W. R. Grace Co. of New York. The Grace holdings were among the first taken over.

A NEGOTIATED NATIONALIZATION was announced in Chile where the government took over the $200-million properties of New York-based Anaconda Copper Co. The company will be compensated with Chilean government bonds.

URUGUAY WAS PLACED UNDER a state of siege modified martial law — by President Jorge Pacheco Areco in a crackdown on mounting social unrest.

ELEVEN PERSONS WERE KILLED and 20 injured in a suburb of Hannover, Germany, when a railroad freight car loaded with 15 tons of West Germany army artillery shells caught fire and exploded. The tremendous blast blew a hole 30 feet deep and 60 feet wide in the ground and set station buildings afire.

The Nation

The 15th chief justice of the United States was sworn in Monday. Warren E. Burger, 61, a judge on the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, took the oaths for the highest judicial post in the nation in the ornate chamber of the U.S. Supreme Court. The oaths were administered by retiring Chief Justice Earl Warren, who headed the court for 16 years.

In an unprecedented address to the court, President Nixon warmly praised Warren, not only for his service on the Supreme Court, but for 52 years of public service, including terms as California's attorney general and governor.

THE OFTEN-UNHAPPY LIFE of Judy Garland ended last Sunday. The body of the 47-year-old singer-actress was found in her London home by her fifth husband, Mickey Deans. The coroner ruled Miss Garland died of an accidental overdose of sleeping pills. Her body was flown to New York where thousands of mourning fans filed past the glass-covered casket. Actor James Mason, Miss Garland's co-star in "A Star is Born," delivered the eulogy at private funeral services Friday.

UNITED STATES-CANADIAN FRIENDSHIP was celebrated Friday in ceremonies ranging from New York State to Montreal observing the 10th anniversary of the St. Lawrence Seaway. Leading the observance were President Nixon and Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau.

PRODUCTION OF NUCLEAR WARHEAD components for U.S. missiles was halted by a fire May 11 at a vital plutonium-handling plant at Rocky Flats, Colo., the Atomic Energy Commission revealed last week. Despite the shutdown, expected to continue through the rest of the year, AEC officials insisted defense warhead deliveries will be met on schedule.

THE BITTER, 13-WEEK STRIKE by Negro hospital workers at the state medical college hospital in Charleston, S.C., ended Friday. The workers, who had been supported by civil rights leaders Rev. Ralph Abernathy and Mrs. Martin Luther King Jr., won some, but not all of their demands.

RACIAL VIOLENCE ROCKED Omaha, Neb., and Kokomo, Ind., last week. Fire-bombings resulted in numerous fires in the Negro sections of both cities and police had to escort firemen to protect them from snipers. Thirteen Kokomo policemen were wounded by shotgun fire.

FOREST AND BRUSH FIRES raged across vast areas of Alaska in what may be the state's worst fire season. Largest of more than 50 fires reported last week was one that charred 300,000 acres northwest of Fairbanks.

TORNADOES, CLOUDBURST RAINS and flash floods claimed more than a dozen lives and injured 150 persons as summer storms lashed a wide midlands belt from the plains to the Appalachians. Damage mounted into millions of dollars.

The War

The tempo of combat in Vietnam slackened last week. Heaviest action was around the U.S. Special Forces camp at Ben Het, which has been under siege by North Vietnamese troops for seven weeks. The camp has been under almost constant rocket and mortar fire, but U.S. military spokesmen said there was no danger of the installation falling to the Reds.

The Ben Het engagement is considered an experiment to test the capability of South Vietnamese against Communist forces. American participation in the fighting has been largely limited to air and artillery support.

GENERAL LESSENING OF FIGHTING was reflected in the report of U.S. casualties for the week ended June 21. The U.S. Command in Saigon announced 247 Americans were killed during the week, 88 less than in the preceding seven days.

THOUSANDS PAY THEIR HOMAGE AT EISENHOWER CRYPT

ABILENE, Kan. (AP) — With the summer tourist rush in full swing, the visitors some days outnumber the population.

They're coming by the thousands to the place where former President Dwight D. Eisenhower is buried — orderly crowds of solemn, silent and respectful people of all ages from all over the United States and many foreign countries.

In the less than three months since the state funeral, more than 270,000 persons have filed past the Eisenhower crypt in the Place of Meditation Chapel on the Eisenhower Center grounds. This is by actual count on meters operated by guards.

The rush started on April 2, the day of the funeral, and it has been growing ever since," says Dr. John Wickman, director of the Eisenhower Library and Center.

Since schools let out the crowds have been ranging from 8,000 to 10,000 on weekends and from 5,000 to 7,000 on weekdays. It is expected the total will be around 325,000 visitors by the end of the long July 4 holiday weekend.

This great influx of visitors naturally taxes the facilities of a city with a normal population of 8,000. It has created problems in traffic control, parking, eating, sleeping and catering to demands of people looking for mementos and souvenirs.

Abilene stores and shops find it nearly impossible, for example, to keep up with the demand for Eisenhower postcards. Motels fill up for miles around.

Diplomatic Break Over Soccer Game

By DON HASTINGS

The World

El Salvador broke diplomatic relations with neighboring Honduras Friday in a feud that began with a World Cup soccer match earlier in the month. The break was announced from the office of President Fidel Sanchez-Hernandez after thousands of Salvadorans were expelled from Honduras.

The Salvadoran government said 10,000 refugees from Honduras were back in their native El Salvador, living in parks, schools and public buildings. The government also charged Salvadorans were being beaten, raped and murdered by Honduran mobs.

The feud grew out of rivalry on the soccer field, where fans from each country attacked the other's national team in El Salvador and Honduras.

ALL MAJOR, PRIVATELY-OWNED land tracts in Peru are being expropriated and divided among the people, the government announced Tuesday. President Juan Velasco Alvarado pledged "just compensation" for foreign and Peruvian land holders whose properties will be turned over to peasants under a national agrarian reform program. Among American investors with substantial property interests in Peru are Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller and the W. R. Grace Co. of New York. The Grace holdings were among the first taken over.

A NEGOTIATED NATIONALIZATION was announced in Chile where the government took over the $200-million properties of New York-based Anaconda Copper Co. The company will be compensated with Chilean government bonds.

URUGUAY WAS PLACED UNDER a state of siege — modified martial law — by President Jorge Pacheco Areco in a crackdown on mounting social unrest.

ELEVEN PERSONS WERE KILLED and 20 injured in a suburb of Hannover, Germany, when a railroad freight car loaded with 15 tons of West Germany army artillery shells caught fire and exploded. The tremendous blast blew a hole 30 feet deep and 60 feet wide in the ground and set station buildings afire.

The Nation

The 15th chief justice of the United States was sworn in Monday. Warren E. Burger, 61, a judge on the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, took the oaths for the highest judicial post in the nation in the ornate chamber of the U.S. Supreme Court. The oaths were administered by retiring Chief Justice Earl Warren, who headed the court for 16 years.

In an unprecedented address to the court, President Nixon warmly praised Warren, not only for his service on the Supreme Court, but for 52 years of public service, including terms as California's attorney general and governor.

THE OFTEN-UNHAPPY LIFE of Judy Garland ended last Sunday. This body of the 47-year-old singer-actress was found in her London home by her fifth husband, Mickey Deans. The coroner ruled Miss Garland died of an accidental overdose of sleeping pills. Her body was flown to New York where thousands of mourning fans filed past the glass-covered casket. Actor James Mason, Miss Garland's co-star in "A Star is Born," delivered the eulogy at private funeral services Friday.

UNITED STATES-CANADIAN FRIENDSHIP was celebrated Friday in ceremonies ranging from New York State to Montreal observing the 10th anniversary of the St. Lawrence Seaway. Leading the observance were President Nixon and Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau.

PRODUCTION OF NUCLEAR WARHEAD components for U.S. missiles was halted by a fire May 11 at a vital plutonium-handling plant at Rocky Flats, Colo., the Atomic Energy Commission revealed last week. Despite the shutdown, expected to continue through the rest of the year, AEC officials insisted defense warhead deliveries will be met on schedule.

THE BITTER, 13-WEEK STRIKE by Negro hospital workers at the state medical college hospital in Charleston, S.C., ended Friday. The workers, who had been supported by civil rights leaders Rev. Ralph Abernathy and Mrs. Martin Luther King Jr., won some, but not all of their demands.

RACIAL VIOLENCE ROCKED Omaha, Neb., and Kokomo, Ind., last week. Fire-bombings resulted in numerous fires in the Negro sections of both cities and police had to escort firemen to protect them from snipers. Thirteen Kokomo policemen were wounded by shotgun fire.

FOREST AND BRUSH FIRES raged across vast areas of Alaska in what may be the state's worst fire season. Largest of more than 50 fires reported last week was one that charred 300,000 acres northwest of Fairbanks.

TORNADOES, CLOUDBURST RAINS and flash floods claimed more than a dozen lives and injured 150 persons as summer storms lashed a wide midlands belt from the plains to the Appalachians. Damage mounted into millions of dollars.

The War

The tempo of combat in Vietnam slackened last week. Heaviest action was around the U.S. Special Forces camp at Ben Het, which has been under siege by North Vietnamese troops for seven weeks. The camp has been under almost constant rocket and mortar fire, but U.S. military spokesmen said there was no danger of the installation falling to the Reds.

The Ben Het engagement is considered an experiment to test the capability of South Vietnamese against Communist forces. American participation in the fighting has been largely limited to air and artillery support.

GENERAL LESSENING OF FIGHTING was reflected in the report of U.S. casualties for the week ended June 21. The U.S. Command in Saigon announced 247 Americans were killed during the week, 88 less than in the preceding seven days.

THOUSANDS PAY THEIR HOMAGE AT EISENHOWER CRYPT

ABILENE, Kan. (AP) — With the summer tourist rush in full swing, the visitors some days outnumber the population.

They're coming by the thousands to the place where former President Dwight D. Eisenhower is buried — orderly crowds of solemn, silent and respectful people of all ages from all over the United States and many foreign countries.

In the less than three months since the state funeral, more than 270,000 persons have filed past the Eisenhower crypt in the Place of Meditation Chapel on the Eisenhower Center grounds. This is by actual count on meters operated by guards.

"The rush started on April 2, the day of the funeral, and it has been growing ever since," says Dr. John Wickman, director of the Eisenhower Library and Center.

Since schools let out the crowds have been ranging from 8,000 to 10,000 on weekends and from 5,000 to 7,000 on weekdays. It is expected the total will be around 325,000 visitors by the end of the long July 4 holiday weekend.

This great influx of visitors naturally taxes the facilities of a city with a normal population of 8,000. It has created problems in traffic control, parking, eating, sleeping and catering to demands of people looking for mementos and souvenirs.

Abilene stores and shops find it nearly impossible, for example, to keep up with the demand for Eisenhower postcards. Motels fill up for miles around.

'GOLDEN APPLE' HONOR Teacher Perry Credits All Others for Award He Won

By RALPH HINMAN JR.
Education Editor

Give everyone but Paul A. Perry credit for winning the "Golden Apple" quality teaching award he won in June.

Give away credit, that is, if you listen to this 42-year-old Long Beach native who daily teaches neurologically handicapped youngsters gathered at Emerson Elementary School.

PAUL A. PERRY
Apple for Teacher

BUT HIS colleagues, who nominated Perry for a monthly award jointly presented by Teachers Association of Long Beach and The Independent Press-Telegram, thought differently. Their letter reads in part:

"To observe Mr. Perry at work with his class is to see miracles being performed. Such integrity, sincerity, individual insight. Scholastic abilities are being developed and happy boys and girls are realizing what a privilege it is to learn and live in harmonious atmosphere.

"HE RESPECTS each as an individual and recognizes the potential of each child who otherwise might never have known what opportunities life has to offer.

"... Paul is never too busy to listen nor to assume any worthwhile task, even if it requires many extra hours of work."

Winning the "Golden Apple" has brought the 17-year teaching veteran "face-to-face,"

he says "with what I really believe — and do — about educating children. It's pretty humbling.

"I don't think of myself as very academically skillful," he avers. If there is anything that might be a key to what it is I do, I guess it would just be caring. I really like children, and I want to see them happy. I don't really teach them — I just try hard to give them an atmosphere where they can learn ..."

Perry reciprocates in divvying up the credit, praising:

"The very fine youngsters I had this year ... and the excellent staff and Principal Frank Ross at Emerson.

"My wife Lois, another Long Beach native, who has been largely responsible because she keeps me happy." It might be noted, too, that Mrs. Perry performs above and beyond duty's call by "being great about letting me bring kids home for a special treat dinner."

They are the parents of a daughter, Karen, Long Beach City College student and Disneyland employee.

—Parents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul I. Perry, who still reside in Long Beach, where "they were a great inspiration to myself and brother Dick," onetime CSCLB head basketball coach now teaching in USC.

— My 5th-grade teacher at Burbank Elementary, Mrs. Emma Meyers Winter, who is still living here and is the teacher I remember best. Her example was very meaningful to me."

Perry attended Bryant, Willard, Whitier and Burbank Elementaries, Franklin Junior High and graduated from Wilson H.S. in 1945. Following Navy service he returned to LBCC, going on to Pepperdine College, Los Angeles, for a bachelor's degree and graduate study.

"The influence of Dr. E. V. Pullias, former Pepperdine dean, contributed greatly to my philosophy of teaching. (Many ranking Long Beach school administrators. It might be noted, studied with Dr. Pullias, and each attests his greatness in similar warm terms.)

Perry quietly gives "credit to Christ, the really great teacher, for his influence on our lives."

Santa Ana City Hall Leaseback Gains

A leaseback arrangement whereby the Santa Ana-Orange County Civic Center Commission will build a new Santa Ana City Hall for $3.7 million, and lease it to the city for $328,300 annual "rent," will be handed to the city council July 7.

The commission approved the arrangement providing bonds to finance construction can be sold for seven per cent — and providing a legislative bill is approved authorizing the rate.

Presently, such bonds are limited to six per cent interest charges, but the cost of borrowing money has increased lately.

The eight-story city

Lutherans Commit

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The American Lutheran Church Joint Council has voted to commit from $1.5 million to $1.75 million to urban programs, with the money coming from projected fund drives.

The decision fell far short of a demand by Negro Lutheran leaders for

Urban Aid Funds

$5 million to attack the "urban crisis."

A conference of the Inter-City Ministry had called last week for the church to budget an extra $5 million as a "fair share" of the $500 million demanded of the nation's white churches by black militant James Forman.

'GOLDEN APPLE' HONOR

Teacher Perry Credits All Others for Award He Won

By RALPH HINMAN JR.
Education Editor

Give everyone but Paul A. Perry credit for winning the "Golden Apple" quality teaching award he won in June.

Give away credit, that is, if you listen to this 42-year-old Long Beach native who daily teaches neurologically handicapped youngsters gathered at Emerson Elementary School.

BUT HIS colleagues, who nominated Perry for a monthly award jointly presented by Teachers Association of Long Beach and The Independent Press-Telegram, thought differently. Their letter reads in part:

"To observe Mr. Perry at work with his class is to see miracles being performed. Such integrity, sincerity, individual insight. Scholastic abilities are being developed and happy boys and girls are realizing what a privilege it is to learn and live in harmonious atmosphere.

"HE RESPECTS each as an individual and recognizes the potential of each child who otherwise might never have known what opportunities life has to offer.

"... Paul is never too busy to listen nor to assume any worthwhile task, even if it requires many extra hours of work."

Winning the "Golden Apple" has brought the 17-year teaching veteran "face-to-face,"

PAUL A. PERRY

he says "with what I really believe — and do — about educating children. It's pretty humbling.

"I don't think of myself as very academically skillful," he avers. If there is anything that might be a key to what it is I do, I guess it would just be caring. I really like children, and I want to see them happy. I don't really teach them — I just try hard to give them an atmosphere where they can learn."

Perry reciprocates in divvying up the credit, praising:

"The very fine youngsters I had this year ... and the excellent staff and Principal Frank Ross at Emerson.

"My wife Lois, another Long Beach native, who has been largely responsible because she keeps me happy." It might be noted, too, that Mrs. Perry performs above and beyond duty's call by "being great about letting me bring kids home for a special treat dinner."

They are the parents of a daughter, Karen, Long Beach City College student and Disneyland employee.

—Parents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul I. Perry, who still reside in Long Beach, where "they were a great inspiration to myself and brother Dick," onetime CSECLB head basketball coach now teaching in USC.

—My 5th-grade teacher at Burbank Elementary, Mrs. Emma Meyers Winter, who is still living here and is the teacher I remember best. Her example was very meaningful to me."

Perry attended Bryant, Willard, Whittier and Burbank Elementaries, Franklin Junior High and graduated from Wilson H.S. in 1945. Following Navy service he returned to LBCC, going on to Pepperdine College, Los Angeles, for a bachelor's degree and graduate study.

"The influence of Dr. E. V. Pullias, former Pepperdine dean, contributed greatly to my philosophy of teaching. (Many ranking Long Beach school administrators, it might be noted, studied with Dr. Pullias, and each attests his greatness in similar warm terms.)

Perry quietly gives credit to Christ, the really great teacher, for His influence on our lives."

Santa Ana City Hall Leaseback Gains

A leaseback arrangement whereby the Santa Ana-Orange County Civic Center Commission will build a new Santa Ana City Hall for $3.7 million, and lease it to the city for $328,300 annual "rent," will be handed to the city council July 7.

The commission approved the arrangement providing bonds to finance construction can be sold for seven per cent — and providing a legislative bill is approved authorizing the rate.

Presently, such bonds

are limited to six per cent interest charges, but the cost of borrowing money has increased lately.

The eight-story city

Lutherans Commit

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The American Lutheran Church Joint Council has voted to commit from $1.5 million to $1.75 million to urban programs, with the money coming from projected fund drives.

The decision fell far short of a demand by Negro Lutheran leaders for hall, to be on the Civic Center in Santa Ana, would be started in the fall of 1970 and finished by July 1972.

Urban Aid Funds

$5 million to attack the "urban crisis."

A conference of the Inter-City Ministry had called last week for the church to budget an extra $5 million as a "fair share" of the $600 million demanded of the nation's white churches by black militant James Forman.

GI Who Refused to Return From Korea Prison Wants to Be Polish

By MARTIN ZUCKER

KATOWICE, Poland (AP) — In 1953 after the Korean war armistice, Sgt. Harold K. Webb of Miami Beach, Fla., was one of 21 American prisoners of war who refused to return to the United States.

He and the others, most of whom eventually did return, were called turn-coats.

NOW, some 16 years later, Webb teaches English in this gray factory city, in the heart of Poland's Silesian Industrial belt.

He considers himself a "pure progressive American" but still declines to go home.

"If I went back and lived as I wanted to," he says, "I would be eliminated quickly like John F. Kennedy and Martin Luther King."

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Starting Tuesday, a lot of people who have been buying on credit may be in for a jolt.

The new "truth in lending" law which passed Congress last year goes into effect then and requires creditors to tell quite a bit more about the cost of buying on credit.

So people who shrugged off the monthly 1½ per cent charge on revolving credit accounts may be startled when their bills state — as state they must, under the law — that by paying a charge of 1½ per cent monthly, they'd been paying an annual charge of 18 per cent.

No one is certain that disclosures such as this, mandated under the new law, will cause the American public to "charge it" less frequently. The guessing is that it will not.

A STUDY IN Massachusetts, where a similar law was enacted in 1967, showed that most consumers were indifferent about the requirements for disclosures.

"When, as required by law, the annual rate is brought to their attention," the study said, "most consumers express surprise at the size of the percentage but are fully satisfied when they are made to understand that they are paying the same finance charge as always."

But the law can — and may — eliminate a lot of misleading advertising.

THE LAW COVERS almost all consumer credit. Specifically, it covers all credit offered on cash loans, goods or services for personal use, family use, household use or agricultural use, when the total amount does not exceed $25,000 or even exceeding that on real estate transactions. The only exception are transactions in which no finance charge is involved or when the credit is repayable in less than four installments.

Businessmen violating its provisions are subject to criminal penalties of up to a year's imprisonment and a $5,000 fine.

In addition, a consumer who is victimized by misleading credit terms also can sue the businessmen in civil court for a sum up to twice the size of the finance charge imposed on him, up to a $1,000 limit.

IN ADDITION to spelling out the "finance charge" in monthly and annual terms, the consumer must be told how much time he has to make a payment without incurring the charge, how the charge is determined, what the minimum payment is, and what additional charges may be made.

Other fees, including finder's fees, investigation fees, points on a real estate deal and the premiums on life insurance — sometimes required by a creditor or lender — also must be spelled out.

In their monthly bills, stores will be required to express the finance charges in dollars and cents along with percentages.

On a straight cash loan from a bank or loan company, the borrower must be told the real rate of interest he is paying and how long he can use all the borrowed money before he has to start paying it back.

On installment loans for cars or large appliances, the customer also must be told the number, amount and due dates of his payments and the amount and method of computing charges for late payments.

SOME INSTALLMENT contracts carry "balloon payments," under which the final payment due is considerably larger than the monthly payments. Sometimes, unaware of the balloon payment, customers have had to forfeit the merchandise because they were unable to make that final, swollen payment.

Now they must be told in advance and in writing of any payment which is twice the size of the regular payment.

The law may have its greatest impact in the area of home purchases and mortgages — an area little understood by many home buyers.

Some of the finance charges which must be listed by the mortgage writer include: Interest, any amount paid under a discount system involving added charges, service, transaction or carrying charges, loan fees, finder's fees and premiums on insurance — credit, life, accident, health or loss of income and sometimes property damage or liability. Also required to be listed are charges on points, which are a percentage of interest that the seller is required to pay to a bank which makes a real estate loan to the buyer.

THE LAW REQUIRES the lender to present all this information in a written statement before the transaction is completed.

Even after a buyer has signed a contract, he has three days to reconsider and to cancel the commitment before it becomes binding.

GI Who Refused to Return From Korea Prison Wants to Be Polish

By MARTIN ZUCKER

KATOWICE, Poland (AP) — In 1953 after the Korean war armistice, Sgt. Harold K. Webb of Miami Beach, Fla., was one of 21 American prisoners of war who refused to return to the United States.

He and the others, most of whom eventually did return, were called turn-coats.

NOW, some 16 years later, Webb teaches English in this gray factory city, in the heart of Poland's Silesian industrial belt.

He considers himself a "pure progressive American" but still declines to go home.

"If I went back and lived as I wanted to," he says, "I would be eliminated quickly like John F. Kennedy and Martin Luther King."

Webb has been stateless ever since he sought and received political asylum from Communist China in 1954 and from Poland in 1960.

Domestic Oil, Gas Make Comeback After Drop in March

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Domestic oil and gas drilling operations have made an encouraging comeback after dropping to a 26-year low in March.

Late June statistics released by the American Association of Oilwell Drilling Contractors indicate 1,224 rotary drilling rigs were actually making hole compared to only 1,014 in early March and 1,148 a year earlier.

WARREN L. Baker, executive president of the association, says March's downward trend has been replaced by an advance of sufficient magnitude to restore active rigs the six weeks to levels exceeding 1967 year's comparable period.

"Part of the increase may be attributed to normal seasonal growth as better weather prevails,"

Baker said. "But seasonal improvement does not explain why there should be a larger growth this year than last."

Both years had favorable spring weather.

"THE SIZE of this year's increase is surprising in view of disturbing attacks on oil taxes, oil import controls, and offshore drilling," Baker said. "These matters threaten to severely dampen the economic outlook for oil."

Baker said two developments, however, have favorably influenced future drilling proposals.

"Foremost were widespread crude price increases during March and April," he said.

"The other factor was the rapid increase in production and a light supply situation as production proration ends in an increasing number of fields."

DOMESTIC crude and condensate production has flirted with records levels the past three weeks after having dropped to a 1969 low of 8,903,000 barrels a day the last week in February.

Daily output the week ending June 29 was 9,523,000 barrels. The all-time high of 9,561,000 barrels per day was set in late February last year. Refiners also have been processing more crude than ever before in history.

Drag Racers Burn
SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Two teen-agers were burned to death in the flaming wreckage of their car after a high-speed drag race. The victims, both 19, were identified as Hoy Hytche and Thomas J. Smith III, both of San Francisco.

Joggers, Rejoice: Tests Prove Footwork Pays

By DUSTON HARVEY

BERKELEY (UPI) — Take heart, joggers—your bathroom scales may be lying.

A University of California researcher who ran 60 of the sweatshirt brigade through their paces for 10 weeks reports the health claims made for jogging are valid.

But he says his stalwarts, who ranged in age from 17 to 66 and in condition from good to flabby, came up with a couple of surprises.

One is that without an accompanying diet, the average jogger isn't going to lose much weight. The "real shock" is that 12 minutes of jogging three times a week is as good for you as three 24-minute stints.

Dr. Jack Wilmore, an assistant professor specializing in exercise physiology, reported his findings after analyzing comprehensive medical and endurance tests given the volunteers before and after their 10-week workout.

"The results were very positive, Wilmore said.

"THEY SHOULD be quite a stimulus to those who wonder if jogging would do anything for them. It was remarkable we got the results we did in 10 weeks."

Those results indicate jogging is of value in combatting cardiovascular and respiratory diseases — by strengthening the heart and lungs, he said.

The 60 joggers averaged a 2 per cent decline in body weight, 8 per cent drop in body fat, 10-13 per cent decrease in blood pressure, 12 per cent lower resting heart beat, a 12 per cent increase in distance covered daily and a 16 per cent hike in work capacity.

The participants were volunteers from the University of California campus — about a third students, a third faculty and a third administrators and staff members.

WILMORE, a former trackman and confirmed jogger, said the figures on body weight (down 2 per cent) and body fat (down 8 per cent) showed standing on the scales was not an accurate indicator of jogging's effects.

"It doesn't show what's going on inside the body," he said. "The muscle mass is increasing as body fat decreases. The jogger is getting the desired result, but his bathroom scale doesn't reflect it."

The biggest surprise to Wilmore was the insignificant difference between the volunteers who jogged 12 minutes three times a week and those who ran 24 minutes on the same days.

IN ADDITION to measurable results, the researcher said the volunteers told him their jaunts made them feel better, relaxed tensions and allowed them to concentrate for longer periods on a single task.

Wilmore had two warnings for potential sweat-soakers:

"It is very important to get medical clearance before starting ... and joggers must remember moderation. Some people try to perform as they did when they were 20. It just doesn't work."

The comprehensive before-and-after medical tests given by volunteer physicians at Letterman Hospital on the Army's Presidio of San Francisco showed these average changes in the 60 joggers:

— A drop in blood pressure from 136/78 to 118/70—a 13 per cent decrease in systolic (maximum) pressure and a 10 per cent decline in diastolic (minimum) pressure.

— A decline in the resting heart rate from 77 beats per minute to 66, down 12 per cent.

— An increase of 12 per cent in work capacity, as measured by a stationary bicycle test in which pedal resistance was increased every two minutes and the volunteer pumped until exhausted.

— An increase of 12 per cent in the distance run each day — from 1.57 to 1.73 miles for the 12-minute crew.

— An increase in maximum oxygen consumption during exercise from 42.9 to 47.1 milliliters per kilogram of weight, indicating the body is providing the working muscles with 10 per cent more oxygen.

— An increase of 13 per cent in oxygen consumed per heart beat while working, showing increased tissue efficiency in absorbing oxygen and a greater volume of blood pumped by each stroke of the heart.

— A "substantial" improvement in lung capacity and efficiency.

vorably influenced future drilling proposals.

"Foremost were widespread crude price increases during March and April," he said.

"The other factor was the rapid increase in production and a tight supply situation as production prorations ends in an increasing number of fields."

DOMESTIC crude and condensate production has flirted with records levels the past three weeks after having dropped to a 1969 low of 8,903,000 barrels a day the last week in February.

Daily output the week ending June 29 was 9,523,000 barrels. The all-time high of 9,561,000 barrels per day was set in late February last year.

Refiners also have been processing more crude than ever before in history.

BERKELEY (UPI) — Take heart, joggers—your bathroom scales may be lying.

A University of California researcher who ran 60 of the sweatshirt brigade through their paces for 10 weeks reports the health claims made for jogging are valid.

But he says his stalwarts, who ranged in age from 17 to 66 and in condition from good to flabby, came up with a couple of surprises.

One is that without an accompanying diet, the average jogger isn't going to lose much weight. The "real shock" is that 12 minutes of jogging three times a week is as good for you as three 24-minute stints.

Dr. Jack Wilmore, an assistant professor specializing in exercise physiology, reported his findings after analyzing comprehensive medical and endurance tests given the volunteers before and after their 10-week workout. "The results were very positive," Wilmore said.

"THEY SHOULD be quite a stimulus to those who wonder if jogging would do anything for them. It was remarkable we got the results we did in 10 weeks."

Those results indicate juggling is of value in combatting cardiovascular and respiratory diseases -- by strengthening the heart and lungs, he said.

The 60 joggers averaged a 2 per cent decline in body weight, 8 per cent drop in body fat, 10-13 per cent decrease in blood pressure, 12 per cent lower resting heart beat, a 12 per cent increase in distance covered daily and a 16 per cent hike in work capacity.

The participants were volunteers from the University of California campus — about a third students, a third faculty and a third administrators and staff members.

WILMORE, a former trackman and confirmed jogger, said the figures on body weight (down 2 per cent) and body fat (down 8 per cent) showed standing on the scales was not an accurate indicator of jogging's effects.

"It doesn't show what's going on inside the body," he said. "The muscle mass is increasing as body fat decreases. The jogger is getting the desired result, but his bathroom scale doesn't reflect it."

The biggest surprise in Wilmore was the insignificant difference between the volunteers who jogged 12 minutes three times a week and those who ran 24 minutes on the same days.

IN ADDITION to measurable results, the researcher said the volunteers told him their jaunts made them feel better, relaxed tensions and allowed them to concentrate for longer periods on a single task.

Wilmore had two warnings for potential sweat-suiters:

"It is very important to get medical clearance before starting . . . and joggers must remember moderation. Some people try to perform as they did when they were 20. It just doesn't work."

The comprehensive before-and-after medical tests given by volunteer physicians at Letterman Hospital on the Army's Presidio of San Francisco showed these average changes in the 60 joggers:

—A drop in blood pressure from 136/78 to 118/70—a 13 per cent decrease in systolic (maximum) pressure and a 10 per cent decline in diastolic (minimum) pressure.

— A decline in the resting heart rate from 77 beats per minute to 66, down 12 per cent.

— An increase of 12 per cent in work capacity, as measured by a stationary bicycle test in which pedal resistance was increased every two minutes.

and the volunteer pumped until exhausted.

— An increase of 12 per cent in the distance run each day -- from 1.57 to 1.73 miles for the 12-minute crew.

— An increase in maximum oxygen consumption during exercise from 42.9 to 47.1 milliliters per kilogram of weight, indicating the body is providing the working muscles with 10 per cent more oxygen.

— An increase of 13 per cent in oxygen consumed per heart beat while working, showing increased tissue efficiency in absorbing oxygen and a greater volume of blood pumped by each stroke of the heart.

— A "substantial" improvement in lung capacity and efficiency.

Topless Girls Top Broadway Musicals

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Producers are bringing Broadway to the Las Vegas Strip, but the musicals can't compete with the topless showgirls.

In trying to lure gamblers, most of the 19 hotels and casinos put on two shows per night in the 500-to 1,000-seat showrooms.

Some have name stars like Frank Sinatra, Barbra Streisand or Dean Martin. Others carry extravagant revues with showgirls, and some carry Broadway musicals.

"The Broadway productions are successful as dinner shows," says one hotel official, "but the nude shows are better as midnight vehicles."

tryouts in Portland and Seattle.

"Many Happy Returns" starred John Raitt, Pat Carroll, Victor Buono, Paul Gilbert, Linda Michele and John Carroll in a light plot with emphasis on music.

The hotel failed to pick up the option after a 14-week run. The show did not draw well at midnight.

Benny Bufman, who will supervise Broadway shows at the International Hotel, says, "I discovered in Florida that new audiences aren't ready for untried material. That's all right for Boston, New Haven, Washington, Philadelphia and the places that have been used to tryouts for years."

The $60-million International Hotel opens in July with an 800-seat Broadway theater without dinner or drinks and with only one show a night, as on Broadway.

UNTIL now the Las Vegas musicals have been trimmed to 90 minutes and watched from crowded tables. Walkoff says the shortened versions allow two shows a night without violating union rules.

Wolfe Classic Film Due

By A. H. WEILER
N.Y. Times Service

NEW YORK — "Look Homeward, Angel," Thomas Wolfe's 1929 classic, has been looking screenward for many a year now, at long last, it is definitely set to be produced and directed by Joshua Logan for Paramount.

"Ketti Frings has completed the script," Logan reported the other day, "and, as in her 1957 adaptation of the Wolfe novel, the movie will deal with three weeks in the life of the Gant family, of Altamont, N.C. the big problem now is finding a young actor to play the sensitive Eugene Gant, who is presumably Thomas Wolfe himself at the age of 17."

"READERS — and players — who have always pictured Asheville as the 'Altamont' of the story will have to settle for a substitute town in the film," Logan said. "Shelville is too modern now, so we'll have to shoot in nearby towns that have more of a 1916 look."

But we're not quite down the "homeward" stretch yet. Logan first has Charles Dizenzo's play "Why I Went Crazy" to produce on Broadway for David Merrick. And it is doubtful that Logan — or Paramount — will be able to give their undivided attention to "Angel" until their $20 million "Paint Your Wagon" has rolled successfully across that wide, wide screen.

RAQUEL WELCH and Robert Culp will pool their talents to show the public the not-so-pretty underside of Hollywood. Culp has written a screenplay called "Laurie Lee in the Movies," which he will direct for Curtwell Productions, a company headed by Miss Welch and her husband, Patrick Curtis.

THE REVUES may cost $700,000 before the show even opens because of the costumes, scenery changes and assortment of acts. New wage increases won by the dancers and singers have added to the cost. But shows such as the Lido, Folies Bergere and Casino de Paris can draw crowds consistently for years.

Name entertainers often charge $50,000 or even $100,000 a week. Max Walkoff, Desert Inn publicity director, said, "There may be a dozen name stars in the country that are sure to fill the house and most of these are signed. Other than those, you're gambling on a name star."

Caesars Palace has name entertainers half the year and musicals such as "Sweet Charity" and "Fiddler on the Roof" for 24 weeks. However, "Mame" was cut short this spring after 14 weeks.

The hotel said it had to make room for shows with Eddie Fisher, Andy Williams and Milton Berle but conceded the show did not always fill the Circus Room.

HOWARD HUGHES' Desert Inn tried boldly last winter to start a new musical in Las Vegas after

Josh Logan, the Old Matchmaker

NEW YORK — I doubt if there's anybody who knows as many stars as perceptively as the great director Josh Logan.

Lee Marvin... when he's drinking, he's a wild man; mean as hell, aggressive, even his gestures, he's the only man I know who leaves out the middle of a sentence and waves his hand and you're supposed to get it. But he's such a good actor with it, he almost makes you believe what you didn't hear him say.

Clint Eastwood's a complete contrast... 3rd or 4th in box office in the world... he's got a passionate belief in what he is able to do... in 'Paint Your Wagon,' Alan J. Lerner and I flew to London and talked over scenes with him and we didn't leave till he said he'd do it.

Lerner of course believes in ESP and flying objects. He'll convince you. He's a miracle worker with words. As long as I was in a room with him I believed what he said.

"Eddie Fisher bought the rights to 'Paint Your Wagon' and Lerner came into it as producer, then Eddie was bought out."

"LERNER SAID to me, 'I am dry on this story. I have written it three times. I have never been able to solve it.'"

"He didn't feel the plot was right. It was about an old man with a daughter who was in love with a Mexican. It was his idea to get Paddy Chayefsky to rewrite it."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday

Your birthday year is one of laughing off, clearing up confusion from the past. Strictly your own responsibility with little or no help. Intuition grows and leads you through. Karmic interests drive it not pressed with extreme words or deeds. Today's natives are versatile, unconventional, and they are.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Seek to improve the social aspects of your position. Find some tactful way of speaking of your real needs, your willingness to meet needs as they are.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Place all your emphasis on those things which matter most to you today. Don't let interests be to be expressed freely.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Do what you can to attract women and their help. Life is interesting and rewarding for yourself and others when a full measure of personal participation is put forth.

CANCER (June 21-July 21): Organize your own program early, get it rolling before other people stir. You can arrange matters as you wish with just a normal effort.

LEO (July 22-Aug. 22): Take a heavy load for a motto and get it behind the day of the week. It will be normal. It won't be, but you will have helped to hold the balance at good profit to yourself.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Give your close attention to your business all day. Much is to be learned from those who act promptly on opportunities.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): There should be more action than conversation today. So get busy and clear off the workload while it's still the week end. Cheerful news, a disc and a celebratory glass.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Give your partner time to speak up. Outside competition turns out to be better organized than anybody had thought. Acced it in good spirits.

Josh Logan, the Old Matchmaker

NEW YORK — I doubt if there's anybody who knows as many stars as perceptively as the great director Josh Logan.

Lee Marvin... when he's drinking, he's a wild man, mean as hell, aggressive, he changes completely, even his gestures. He's the only man I know who leaves out the middle of a sentence and waves his hand and you're supposed to get it. But he's such a good actor with it, he almost makes you believe what you didn't hear him say.

"Chin Eastwood's a complete contrast... 3rd or 4th in box office in the world... he's got a passionate belief in what he is able to do... in 'Paint Your Wagon,' Alan J. Lerner and I flew to London and talked over scenes with him and we didn't leave till he said he'd do it.

"Lerner of course believes in ESP and flying objects. He'll convince you. He's a miracle worker with words. As long as I was in a room with him I believed what he said.

"Eddie Fisher bought the rights to 'Paint Your Wagon' and Lerner came into it as producer, then Eddie was bought out.

"LERNER SAID to me, 'I am dry on this story. I have written it three times. I have never been able to solve it.'

"He didn't feel the plot was right. It was about an old man with a daughter who was in love with a Mexican. It was his idea to get Paddy Chayefsky to rewrite it.

"Paddy rewrote it. The first thing he did was throw out the daughter and the Mexican. Now it's about gold being discovered in a grave. And a Mormon girl, Jean Seberg, who says if her husband was married to two wives, what's wrong with her marrying two husbands? After Paddy rewrote it, Alan took Paddy's story, wrote the screenplay and five new songs to fit in with the new story.

"I'm the old matchmaker. I was in the room when Vanessa Redgrave met Franco Nero (in 'Camelot') and he flipped. We were in an office choosing the music. Vanessa was playing a record and drinking wine. I brought Nero in. She was in a very warm mood. I closed the door...

"We had wanted to find a foreigner for the part. We couldn't find anybody in France. Nero was suggested to me by John Huston... Now, Nero even makes her up.

"PAUL NEWMAN'S first job I guess I gave him here. Just came to town. He'd sold a sporting goods store, sold it so he could go on the stage.

"I gave him a job as understudy in 'Picnic.' He was so good I promoted him to a regular part and made the other understudy Joanne Woodward. (Janice Rule and Kim Stanley were the stars). And that's when it all began.

"Paint Your Wagon" was done on the Broadway stage in 1951.

"Eighteen years ago," somebody said, "It doesn't seem like it was 18 years ago."

"Nothing," Josh Logan said, "seems like 18 years ago to me."

THE WEEKEND WINDUP — Neither Natalie Wood nor Dyan Cannon objected to a nude bedroom scene in "Bob & Carol & Ted & Alice" — but Robert Culp insisted on keeping his shorts on... Catherine Spaak arrives in July to plug her film, "The Libertine," and talk to David Merrick about doing "Promises, Promises" in Rome.

TODAY'S BEST LAUGH: Do you know what most men who worked their way through college are doing today? Working their children's way through college!

WISH I'D SAID THAT: "Inflation's now so bad," sighed a man, "that my wife can't even afford to window-shop."

REMEMBERED QUOTE: "The less men think, the more they talk," — Montesquieu.

EARL'S PEARLS: Morty Guntz figures he'll be a millionaire soon — he got the concession to rent binoculars at "Oh, Calcutta!"

Don Rickles, who'll film "The Warriors" in Yugoslavia, says of his movie career: "Let's face it. I'm a certain type. If Ernie Bergine and Telly Savalas get sick, I get the role." That's earl, brother.

YOUR HOROSCOPE
by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday
Your birthday today. Your coming year is one of reaping, not sowing. Strictly your own responsibility with little or no help. Inflation grows and leads you through. Romantic interests for the time being, but you will have to hold the balance at 9000 until it is yours.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Seek to increase the social aspects of your vocation. Find some tactful way of speaking of your real needs. Your willingness to meet people as they are.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Place all your emphasis on these things which matter most to you today. Romantic interests are to be expressed. GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Do what you can to attract women and their help. Life is interesting and rewarding to yourself and others when a full measure of personal participation is put forth.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Organize your personal affairs. Get it rolling before other people stir. You can arrange matters as you wish with just a normal effort.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Take a hobby thought for a minute and go right into the day on the basis that all will be normal. It won't be, but you will have helped to hold the balance at 9000 until it is yours.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Give your close attention to your business all day. Much gain is promised to those who act promptly on opportunities.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): There should be more action than conversation today. So get busy and clear off the workload which piled up over the week end. Cheerful news to discuss and celebrate this evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Give your best time to speak up. Outside conversation turns out to be better organized than anybody had thought. Accept it in good spirits.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Take all reasonable measures to improve your status today. Ask for what you want. It will be obvious who has done it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Take stock of your affairs, tools, luggage. Discard or give away those things which no longer serve your needs; order replacements in the latest styles.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your talents are being used. Use them to search for hidden reasons for current events. When you turn up something useful, hold it for a while. Don't soil your access to still further secrets.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Friends, neighbors, associates all stretch out a hand for your cooperation today. About which things and which people you must want to be prominent in your life, and react accordingly.

General Tells Aims of Army

By BUCK LANIER
Military Editor

"Cans and cannots" of the Army were outlined to the Long Beach Section of Town Hall Friday noon in the Pacific Coast Club by the commander of the 6th Army.

"Thus we can win a war but not the peace," said Lt. Gen. Stanley R. Larsen of San Francisco, in charge of the land protection for the eight Western states.

"He also reaffirmed the Constitution's cardinal credo of the 'Army's direct responsibility is to its civilian leadership.'"

ON THE "Cans and cannots" the general said:

"We can conduct offensive operations to attain specific objectives, but cannot insure the desirability, viability or reliability of the resulting political situation."

"The Army can provide forces designed to protect Europe or Asia in order to represent the national will to defend, but cannot constitute the national will."

"Guerrilla armies can be prevented from achieving a military victory but we cannot resolve the political problems from which insurgency is derived."

"THE ARMY can equip, train, advise a foreign army, but it cannot insure the advancement of representative government or economic development."

"And the Army can be employed to alleviate the symptoms of domestic discontent, but cannot remove the sources."

Gen. Larsen said, too, that it would be "heart-warming" to eliminate forever all armies from the earth.

"One who has tasted the bitterness and witnessed the cruelties of war would never become its advocate," he said.

The general added that "we still must face the realities of life — violence among nations is a harsh reality with which we must be able to cope."

GEN. LARSEN said five wars are being waged in Vietnam: Fundamentally political as is the case of all wars; sociological; economic; psychological; and military.

Two Fall to Deaths Off L.A. Buildings

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two persons leaped to their deaths from downtown Los Angeles buildings Friday.

Police said Richard Maxfield, about 35, jumped from the Figueroa Hotel's 10th floor fire escape.

Eunice Fogelman, a state mental hospital patient, leaped from the roof of the 12-story Equitable Life Insurance Building.

Accidents Cut By Program

The Green Pennant Safety program instituted in Long Beach area secondary schools in the 1965-1966 school year has apparently been an effective instrument in helping to consistently reduce the number of student-caused accidents. Police department reports show that since its inception, the number of such accidents have dropped 39 per cent when compared with the 1968-1969 school year. It is designed to supplement present school safety programs.

This reduction has occurred even though the number of participating schools has increased from the original nineteen to the present thirty-two. Actual number of accidents this year was 25 compared with 41 in the 1964-1965 period.

PARTICIPATING accident-free schools during the 1968-1969 school year are: St. Anthony Boys, St. Anthony Girls, St. Athanasius, Bancroft, St. Bartholomew, Brethren, St. Cyprians, De Mille, Hill, Holy Innocent, St. Joseph, St. Lucy, St. Matthews, St. Pancratius, Progress, Seven Day Adventist, Stevens.

The Green Pennant, which displays the white cross of the National Safety Council on it, is flown from the school's flagstaff so long as there is not a student-caused accident for that school. When one occurs, the pennant is hauled down and displayed in the school for 30 days at the end of which time it is returned to its place below the flags of the United States and the State of California.

A STUDENT-CAUSED accident is one involving an automobile, truck, bus, motorcycle, motor scooter or bicycle, which results in bodily injury or property damage in which the student is determined by the police to be at fault.

The Green Pennant Safety Program is sponsored nationally by General Motors, and locally by the Independent Press-Telegram in cooperation with the National Safety Council local chapter and the Long Beach Police Department.

General Tells Aims of Army

By BUCK LANIER
Military Editor

"Cans and cannots" of the Army were outlined to the Long Beach Section of Town Hall Friday noon in the Pacific Coast Club by the commander of the 6th Army.

"Thus we can win a war but not the peace," said Lt. Gen. Stanley R. Larsen of San Francisco, in charge of the land protection for the eight Western states.

He also reaffirmed the Constitution's cardinal credo of the "Army's direct responsibility is to its civilian leadership."

ON THE "Cans and cannots" the general said:

"We can conduct offensive operations to attain specific objectives, but cannot insure the desirability, viability or reliability of the resulting political situation."

"The Army can provide forces designed to protect Europe or Asia in order to represent the national will to defend, but cannot constitute the national will."

"Guerrilla armies can be prevented from achieving a military victory but we cannot resolve the political problems from which insurgency is derived."

"THE ARMY can equip, train, advise a foreign army, but it cannot insure the advancement of representative government or economic development."

"And the Army can be employed to alleviate the symptoms of domestic discontent, but cannot remove the sources."

Gen. Larsen said, too, that it would be "heart-warming" to eliminate forever all armies from the earth.

"One who has tasted the bitterness and witnessed the cruelties of war would never become its advocate," he said.

The general added that "we still must face the realities of life — violence among nations is a harsh reality with which we must be able to cope."

GEN. LARSEN said five wars are being waged in Vietnam: Fundamentally political as is the case of all wars; sociological; economic; psychological; and military.

"In this case we are in a much more demanding war than in our previous ones," the general officer declared.

Gen. Larsen holds the Distinguished Service Cross and Silver Star Medal from World War II plus 23 other decorations.

MALCOLM EPLEY

NORTHBOND, US 395 — We knew we were in good country when it happened at a pa-and-na type service station in the Topaz Lake area.

Three elderly folk — two men and a woman — were sitting on the tongue of an old wagon in the shade.

The old guys, smoking their pipes in solid comfort, stayed right there in the shade while the woman came over in the hot sun, serviced us with gasoline and a windshield wipe.

In our all-male company, this was clear evidence of excellent tradition and proper distribution of the work load between the sexes. We recommend it for widespread emulation.

FIVE of us are bound — as indicated in a previous note here — for the Sacramento River Delta country where we've lined up a houseboat trip. My noble companions are Walt Hoffman, Dr. Logan Jackson and Hank DeLacy of Long Beach and John Wyatt, ex-Long Beacher now living in Lake San Marcus.

Going to the Stockton area by way of Reno isn't exactly a direct routing, a fact that even has us a little puzzled. There has been some argument as to who suggested it. There has been some talk about financing the trip by some activities at Reno, but all of us have been to Nevada many times and know better.

We'll be lucky if we'll be able to divvy up the not inconsiderable week's rental fee for the houseboat.

BUT I'm glad we came this way because I've got a long-standing affection for US 395, which I began traveling over two decades ago when I lived in Oregon and my parents resided at La Puente.

It's a great route for speedy, unhampered motoring and the Sierra region it crosses offers some of the west's most spectacular scenery.

It's especially impressive on the northbound trip, as we've noted today.

Coming into the Owens Valley, our left was flanked by the rugged, towering ramparts of the Sierra, crowned by Mt. Whitney, excluding Alaska continental America's highest peak. From the lower valley this escapement looks dry, treeless and forbidding, but fascinating, nevertheless.

THE valley, whose early-day residents say it was raped by Los Angeles for water, is desert-like in the lower stretches.

But coming on north, we rolled through attractive, tree-studded towns like Lone Pine, Independence, Olancha and Big Pine. And then into Bishop, the lively center of a great outdoor sports region. Lunching at Bishop, we listened to the inevitable talk about fishing, pack trips and skiing.

The run north from Bishop is the finest section of the route, scenery-wise. Here the highway passes by such noted lakes as Crowley (where we didn't see one fishing boat!), Mono and Topaz. It climbs from the valley into the heart of the Sierra, with the patches of snow on the mountains making them an impressive mosaic.

At picturesque Bridgeport, a "must" is a stop to look at the frozen fish in a box in front of a sporting goods store. Those big ones, caught in nearby Bridgeport reservoir and other waters, always stir the vitals of the sports fisherman.

MOUNTAIN fishing is not for us, this time. We'll be trying our luck in the placid waters of the delta a little later. I'm not certain how active it will be. I've envisioned doing it with a line tied to my big toe.

Anyhow, interesting experiences lie ahead as we head down into the lush Carson Valley. I'll let you know about them in the next installment of this journal.

The Long Beach Firemen's Memorial Association's 12th annual fireworks and variety show highlights Fourth of July events in the area Friday.

While Southlanders planned for long holiday weekend relaxation, words of caution went out from the National Safety Council and local law enforcement agencies.

Besides urging motorists to remain alert on highways over the holiday the council declared its opposition to the use of fireworks by adults and children. It urged that displays be conducted only by professionals under controlled conditions.

FIREWORKS ARE banned in Long Beach. Various minor Fourth of July items are permitted in surrounding county territory and in Orange County. Questions about particular items should be directed to the local police agency.

On the holiday, the annual fireworks and variety show will be held at 7 p.m. at Veterans Stadium. As in the past, proceeds will benefit a charity. This year, the Long Beach Children's Clinic will be beneficiary.

The Long Beach show will include Jerry Van Dyke as master of ceremonies, with entertainment by Molly Bee, The Raddells, Hobo Kelly and the Stardusters.

The preshow announcer will be Capt. Garrett Cady, and music will be by Don Heaston and his band. The fire department clowns and the championship Long Beach City College gym team will participate. Firefighting apparatus will be paraded.

'Safe, Sane' Fireworks Are Neither

By CHUCK CHEATHAM
Staff Writer

"Safe and sane fireworks" are neither safe nor sane, Fire Chief Tullio J. Rizzo and Police Chief William J. Mooney warned today.

Furthermore, they added, the sale, possession and use of any type of fireworks in Long Beach is illegal.

Every year the police make arrests for "possession of pyrotechnics" and the bail is $35, Chief Mooney said.

Both chiefs urged Long Beach residents to celebrate Independence Day Friday in a safe and sane manner without the use of firecrackers or fireworks.

"While states in which two thirds of the nation's population live have laws against fireworks," Chief Rizzo said, "every year approximately 5,000 persons are injured, some fatally, by fireworks."

Chief Rizzo pointed out that sparklers, considered harmless by most persons, burn with a high temperature of 2,000 degrees Fahrenheit.

"Even when the sparkler has ceased sparking," the fire chief said, "the temperature is so high that it can cause burns to the person or easily ignite buildings or grass."

Chief Rizzo and Chief Mooney suggested attending the firemen's annual fireworks and variety show at the Veterans Memorial Stadium or free fireworks display at Queens Park, formerly the Nu-Pike.

Who could say anything but, "It was a beautiful day Saturday?" Surf lapped lazily against sand, and sunshine—so long a stranger to the shoreline—twinkled happily on the white-edged Pacific. Southland beaches, forlorn these many weekends of cloudiness, resounded with the frolicking of one of the biggest crowds of the season. Today should bring more of the same, according to a preliminary forecast, with temperatures in the 70s and a sunny afternoon.

By WALT MURRAY

On the back lot of a Signal Hill oil company, Saturday, about 30 men aged from 10 to 75 began a 27-hour endurance contest.

They're competing with thousands of like-minded enthusiasts on hillsides, open plains and ocean peninsulas from Hawaii to Maine.

Supplied with coffee, lemonade and roast beef by wives and girlfriends, they're entered in the nation's largest participant sport — amateur radio Field Day.

"Our goal is to contact as many different field day stations in as many different states as possible during the contest," says George Riggins, president of the Associated Radio Amateurs of Long Beach.

Bold ideas advanced on environment...

PRACTICAL politicians as well as political theorists will be on the alert for innovations growing out of a three-day regional development conference just ended in Seattle.

No noteworthy decisions were taken at the meeting, but its whole tone was one that could lead to experimentation on a scale never attempted in this country.

THE RECURRENT theme among 400 delegates was that the northwest states collectively must choose between daring action or environmental disaster in their efforts to save a relatively unspoiled environment.

The conference had a regional outlook from the start, for it was a joint undertaking of Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Alaska and Canada's British Columbia. Officials in all these states hope to act in time to head off all the forms of pollution that afflict more densely settled sections of the United States.

Even in the Northwest, despite its vast expanses of wilderness, pollution is more than a threat for the future. Dr. Athelstan Spilhaus, president-elect of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, noted that estuaries, bays, lakes and streams constitute one of the region's chief natural resources. Yet, he added, they are "surely and rapidly being poisoned."

Impatience with the ineffectiveness of existing political entities and methods was prevalent. Former Gov. Philip H. Hoff of Vermont, as an example, asserted: "The states are on the firing line. Either they produce or there will be no recourse but to move around them. The stakes are too high."

What he seems to have had in mind was a regional organization, with considerable powers, for the whole northwest. And Gov. Daniel J. Evans of Washington spoke of "developing a strategy of regional growth." He mentioned social and economic problems as well as the protection of natural resources.

MANY HIGHLY-POPULATED areas, among them Southern California, would not need to cross state boundaries to find chronic conflicts among small local agencies. Yet so far they have made little headway toward area-wide collaboration.

The whole nation will owe gratitude to the Pacific Northwest if it can provide a new spirit and a few solid working rules for reversing the course of physical spoilage and governmental frustration.

will report on its one and only assignment: the drafting of specifications for a detailed study.

Who will make this study, how much it will cost and how long it will take are unknown at this time. However, the chairman of the State Water Resources Control Board, Kerry W. Mulligan, says the state will have some funds for the project and will ask the federal government for more. He thinks the study might be started by next January.

All of which indicates a leisurely pace and no sense of urgency. Little wonder that the regional board's leading crusader for conservation, Mrs. Ellen Stern Harris, takes a dim view of the whole procedure, including the appointment of the task force.

But the slow and placid approach to harbor pollution is an old story. A Wilmington vegetable oil company currently being prosecuted for violating Los Angeles Harbor rules has admitted dumping untreated wastes into the harbor since 1923.

killed while reaching toward his back pocket for a card explaining his handicap.

The letter writer reports he voted for Charles Stenwig, the former police detective who was elected mayor of Minneapolis in a "law and order" campaign, and adds "I quite agree with Mayor Yorty."

Then he confesses, "I have certainly had second thoughts about this law and order theme. If it means a policy of such toughness, it is too strong and hardly fair as Mayor Yorty implies."

POLICEMEN MUST make instant judgments. If they are well trained and disciplined, however, they will seldom make grievous mistakes about the necessity to shoot first and ask questions later.

The political mood of the moment should not be interpreted by law officers or anyone else as granting immunity from standards and rules designed to protect everyone except the lawless.

... but so slow these 'foes' of pollution

OFFICIALS responsible for cleaning up water pollution in the Los Angeles and Long Beach harbors have adopted a sort of longrange attitude toward their job. And the proper response by conservationists may be stated briefly: What else is new?

The principal local official agency in this field is the Los Angeles Regional Water Control Board. It has decided that there isn't enough technical knowledge available to decide just what waste products can be tolerated without totally poisoning the harbor waters. So it has established a task force composed of representatives of 19 official and unofficial groups.

IN DUE course, possibly by next November, the task force

'Law, order' need doesn't exempt police

THE OBVIOUS potency of "law and order" as a political slogan this year places an extra value on the discipline and professional conduct of police departments.

Everyone except the criminal and revolutionary classes believes in law and order, as that phrase used to be understood. But it will lose its magic if police officers in large numbers use it as an excuse to go trigger-happy. Already some voters are beginning to have second thoughts.

A FORMER Long Beach resident who now lives in Minneapolis has written a letter to this newspaper protesting the fatal shooting by Los Angeles policemen of a man who suffered from a speech defect. The victim was

Moscow seeks U.S. support on China

WASHINGTON — The Soviet charge d'affaires here, Yuri N. Tcherniakov, recently called on the State Department to deliver a copy of the bitter protest note which Moscow had sent Peking blaming it for troubles on the Sinkiang border. Tcherniakov went on to make a little speech on the evils of the Chinese.

This kind of effort to cuddle up to the U.S. in a fight between Communist countries is no longer unusual, but the gesture would have been startling before the Soviet-Chinese clash on the Ussuri River early this spring. It obviously represents not only an intense sharpening of the Sino-Soviet conflict but Moscow's growing preoccupation with its China problem, perhaps above all else.

THE SOVIET Union has been trying with increasing urgency to elicit some sort of support from the U.S. in its quarrel with China. The effort has gone as far as indirect warnings that progress in the many areas where Russia and the U.S. are seeking agreement could be endangered by any American gesture of detente toward China.

The reason Tcherniakov delivered the note was that Soviet Ambassador Anatoliy Dobrynin had suddenly been called home to Moscow for consultations. He went in to see U.S. Secretary of State William Rogers before he left and talked about the Middle East, preparations for missile talks and other subjects currently at direct issue between Moscow and Washington.

FLORA LEWIS

But U.S. experts believe the real reason for Dobrynin's trip home was to report on American attitudes toward China. A number of other Soviet ambassadors were called home at the same time, mostly from the Far East, so the assumption is that Moscow is now conducting a special policy review on its tense relations with China, perhaps even weighing some important new step against Peking.

FOR SOME time now, the Russians have used every opportunity they could invent to question U.S. officials on American intentions toward China. Every time there is a hint that there might be a renewal of the interrupted Chinese-American talks in Warsaw, the Russians get the jitters and don't mind showing it.

The American position so far has been to play it mute. The Russians are told the U.S. has no intention of changing its policy but is still interested in contact with Peking. In fact, the U.S. has put out feelers for renewal of the talks but there has been no response from Peking. That may come soon, however, because after three years of virtual self-quarantine, the Chinese are sending ambassadors out again and they are having talks with Canada about establishing relations.

Clearly, gestures toward detente with China provide the strongest possible bargaining leverage with which the U.S. might move Moscow. In comparison, restrictions on east-west trade, deploying anti-ballistic missiles, holding the line in the Middle East are fly-weight negotiating counters.

IT IS strange, then, that Washington makes no use of it. Nor is it just a matter of exercising more effective persuasion on the Soviets. No Southeast Asia settlement is likely to work for long unless the Chinese are somehow involved in agreements made. Long-range U.S. Pacific interests cannot ignore China.

Worst of all, if the U.S. does allow itself to be dragged into the Sino-Soviet conflict on Russia's side, whether deliberately or just by the inertia of clinging to its present hard line against Peking, there looms the ultimate risk of a world-wide color war.

IN THE short term, the medium term and the long term, it is profoundly in America's interest to do what it can to take the sting out of non-relations with China. At the moment, China isn't willing. But the U.S. can make a start nonetheless by dropping its anti-Peking stand in the United States and abandoning the useless trade embargo.

By the time Peking is willing, it may be too late for America to stay neutral between Communist China and Soviet Russia. The time may be approaching when any attempt to be even-handed will be tantamount to taking sides. This is a case where doing nothing may be risking all.

Party dogma losing ground as a solution

BILL KING is an unlikely heretic. In 1964 he was state speakers chairman for Rockefeller's presidential bid in California. In 1966 he was executive director of Californians for Reagan. In 1968 he was speakers chairman for Sen. Thomas Kuchel and chairman of Southern Californians for Nixon.

This year he was chairman of Republican Congressman Alphonzo Bell's unsuccessful primary race for mayor of Los Angeles, then switched to cochairman of Negro Democrat Tom Bradley's campaign against Mayor Sam Yorty.

From Reagan to Bradley? That's right. And, King says, if the 1970 Reagan Republicans welcome all elements of the Republican party in that campaign he would work for Reagan again.

William T. King, 36, a successful Los Angeles attorney with a home in Bel Air, "caught on" rather recently, he admits, to a need for more problem solving and less party-line politics.

A Bradley victory would have nurtured that need, King believes. But with failure there, he turned to a new mode. He starts this week as a "resident expert" on urban affairs at the UCLA faculty-sponsored Institute of Government and Public Affairs.

HE WANTS TO USE his legal and political background to investigate the whole field of law and order. His goal is understanding. Blacks must understand what law and order means to the white man. Whites have to make clear that the police force and "law and order" are not used "to keep the black man in his place," King says.

Everybody is hip that the young do not trust the "too conservative" establishment, King notes, but "that lack of confidence by the young is matched by the 'old' who vote for law and order and consider the establishment too liberal."

King says voting over the past two years has been against the "ins" for this reason. By his interpretation, that held true even for Yorty's victory, i.e., Bradley's primary victory and his lead in the polls enabled Yorty to assume the role of challenger; Bradley came to be regarded as the "liberal establishment."

It's a new political world, King contends. "We're entering a period of concurrent majorities—a host of different, mobile and changing minorities which may comprise, at any given election, a majority."

IT'S EXTREMELY difficult to govern under these conditions, King says, and points to Nixon as example. "Nixon's walking a tight rope. And so, at the Air Force Academy he hits the liberals. A little later he is praising former Chief Justice Earl Warren. He's simply trying to hold together this shifting majority."

"It's a different electorate, freer to move beyond partisan appeals." The GOP, says King, "has as many from the right wing as we're going to get. And the young are not on the right. We've got to get the young and the blacks."

In the Bradley campaign, Republican King got plenty of them. They were more surprised than he, often remarking, "If there were more Republicans like you, we could become Republicans."

Says King, "I'd like to give them the option."

Nixon lags on health care

SINCE JANUARY, as one of the leaders of the loyal opposition, I have tried to put forth my ideas in as positive and constructive a way as possible. Like most Americans, I think the new administration deserves a chance to come up with new programs and put its stamp on our foreign and domestic policies.

But the Nixon administration now may be graded in two areas:

- Improvement of the quality of education.
- Improvement and availability of quality medical care.

In both areas, I believe the Nixon administration deserves a grade of "poor." The Nixon formula in both education and health has been to drift, to cut expenditures, to do nothing to solve the difficult problems that we face.

LET US LOOK this week at the health and medical care record of the new administration. The question should be asked: who has been speaking for the public interest in the field of health and medical care?

The answer is: nobody.

For five months, with medical costs soaring, the Nixon administration has had no top health official to represent the public interest.

For five months, with growing evidence of abuses by physicians, dentists, and druggists in the Medicaid and Medicare programs, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Robert H. Finch had battled with Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen over who should fill the important post of assistant secretary of health and scientific affairs.

Back in January, Secretary Finch said he wanted Dr. John Knowles, director of Massachusetts General Hospital, as his assistant secretary.

By threatening to fight the Knowles nomination on the Senate floor, Senator Dirksen was able to hold up any appointment for five months, thereby creating a serious leadership vacuum at HEW.

AT STAKE IS the $10 billion a year federal investment in health and medical care.

At stake is the $50 billion a year we pay for medical care, an average of over $200 for every man, woman, and child.

At stake is the leadership and coordination of the many health and medical care efforts scattered throughout HEW and other federal agencies.

Where do we stand on health and medical care in this country?

Despite the miracles of science and the drama of heart transplants, many of our 30 million poor do not receive minimum medical care.

The problem is not that we do not know how to provide top quality health and medical care. The problem is one of planning, leadership, coordination, and commitment.

We know we need more physicians and nurses. We know neighborhood health centers can reduce hospital use by as much as 80 per cent by preventing serious illness.

WE KNOW THERE are less costly alternatives to hospital care such as outpatient care, home health services, extended care facilities, and nursing homes.

We know the quality of health care in many rural areas is becoming a critical problem.

We know mental patients respond better if treated in community mental health centers rather than being put away in state mental hospitals.

We know prepayment programs can help reduce hospital use by encouraging people to take advantage of preventive and diagnostic health services. Yet 30 million Americans have no health insurance at all, and two-thirds of our personal health costs are not covered by insurance.

We know many children are permanently damaged by inadequate prenatal and infant care.

We know we are paying a heavy price for the disorganization and fragmentation of our health services. Better planning and use of biomedical communications networks can help end expensive duplication and provide better medical care at lower cost.

Federal leadership is needed. The federal government must play a much needed supportive role. I do not advocate federal control, or federal interference in the doctor-patient relationship or in the setting of fees.

WHAT KIND OF leadership are we getting?

President Nixon has ordered $300 million in Medicare and Medicaid cuts which will lower mental health care and nursing home benefits. He advocates a $100 million cut in Hill-Burton grants for hospital construction. He is not expanding neighborhood health centers or medical education programs.

And worst of all, for five months the Republican administration will not take the lead, it is up to the Democratic majority in Congress to take over the leadership responsibility of helping to provide better health care to every American.

The sick, the elderly, the babies—every American—deserve better treatment than they are getting.

Three students (and one parent) offer views on campus unrest

Listen in on almost any coffee break roundtable and you're likely to find that Topic A has to do with American youth and the "situation" on high school, college and university campuses. And the odds are pretty good that much of the chatter will be devoted to lambasting the "militants and dissidents" and demanding to know "why the other students don't do something." Following are excerpts from four letters, three by students and one by a parent who observed a number of "concerned" high school students in action in Long Beach.

Perhaps some of the questions about the "youth problem" are partially answered here.

Letter No. 1 is written by Charles S. Paul, a sophomore at Stanford University. Here's what he says in part:

"In light of the recent Senate investigations into the connections between the Students for Democratic Society and the Communist party I believe that there should be some clarification of the actual support that the SDS receives from other students.

At Stanford . . . the SDS . . . could claim approximately 30 members. They are regarded as hard core radicals and very few people listen to them with any seriousness. What is important, I feel, is the fact that the protests on our campuses today are merely participated in by the SDS and aren't necessarily by the SDS. Concerned and interested students at Stanford, for instance, protested over issues and not as the result of urging of any hard core radicals. The issues and situations present in this society today obviously do not precipitate peaceful or rational change.

Students, as most young people, are frustrated by the slow pace of this society in matters of correcting the violent and malevolent factors in this system. I urge adults to keep an open mind and not close their ears to rational discussion taking place on some college campuses. Every protest is not SDS formulated and most students do indeed realize that our real enemies are the communists and not our government. I also urge adults not to condemn peaceful or non-violent measures which worried and aware students use to express their justified dissatisfaction with the older generation's efforts to cure the troubled world and domestic scene. Discussion is needed and the generation gap can only widen if the news is misinterpreted and one side's ears become closed."

Letter No. 2 was written to a state senator and circulated widely by him. The author is Ronald Kelly, Berkeley, an honors student, National Merit Scholar and Eagle Scout. Here's what he had to say:

"I'd like you to know that you're going to force me and a lot of good students like me to join the militants, if you pass the bills now before you which aim at squashing campus demonstrations.

"I hope you make no mistake about one point: most of your "silent majority" supports the programs the militants propose. The argument between us and the militants is in no way, whether or not the changes the militants demand should be made — it is only whether or not the only way to achieve these changes is through student strikes and violent disruption. The "silent majority" supports the programs the militants demand. The University must change to meet the needs of blacks and other minorities. It must change to give students a voice in shaping the direction of their own education. On this we are agreed.

"The militants are telling the rest of us students however, that society will never willingly change, that we must all become violent militants and force change upon it. Don't prove that they are right. If you as legislators must do anything in the way of political pressure on the University, then pressure it to adopt the programs of change.

"If you pass the legislation you are now considering, what you are saying to me and to the rest of the good students is that the militants are right — that your only response to our repeated cries for change in the University is to try to get rid of those who are becoming loudest and most persistent in their demands.

"Please don't make me into a militant, I don't believe in violence, and I don't believe it's the right way to change the University."

Letter No. 3 is written by Donald J. Davis, Felton, a Long Beach youth and recent senior at the University of California at Santa Cruz. Expressing concern at the "growing violence and lack of communication" in America, he commented:

"Here in northern California revolution is becoming a reality. Conflicting ideals and divergent lifestyles are creating an intolerable chasm in our society; polarizing the population and undermining our commitment to the democratic process and the traditional ideals which underpin it.

"Radicalism has become a legitimate social force, and all attempts to suppress its growing momentum only serve to enhance its legitimacy and sustain its growing appeal. Too many Americans are impervious to the painful reality that our present social order is shamefully unjust and dangerously inadequate. These Americans have no response to give, they can give no rational justification for the growing militarism and capacity for violence in American society. They have no answer to give to impatient blacks who remain manacled to their impoverished and sub-human ghettos. In the midst of wealth and abundance, pockmarked with pockets of poverty and scarred by deep furrows of intolerance, these Americans cling to their cherished principles of liberty and justice for all. When confronted with the reality of American life their sacred principles crumble, and they become indignant. Loyalty to the status quo sanctions the most deplorable measures to squash dissidents and preserve the present social order.

"Unfortunately, those Americans who are devoted to the present social arrangement have but one recourse in response to the radical challenge — political suppression. In the name of Americanism they have revived the doctrine of Might makes Right.

"Perhaps the mounting tension and violence can be tempered if we guarantee open dialogue between conflicting interests. Factual and unbiased news reporting is imperative if we expect to retain any semblance of the democratic process. The news media must re-dedicate itself to objective and informative reporting. But unfortunately, it has been incredibly negligent in these very critical times."

Final letter was written by Dr. Leon J. Pinsker of Lakewood to the Long Beach Board of Education. Dr. Pinsker refers in his letter to an unofficial, day long "convocation" held June 7 in Lakewood Village Community Church by some 200 high school students from Long Beach. Ralph Hinman, our education editor who attended the unsanctioned conference, reported that no major conclusions were reached by the students but that he was deeply impressed with the intelligence, sincerity and dedication of the students. Portions of Dr. Pinsker's letter follow:

"WHEN I FIRST listened to some of the "gripes" of the students, I brushed them off as somewhat childish and "run of the mill" complaining. However, I began to develop a new respect for their position and more important I began to listen to high school students!

"I was rather surprised that there was no Administrative and Board representation because these groups had refused to participate . . .

"I am really sorry that official representation was not present. We few parents who participated are convinced that a dialogue such as occurred on that sunny Saturday will go a long way in preventing irresponsible people from creating and inciting irresponsible acts.

"However, if we as a parent and teacher generation, fail to heed the call of our youth, if we prevent their reaching us with their dialogue, if we fail to recognize that some problems do exist, if we fail to acknowledge that change can be beneficial, especially when guided and controlled by responsible people, if we fail to accept the challenge that these young people have thrust upon us, we will most assuredly fail as educators and parents, we will most assuredly lose them to others perhaps more intent on rapid change and more impatient with our generation.

"We can, together with an enlightened student body and a school administration, go forward toward a goal that could bring the Long Beach Unified School District before the eyes of the nation. I hope our leaders have the foresight to take advantage of this opportunity. A nation will be beholden to us for it. It is not too late."

L. A. C. SAYS Interest and fines paid by government

By L. A. COLLINS Sr.

The record high interest rates now being charged for loans is eased for the borrower by a reduction in his taxes. This applies to the small borrower as well as the large corporations. They can charge off this interest on their tax return. If they are in the 30 per cent tax bracket it means the government is paying 30 per cent of the interest. Corporations in the 52.8 per cent tax bracket — including the surcharge — save 52.8 per cent of the interest charge on federal returns as well as the amount of state tax they pay. This is one angle that, to some extent, eases the pressure of high interest rates. It is a normal and justified write off of taxable income. But it is an indication of how high interest rates hurts government in getting less money in taxes.

There is another "write off" system that is going to cost government a lot of taxes this year. This will be because the stock market plunge has caused many shareowners to sell out at a loss. They can write off that loss against their normal income and thereby pay less taxes because of those losses. This is also a normal way which helps to reduce the loss incurred in selling stocks or other assets at a loss.

THERE IS HOWEVER one "write off" that does not seem reasonable. That is allowing a company convicted of law breaking in unlawful price fixing to write off two-thirds of the fines imposed on it when convicted. On this basis a company fined $1,000,000 can write off $750,000 — thereby saving about $400,000 in taxes it would pay the government. The National Federation of Independent Business gives the views of its 225,000 members as follows:

A tax write-off of penalties against violators of the nation's anti-trust laws doesn't make sense to most of the nation's independent business men. A majority, at least, agree with Rep. Emanuel Celler of New York that companies guilty of such things as price-fixing should not be able to write off civil penalties as "ordinary and necessary" business expense.

Under a 1964 Internal Revenue Service ruling, they have been able to do this. Any judgment in a civil treble damages suit exceeding actual damages has been deductible from tax returns of the guilty firms. With big companies now paying an income tax rate of 52.8 per cent, including surtax, this write-off softens the punishment substantially. Congressman Celler, after trying unsuccessfully to get Internal Revenue to change its ruling, has introduced legislation which would clearly make damages imposed under the Clayton Antitrust Act not deductible by the defendants.

The IRS ruling followed a celebrated case in which the government indicted major electrical equipment companies for conspiracy to fix prices to government and industry customers about eight years ago. Representative Celler recalls: "The defendants admitted their responsibility and pleaded guilty to the charges. Substantial fines were imposed and several corporate officials went to jail. In the wake of these government victories, more than 2,000 private cases were filed against General Electric, Westinghouse and other electrical equipment manufacturers."

CONGRESS AUTHORIZED treble damage civil suits in the Clayton Act as an important adjunct to government antitrust enforcement. But, says Congressman Celler, the IRS ruling "frustrates the national policy that makes price-fixing in interstate and foreign commerce a criminal offense." He maintains that the treble damage provision is punitive in nature and such penalties should not be deductible as business expenses. When Internal Revenue ruled the payments were income to plaintiffs, its ruling has this effect.

More than 500 companies are currently pressing charges against eight of the nation's leading plumbing manufacturers for alleged overcharges in a price-fixing conspiracy, involving more than a billion dollars of sales. Three companies were convicted of the conspiracy and five others pleaded no contest. Unless the present ruling is changed, civil damages awarded in these cases will be tax write-offs. With Congress now intent upon tax reform, the independent businessmen believe this tax loophole needs plugging.

Nixon works to put own stamp on the presidency

WASHINGTON — Richard Nixon has gone to elaborate lengths to place his own stamp on the presidency. He deliberately adopted a style, say intimates, that would contrast with that of his predecessor. His orderly, go-slow approach was intended to dramatize the difference from Lyndon Johnson's strenuous pace.

Because of LBJ's spur-of-the-moment scheduling, for example, President Nixon carefully lays out his schedule as far in advance as events will permit. This sometimes upsets the Secret Service, which would prefer that he withheld his travel plans for security reasons.

NIXON won't even use teleprompters because of the attention Johnson's fancy, transparent teleprompters attracted. He always used teleprompters in the past. But now he makes the extra effort to memorize short statements, which he scribbles in advance on legal-size yellow pads. The longer speeches he reads from the script, glancing up from the manuscript to look into the TV cameras.

LBJ's publicized midday naps and dips in the White House pool, au naturel, prompted aides to spread the word that the new President doesn't indulge in such habits.

Herb Klein, the new communications czar, explained to reporters that the water was too tepid for a rugged surf swimmer like Nixon.

"You could mix instant coffee in it and drink it," Klein said after poking a finger into the White House pool. The only way to coax the President into the pool, Klein suggested, would be to "pour in about a ton of Morton's and then figure out some way to churn up some waves."

The truth is that Nixon usually takes a 20-minute nap after lunch and swims half-a-dozen laps in the pool in the evening. You can be sure, however, that he'll never permit photographers to picture him holding poolside conferences with aides as Johnson did.

NIXON has also removed all traces of LBJ from the President's oval office. He has ripped out all the push buttons and electronic gadgets that Johnson loved. In place of LBJ's 42-button desk phone, Nixon's has only half-a-dozen buttons.

Gone are the muffled news tickers and the huge, three-screen TV console which enabled Johnson to check what the wire services were reporting and to watch all three networks at once. The President has also completely revamped the interior of Air Force One, so that it no longer looks like the same plane on the inside.

The message is clear: Richard Nixon wants the world to know there's a new President in the White House.

Schools to Use A Chicano Book

By BOB ANDREW
Staff Writer

Banning High School in Wilmington will use a new book on the problems and aspirations of Mexican-American citizens in special classes when school resumes in September.

The book, "Mexican-American: Readings for Students in Mexican-American Studies," is being published by the Los Angeles City School System. Previously teachers had to conduct their own research and select appropriate reading material.

"WE WERE unable to find any books on the market for this course," said Dr. Jack P. Crowther, superintendent of schools, "so we assembled and published our own. It should be valuable in helping students understand this part of our society."

Federal grants under the Elementary and Secondary Education Act paid publishing costs for the book which will also be used in ten other Los Angeles high schools.

IT INCLUDES 24 articles on economics, labor, language and other aspects of Mexican-American life. The articles were selected from professional journals, newspapers, books and magazines by a committee of teachers and administrators.

The 320-page book also contains a list of Mexican-American recipients of the Congressional Medal of Honor and the text of the Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo by which Mexico ceded California to the United States.

Some Banning High teachers have recently completed a five-day workshop on methods of using the book in their classes. Other teachers will attend the second workshop session in the week of July 18.

The cover was designed by TV artist Jesus Gutierrez of San Pedro. It features a portrait of a Mexican-American citizen and reflects the Indian, Spanish and Catholic background of the Mexican Culture.

ACTOR TALKS TO LULAC DELEGATES

The 40th national convention of the League of United Latin-American Citizens ended its three-day run at Hyatt's Edgewater Inn Saturday, and the estimated 500 delegates left for home this morning.

An address by actor Gilbert Roland highlighted a banquet at the hotel Saturday night. The actor's topic was the heritage, culture and honor of being an American of Latin descent.

Gov. Ronald Reagan addressed the convention by telephone from his Sacramento office during a luncheon gathering Saturday.

The convention began Thursday.

Prowler Gets Mower

A prowler wheeled away a $115 lawnmower from the back yard of Lloyd H. Musgrove, 348 Dayman St., Long Beach police said Saturday.

TEN MILLIONTH VISITOR TO CAROUSEL OF PROGRESS

RADIO AMATEURS IN FIELD TEST

first in our class," he says. "We hope to do well again this year."

As the contest began Saturday afternoon, the dots and dashes of Morse code and radiotelephone calls of "CQ Field Day" rang out across the lot, donated by the Signal Oil and Gas Co. at 28th Street and Junipero Avenue.

"We have about 10 stations on the air — one on every major amateur radio band," Riggins said.

The stations are housed in tents, trailers, and autos.

Power for the installation comes from a 25 kilowatt generator that will chug away on the Field Day site until the contest ends this afternoon.

Riggins explained that one purpose of the contest is to test emergency operating gear — and test the ham operators themselves — so they'll be ready to operate under similar rugged conditions in time of disaster.

"Since we perform that service, we thought we could get use of part of a city park for the contest, but the city turned down our request," Riggins lamented.

But, he said, the Signal Hill Oil Co. offered their property.

He invited ham radio operations in the Long Beach area to visit the installation today.

Jewish School Session Starts July 6

Gerald B. Bubis, 2671 Farwood Ave., Long Beach, will be director of the Hebrew Union College's new School of Jewish Communal Services at USC.

The first summer session of the new school opens Sunday, July 6.

The student body of the school — the only one of its kind in the nation — will include Jewish center and temple directors, community relations workers and teachers, psychotherapists and university graduate students.

Director Bubis said the school will offer courses concentrating on the values, knowledge and skills most likely to develop a commitment to careers in Jewish community service.

The school's second summer session will begin

AGENCY GETS GRANT TO HELP PATIENTS

A grant of $20,081 has been awarded to the Family Service of Long Beach Agency, Dr. Jean F. Crum, president of the American Cancer Society, Los Angeles County Branch, said Saturday.

The grant, effective July 1 for a year, is to enable the agency to continue and expand its homemaker services to cancer and chronically ill patients in the Long Beach area, according to Hugh McIssac, director of the agency.

A homemaker helps with food preparation, does marketing and sees that the patient is able to keep medical appointments.

The local agency is at 1047 Pine Ave.

Seal Beach Sets Events for July 4th

A sidewalk fashion show, featuring beautiful Jill Shelton, the current Miss Seal Beach, and a rough water swimming meet along the Seal Beach beach have been scheduled as part of the city annual Fourth of July Open House.

The Open House will open Tuesday, July 1, and continue through Sunday, July 6, sponsored by the Seal Beach Chamber of Commerce.

The fashion show, also featuring five other contestants in the city's recent beauty pageant, will begin at 11 a.m. Friday, July 1, along two blocks of downtown Main Street and continue until 2 p.m.

The swim meet will begin at 11 a.m. Sunday on the beach adjacent to the west side of the Seal Beach Pier. More than 200 swim clubs have been invited to participate and more than 300 entrants have already been received.

The meet will feature short-distance races for boys and girls 7 and 8 years old up to a mile-long event for both men and women. Several relay events will also be offered.

Standard Gets Right to Surrey

Permission for another geophysical survey along city streets has been granted by the City Council to Standard Oil Co. of California.

The company will use the "vibroseis" method in conducting the survey for oil potential along Del Amo Boulevard between the west city limits and Cherry Avenue, between Lakewood and Bellflower boulevards, and between Stevely Avenue and San Gabriel River.

The survey is to be conducted some time during the period from June 30 and Aug. 20.

OK Settlement in Breach of Contract Suit

A compromise settlement of $178,002 with Connolly-Pacific Co. on its breach of contract suit arising out of the shoreline development program has been approved by the City Council.

Connolly-Pacific Co. had claimed $604,330 damages, alleging its subcontractor, Constructors Aggregate Corp., had incurred these additional expenses because of two subsequent actions.

One involved installation of a power cable trench to the offshore drilling islands and the other occurred during dredging operations for the Rainbow Lagoon project.

Southland Band Tops

Jennifer's Hatbox, a musical group whose members live in Lakewood, Bellflower and Manhattan Beach, won first place in the vocal group division of Los Angeles County's 10th annual "Battle of the Bands." It was announced Saturday.

BE SAFE WITH PROFESSIONAL CARE — DEAL WITH A REALTOR

REALTORS OF THE WEEK

A mutual desire to establish and maintain a Real Estate brokerage company with a high level of personalized professional service to clients and customers in the Long Beach led to the formation of Equity Brokers, Inc. in 1966 by four local brokers, Ray Palmer, Charles Lane, Billie Phillips, and Walter Greenwood.

The group felt that by confining their talents and pooling their knowledge they would be able to offer much more to the community than would be possible if they acted as individual Brokers. Thus, the knowledge of the whole firm is made available in every transaction handled.

Response to this unusual approach seems to have proved a point. Equity Brokers, Inc. has handled a steadily increasing volume of high quality residential and investment properties every month since its inception.

The partners are all Realtor members of the Long Beach District Board of Realtors and have long and varied backgrounds in Business and Real Estate. All are active in Board affairs, in the Chamber of Commerce and in local service organizations. Equity Brokers occupies well appointed offices at 1046 Redondo Avenue, in a building that they recently purchased.

Influential Homes' Opening Adding to Lakewood History

Today's grand opening of Influential Homes' Lakewood will formally mark the return of the city of Lakewood of three key members of the development team that helped build the community in the early 1950s.

The trio, now principals in Butler-Harbour Construction Co., of Anaheim, are Merrill Butler Jr., the firm's president; L. B. Harbour Jr., executive vice president, and Doug Hoon, senior vice president.

With their all-new Influential Homes, built on one of the last available residential parcels in Lakewood, they are helping to complete the city they had a hand in building nearly two decades ago when 15,000 homes were built and sold by two companies in five years.

Butler was an engineering consultant who became project engineer for the firm's Lakewood development and helped design the Lakewood master plan, which has received much credit for enabling the community to grow into the city it is today.

IN 1956, THE three men formed Butler-Harbour Construction Co.

They have constructed over 4,700 houses — most of them bearing the Influential Homes tag — in 86 different neighborhoods in Los Angeles, Orange, Riverside, San Bernardino, Santa Barbara and San Diego Counties.

For their return to Lakewood, the Butler-Harbour principals did not leave much to chance.

"These are among the most researched plans we have ever offered," noted Butler. "All members of our design and marketing team made significant contributions."

"First, we talked to veteran staff members of our sales representatives, Walker and Lee, Inc."

These people have been selling homes in Lakewood since the early '50s and know all about its residential real estate market. We asked them to spell out exactly what kind of new homes would encourage people to move up out of their present smaller Lakewood houses," Butler said.

"OUR NATIONAL award-winning architect, Benjamin Urmston, AIA, then designed homes to meet these specifications," Butler said. "We took these plans back to the sales people for their evaluation to make sure these homes would be ideally tailored to the needs of Lakewood families that need more room but want to stay in the city because of its fine schools, parks, and shopping facilities — and its proximity to Los Angeles.

"We didn't stop there," added Harbour. "Our advertising agency, Vineyard Advertising, Inc., took these house plans and conducted a market study in the communities surrounding Lakewood. People who were looking at new homes in the area were asked to evaluate specially-drawn three-dimensional versions of these plans. The constructive input from this study was cranked into the designs and we entered our third phase of research."

"That was one of our Influential Home makers Design Conferences, which are coordinated by our public relations counseling firm, Larry Manzo Public Relations, Inc. The design panel, consisting of 12 women who had recently bought homes, was equally divided between those who had purchased our homes and those who had bought other homes," Butler said.

THE PANELISTS carefully went over the actual blueprints and marked their comments, criticisms and suggestions right on the plans," he added. "They made so many worthwhile suggestions that I can truly say these homes simply would not be as good as they are, if we had not had their help."

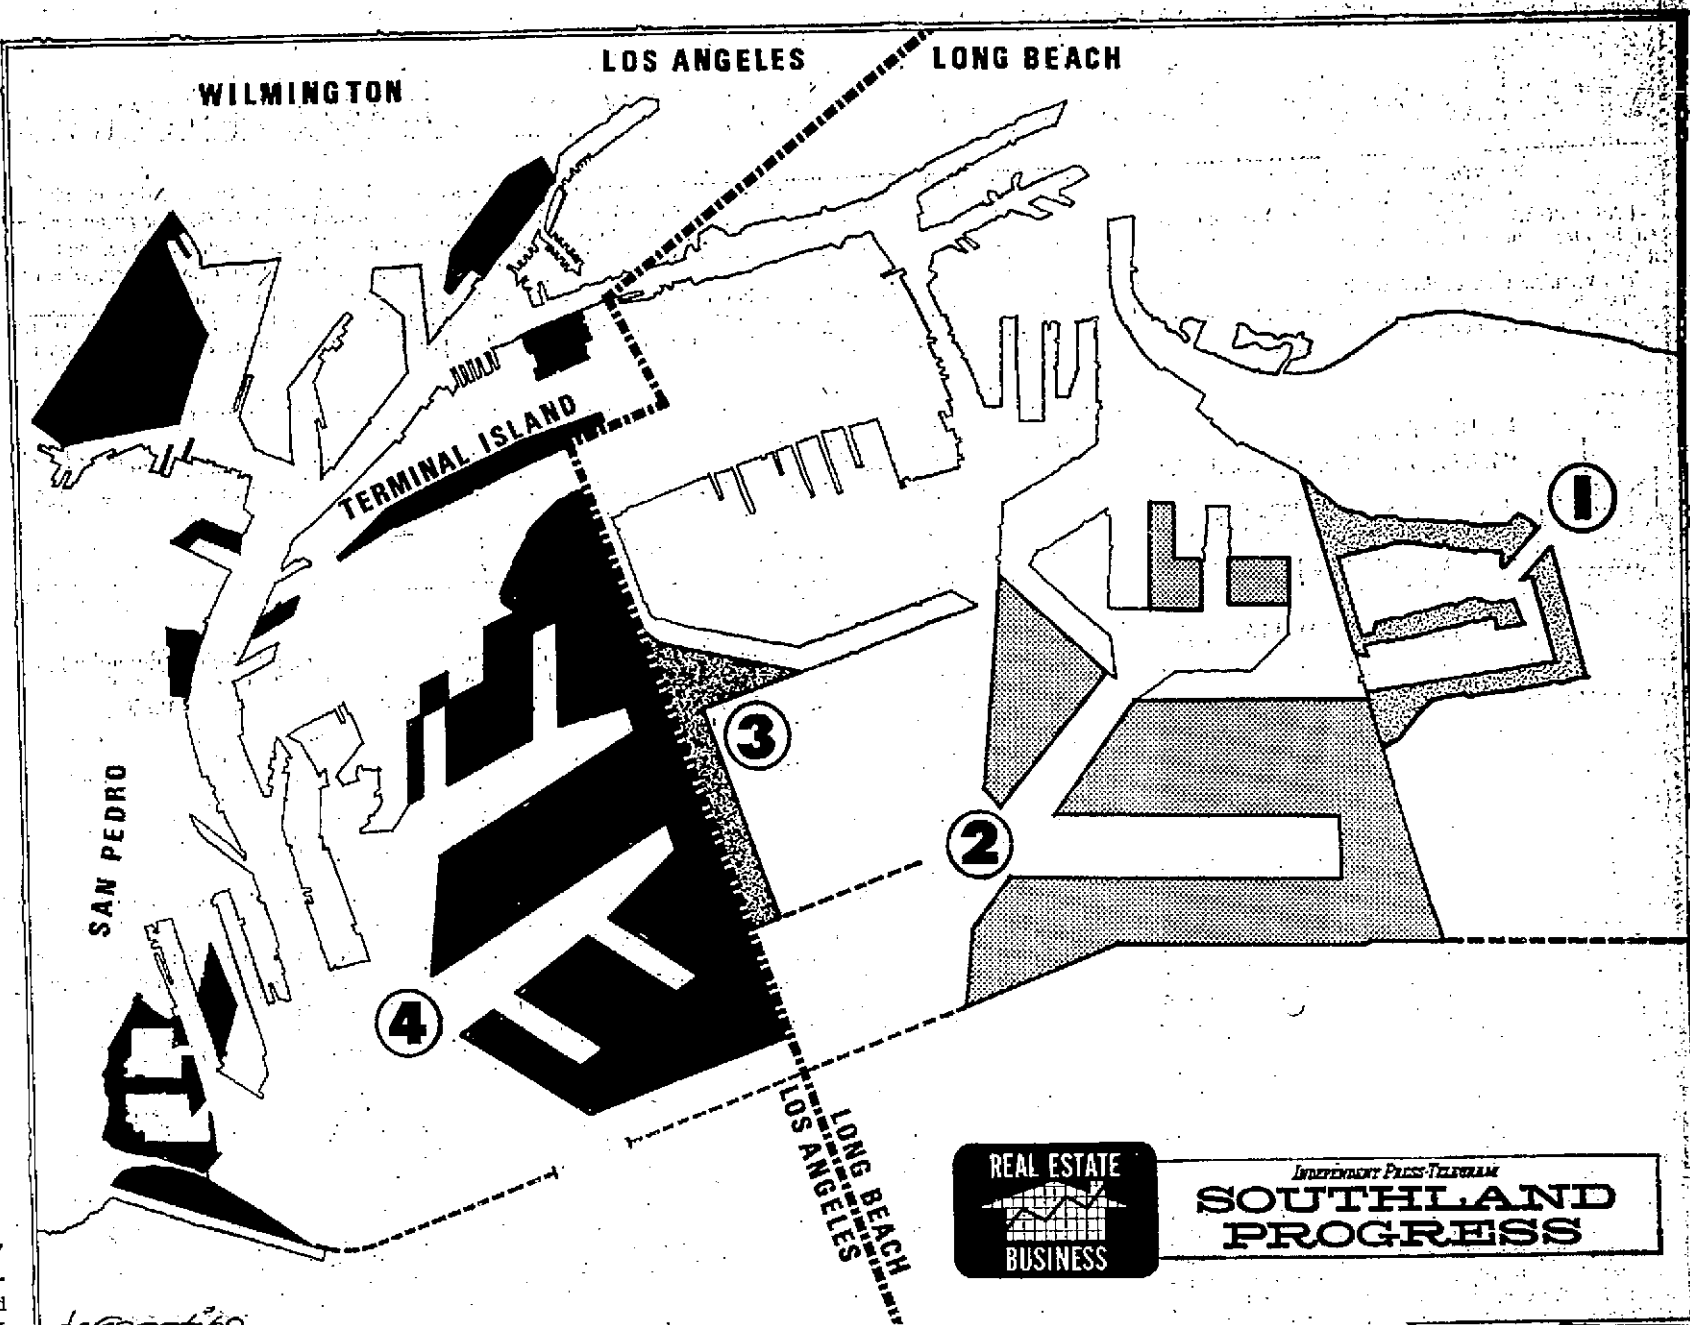

Harbour indicated that the panelists gave high marks to all four of the all-new plans making their debut at Lakewood but added proudly that one of the models, The Bloomfield, was unanimously approved.

The Bloomfield is a five-bedroom, two-story home. On the first floor are the spacious entry hall with twin closets, the two-story living and dining rooms, the kitchen, nook, family room, master suite, and a bedroom ideally located for a den or library.

On the second floor are three family bedrooms and two bonus "funspace" areas that may be used in a variety of ways with the decorated model showing one area as a children's play area and the other as a hobby room.

THE OTHER HOMES in the series include: the three-bedroom, one-story Parkwood; the four-bedroom, two-story Eastgate; and the most spacious model, the four-bedroom, two-story Princeton. Each model has its own unique features.

The Parkwood has an island kitchen counter and a step-up bathtub. The Eastgate has complete separation between the living room, dining room and family room; a central laundry room; and a 106-square-foot "trunk closet" (Continued on Page 10)

LOS ANGELES HARBOR PROPOSED EXPANSION (4) . . . Matches Suggested Long Beach Harbor Growth (1, 2, 3) in Future Years

REACHING OUT TO BREAKWATER

Harbors Eye Huge Expansions

By JACK O. BALDWIN
Marine Editor

Imaginative plans to create several thousand acres of new harbor land by literally lifting up the ocean floor have been revealed by engineers for the Ports of Long Beach and Los Angeles.

Plans to extend Pier J in the Port of Long Beach outward to the Federal Breakwater were described by Bob Hoffmaster, chief engineer, to delegates attending the Coastal Resources Development Seminar, held in the Offshore Center Building and sponsored by the World Dredging Conference Assn.

HOFFMASTER SAID AT LEAST 2,000 acres of new land will be needed to meet the demands of the shipping companies which are entering the containerized freight business and for those present companies who plan to expand their operations.

Between 80 to 90 million yards of fill will be needed to create 1,300 acres of new land in the Port of Los Angeles, Lawrence Whiteneck, chief engineer for the Los Angeles Harbor Department, told the delegates.

He said current plans already on the drafting board would result in the creation of 75 new berths.

Since future building costs are unpredictable, neither port official would estimate the cost of the huge projects.

HOFFMASTER, NOTING the Long Beach plans were "long range," said "We now feel it will all happen much more quickly than we estimated."

The chief engineer recalled how the "gloom spreaders and pessimists" labeled the development of the present 311-acre Pier J as "folly" and predicted the facility would never be fully utilized.

"Construction projects are now underway which when completed will result in the full development of Pier J," Hoffmaster said.

"Unless we create new land, we are out of business as far as future expansion of the Port of Long Beach is concerned," he said.

BOTH ENGINEERS SAID the new land would be created by using fill resulting from deepening channels by dredging. The deeper channels are necessary to permit the super-ships with deep draft to enter the port complex.

Whiteneck said as the expanding economy of the countries bordering the Pacific rim in the Far East continues to grow, thousands of tons of new cargo will move between all U.S. Pacific Coast ports and the Far East.

"Unless we plan now and act now in anticipation of that new trade, every port on the Pacific Coast will be snowed under," the Los Angeles port official predicted.

ALIGNMENT TOOL IN ALEUTIANS

Ostgaard Firm Aids AEC

Special to the Progress Section

The world's largest diameter, deep-bore test hole has been completed by the Atomic Energy Commission in the Aleutian Islands.

The hole was completed just prior to the shipment from Signal Hill of a giant tool which will be used in lining the Aleutian hole.

The 6,000-foot deep, 90-inch diameter test hole is the deepest ever used for an AEC test. The hole will be used for implantment of an experimental explosive device for a nuclear test.

It has been noted that the finished hole will be large enough to hold more than 450 Volkswagens stacked end to end.

To provide maximum safety for personnel during the tests, the hole will be lined with 100 60-foot lengths of 54-inch inside diameter high strength steel casing.

The giant centering and alignment tool was built by John T. Ostgaard & Associates and Hydro-Test, Inc., in Signal Hill.

It was airlifted from the Long Beach airport in a C-130 and transferred to a C-141 which carried the giant tool to the Aleutians.

THE AEC will use the new, 60,000 pound tool to center and align sections of casing as they are welded together and lowered into the hole. A similar tool will also be used for projects the AEC plans to undertake in central Nevada.

The 4-foot-6 diameter by 40-foot-6 long tool works inside the steel casings to center and align each joint of the steel shaft as it is put together for weldment.

The self-supported, hydraulically operated device will hold the casings straight and parallel to the shaft while welding takes place. Specially designed hydraulic cylinder assemblies within the tool assure accurate centering and alignment.

In the course of the project in the Aleutians, 60-foot sections of casing will be lowered into the predrilled hole. The special tool will be inserted into the lower casing and a second section of casing will be placed in position over the tool.

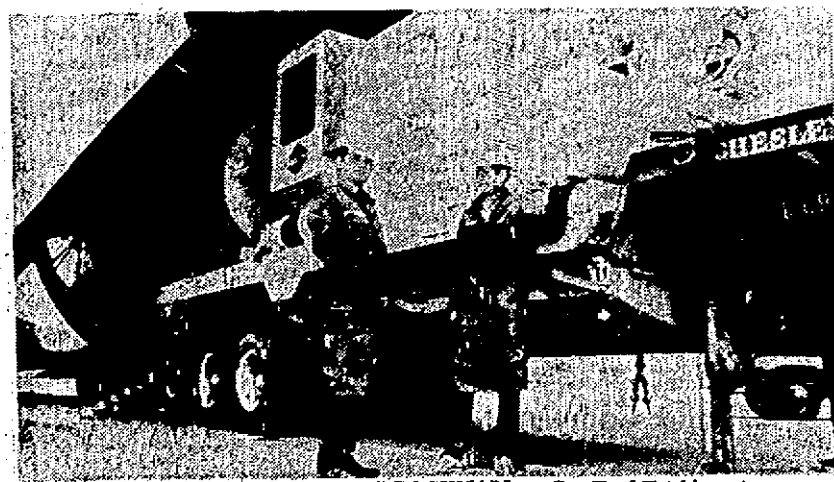

The tool will then expand the two sections and bring them into perfect alignment so they can be welded. The casing will then be lowered 60 feet and the tool "walked" up the casing, in 10-foot increments, to the lip. This process will be repeated for the entire 6,000 feet.

DIGITAL displays on the tool's master control console show where the tool is located within the casing. Fail-safe devices are provided to prevent slumping in the event of power failure or other malfunctions; and the tool can be manually "walked" up the shaft.

To complete the tool, Ostgaard and Hydro-Test have set up the largest acceptance test area of its kind at the Signal Hill site. In the future, this test area will be used by Hydro-Test to simulate many oil rig operations to aid petroleum equipment manufacturers in testing new equipment.

Speaking was Leo C. Beebe, vice president of consumer marketing for Philco-Ford Corporation, and he was warning retailers of home entertainment products and appliances that "affluence is a threat to the energy of our industry."

Two hundred Southland television and appliance merchants had gathered to hear Beebe at the Flamingo Hotel — and more on the hotel later in this column.

Beebe, who has directed the refitting of Philco-Ford's consumer products organization for an aggressive plunge into new marketing strategy, told the group:

"We're led to the onset of complacency, which is the most dangerous affliction we could suffer."

"As an industry, we have served the consumer well. The prices of our products, almost uniformly, are below what they were a decade ago, and there are few businesses in today's inflation-ridden economy that can make that claim."

"But we can never afford to say, 'We're satisfied. We've done a good job.' Our responsibility is to see to it that we are taking the steps every day that enable us to serve our customers better."

Beebe said that consumer attention is focused today on service and reliability.

"If that's the focus, then there's every reason for us to believe that there is dissatisfaction with our policies and greater reason for us to do something about it, now, today."

"Philco-Ford has been absent from big-time advertising programs for many years, but we're changing that. Our entire marketing strategy is aimed at refitting a respected firm to become an aggressor in today's market."

"We want to be lean and hungry and the time is right for us to make our major move toward leadership in this industry."

IF YOU WANT TO SEE INEPTNESS at its best, try registering into the Flamingo with reservations previously made and verified.

At least two members of the press, including myself, and one public information officer of Philco-Ford were at first turned away with the terse comment: "No room. No record of reservation."

Three hours later, and after pressure from spokesmen for the large corporation doing big business with the lethargic hotel, we were assigned rooms and checked into them.

I was told my room still was to be made up, but that was not true. It was made up — but the bellhop had forgotten my luggage. Mumbling, he returned to the distant lobby (another building) where my bag luckily still remained amid scurrying feet.

The key he was given to admit another member of our party to his room wouldn't work.

Another member of our group boasted for a short time of having two rooms.

At 2 a.m., upon returning to my room, I was confronted with one startling fact: it was occupied by a couple with no intention of vacating, or of allowing me to remove my personal effects.

Trudging back to the lobby and to the desk, I was impolitely informed "there has been a mistake. the room had never been vacated."

I know differently. The room was clean when I took possession. When I left it, only my shaving gear and clothes were in evidence.

An hour later, the sour night clerk informed me my luggage now was in another "identical" room, but I no longer was interested.

At 4 a.m., I walked to a cab and departed, the Fabulous Flamingo had become the Flagrantly Inept Flamingo.

DID YOU EVER WONDER ABOUT the men who make change, pay you your winnings, and answer your questions in the Nevada casinos?

It comes as a surprise to some visitors to Las Vegas that these men live in homes, have wives and children, vote in elections, participate in sports, belong to service clubs and live the same kind of life that a worker in any other industry does.

Typical of Nevada's plush gaming casinos is the Frontier Hotel, a brand new resort in Las Vegas, located on the famed "Strip."

The Frontier employs 130 dealers, and a recent survey taken among them revealed some facts and figures which probably would compare to a survey taken of employees of General Motors, Montgomery Ward or a supermarket.

Almost every state in the union is represented as a point of origin for Frontier dealers. One foreign country, France, is represented, and several are former Cuban nationals. Married men outnumber the bachelors three to one.

Of those who are married, the average is slightly over 12 years, topped by one man who has shared bed and board with his wife for 33 years.

Their average slightly less than two children each, the most prolific claiming five. Ages of dealers at the Frontier range from 25 to 69, with a mean of 39 years, 10 months. One has lived in Las Vegas less than two years, another almost a quarter of a century. Average length of residence is just over eight years.

EXACTLY ONE HALF of the Frontier dealers own or are buying their own homes.

More than half or those queried belong to civic, social or fraternal organizations, the Elks, Masons, Optimists, Knights of Columbus, VFW, Moose, Lions and Eagles were among those mentioned. Church work, scouting and ethnic participation were included.

A recent move by a rather strong-willed lady in Las Vegas may bring a change in the dealer image. Claiming that women are being discriminated against, she is seeking application of the equal rights provisions passed by the congress to force casinos to hire women dealers.

For some reason, Northern Nevada (primarily Reno and the Lake Tahoe resorts) employ a preponderance of women dealers, while in Las Vegas they are a rarity. For the present, the profession of dealing is the province of the male.

That's the picture. The next time you visit a Las Vegas casino, you might take a second look at the dealer. He has a story to tell.

ATTRACTIVE RECEPTION LOBBY ... Work By McKenzie

Jensen, Murchison Offices Remodeled by McKenzie

The general contracting firm of Paul F. McKenzie, Inc., Long Beach, has been recognized as a leader in the apartment and own-your-own building field for many years, but another facet of the building business has been taking much of its attention the past year.

The firm has been concentrating on the commercial construction and remodeling business.

Latest job completed in commercial remodeling by the McKenzie firm is the offices for Jensen, Murchison and Co., certified public accountants, and Robert Blakey, attorney at law.

The newly completed offices occupy the entire second floor of the Belmont Savings and Loan Building at 5200 E. Second St., Long Beach.

The firm continues its activity in the condominium apartment field with the five-story Ocean View Imperial apartment building under construction at 1635 E. Ocean Blvd. Present construction contracts held by the firm exceed $1,250,000.

WORLD OF WHEELS

By ART STEPHAN
Auto Editor

Noses make news — if you're a Jimmy Durante at one extreme or Julie Andrews at the other — but all of a sudden Pontiac is making news with the noses on its cars.

A punch in the nose also makes news if you're a Jerry Quarry — but a punch in the nose of the new Pontiacs doesn't make news.

Nothing happens when you're driving a '69 Catalina, GTO or Bonneville and you absently-mindedly nudge the other end of the family garage, the Pontiac just absorbs the impact by means of what has to be one of the best ideas in the automobile world in many a year.

The material on the noses of these Pontiacs was designed just for that purpose — to take knocks without showing it. The stylists at Pontiac had long felt that too much unnecessary damage is done to chrome-plated bumpers in parking and other routine mishaps, hence the search for a means of sparing the car owner one of modern motoring's not inexpensive annoyances.

THE MATERIAL THAT SOLVES this problem is a combination of a special synthetic compound backed with a heavy gauge steel reinforcement. The molded material is designed to (and does) absorb energy on impact — when it is hit under most circumstances it will depress and then bounce back to its original form almost immediately.

The bumper is called Endura by Pontiac, and was under development for three years before becoming a standard part of the three Pontiac lines. When it was introduced, automotive writers were invited to hit it with a baseball bat. Reluctantly at first, the press soon found they could belt the bumper as hard as they wished, without damage.

A logical question is if the bumper were to undergo a severe impact, what happens? The factory reports that even should such occur, any dent or mark in most cases can easily be repaired by any Pontiac dealer.

IN ADDITION TO THE OBVIOUS benefits of a bumper material that will bounce back into its original shape upon normal impact, the Endura material lends itself to unlimited styling possibilities for front-end design because it can be molded in any shape.

In addition, it carries the same color as the car which gives the vehicle an extended and integrated appearance.

This Pontiac exclusive — the first in the automotive industry — had proved to be not only a styling advancement and a means of avoiding the expensive nicks and dents of metal bumpers, but engineers have found that it further is functionally superior to any metal bumper now being used.

GRAND OPENING CONTINUES

Sales Stay Brisk at Casa Bonita

Casa Bonita homes in Cerritos are now in the second week of the grand opening.

Sales agent Joe Cooper says even prior to formal opening last week-end, preview sales set an excellent record.

One and two-story models in contemporary and traditional exterior stylings range from three to five bedrooms with three baths. All models feature functional floor plans that include formal and family dining rooms.

Large family rooms enjoy outdoor access through wide sliding doors of tempered safety glass.

GARDEN kitchens feature modern appliances. Dishwasher and disposer, cushioned for quiet action, are made of stainless steel counterparts, guaranteed for 30 years of service.

Extra storage space is provided in pantries and utility closets. Separate utility rooms are fitted with plumbing, gas and electric outlets for laundry equipment.

Custom features include cathedral ceilings, carpeting, mirrors and lighting fixtures in baths and powder rooms and extended marble pullmans. Some models offer music room and upstairs study gallery.

LOTS are enclosed, side and rear, with handsome block wall. Casa Bonita is a development of builders Henry and Myron Reichert and The Swan Construction Company.

Casa Bonita is close to schools, both public and parochial. A complete regional shopping center will be minutes from the community. Other locational advantages include parks and playgrounds planned by the progressive city of Cerritos.

Entrance to Casa Bonita is on Artesia just east of 605 Freeway.

Credit Cards

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — The credit card, once the province of the expense account crowd, has found its way into the university.

Since June 1, the University of California has been accepting credit cards for payment of extension courses.

Extension fees now average over $50 per course, and many potential extension students find cash outlays of this magnitude a deterrent to taking courses for self-improvement," a UC official said.

Clark Co. in Job for Precise

Structural steel will be used in the manufacture of pre-packaged power plants by Precise Power Systems, Inc., of Long Beach.

A contract has been awarded to Clark Tank & Manufacturing Co. of Long Beach for the fabrication of structural steel bases for the revolutionary total energy power units, according to PPSP president L. B. Wilkes.

Precise Power Systems originated the standard module concept that made these pre-packaged power plants available at a substantially reduced cost.

Prime users include hospitals, military institutions, and countless computer-equipped firms that depend upon a constant, reliable power flow.

Modestus Bauer, president and owner of the Consolidated Dock and Storage Co. in the Wilmington area of the Port of Los Angeles, has stated he plans some major changes in the management of the company.

Bauer, who announced recently he has pledged $3 million to St. Mary's Hospital, operates the only privately-owned terminal within the Los Angeles port complex.

THOSE WHO WERE CRITICAL of the City of Long Beach for not opening the Queen Mary for tours before the conversion work started on the former monarch of the North Atlantic, may change their opinion based on the announcement this week that the Queen Elizabeth was being sent to the scrap yard.

The Elizabeth anchored at Port Everglade, Fla., failed to attract enough visitors to pay the cost of the overhead of keeping the ship open to tourists.

New Series of Junior Executive Homes Offered by William Lyon

Huntington Shores presents a new series of junior executive homes by builder William Lyon located almost immediately adjacent to the proposed multi-million dollar Huntington Beach regional park, states area manager Jack Sindorf.

Water sports and other recreational facilities are planned for the new park which will be the city's largest.

"These unusual one-story homes are a timely buy for those desiring a house for 'summer fun' in a prestige ocean recreation area at a modest price — with good appreciation potential," Sindorf said.

Prices range from $23,900 to $26,990 with no down payment to veterans or choice of FHA and conventional terms.

A limited number of the three and four-bedroom homes have just been completed to make available for immediate occupancy at least one model of every floor plan and a choice of sites and exteriors.

THE contemporary beach homes of Huntington Shores are virtually "ready-to-live-in" with many luxury extras included in the purchase price such as all-electric built-in kitchens with range, double oven, dishwasher and disposal. Other special extras at no additional cost are decorator fireplace, wall-to-wall carpeting, draperies, rear lot line fencing and landscaping.

The large, convenience planned kitchens are one of the glamour features of these bright new homes adapted from builder Lyon's more expensive residences.

In one plan, the exclusive "Terrace Kitchen" adjoins a large family room and is surrounded by walls of sliding glass to the rear patio, with a sliding window patio serving bar for easy outdoor entertaining.

One of the most popular Huntington Shores homes is a three-bedroom, two-bath plan with separate service porch for washer and dryer, ideally located between the master bath and kitchen.

In addition to the luxury of the master bedroom suite, the home has a separate dining area opening through sliding glass doors to the rear patio.

The large living room has particular appeal with its huge brick fireplace and abundance of useable wall space.

TWO-STORY high sloped ceilings and an abundance of glass throughout add to the feeling of spaciousness in these exciting new homes. Each model is planned

LARGE FAMILY ROOMS . . . At Morningside-Cerritos

'Young American' Series Popular at Morningside

A rapid sales pace continues at the third and final unit at Morningside, in Cerritos, according to Irv Freivogel, sales manager, Boise Cascade Building Co., builders of the community.

Featuring the "New Homes for Young Americans" series, Morningside homes fulfill the needs and requirements of young, growing families in the middle income bracket.

"Young people find the space they need, the extras' and at a price they can afford," Freivogel said.

Priced from $22,995, the spacious homes may be purchased on conventional terms, with low down payments and monthly payments from $145, including principle and interest.

FLOOR plans provide for ample living space, including three and four bedrooms, two and three baths, large family rooms, built-ins and many

"sought after" luxury extras.

The sales manager also cited the central location and realistic pricing as other prime factors contributing to the rapid sales pace at Morningside.

Model homes are open daily for inspection and may be reached from the San Gabriel (605) Freeway, by taking the South Street off-ramp and continuing west on South Street to Studebaker Road, then left to the models opposite 195th Street.

A new home model, the "Del Amo," is being offered through a special introductory plan, at El Ray Park, in Cerritos, it was announced by John Heil, regional marketing director, for the eastern region of the Boise Cascade Building Co.

The three-bedroom, Del Amo residence is priced at $29,950 and may be purchased on terms featuring monthly payments of $172, including principal and interest, with down payments of 10 per cent, Heil explained.

The spacious new model contains 1,500 square feet of space and floor plans also include a large family room in striking one, two and split-level stylings.

The marketing director also pointed out that purchasers at El Ray Park, may take advantage of the Equity Transfer Plan, allowing them to transfer the equity in their present home as part of the financing arrangements for a new El Ray Park home.

High-Pressure

Test chambers capable of duplicating pressures found many thousands of feet under the sea are being used to evaluate models of deep-submergence research and rescue vessels. One such chamber uses 750 tons of nickel-containing steel and has walls 16 inches thick.

Energy Source

Petroleum is reported by National Automobile Club to be the nation's number one energy source.

SPACIOUS MODELS . . . At El Ray Park

Dakota Badlands

Most popular time of year for visiting South Dakota's Badlands, according to the National Automobile Club, is from June until October.

'Instant Energy' Planned in S.F. Springs Center

Special to the Progress Section

Instant energy for commercial food processing is the engineering principle underlying the development of the unique Refrigeration and Energy Center in Santa Fe Springs.

The source of this energy is a recently completed, natural gas-fueled central plant which is already providing high-pressure steam, low-temperature refrigeration and other energy requirements for such customers as Safeway Stores, Inc. and the Market Basket Division of the Kroger Co.

Plans for the construction of a new frozen food plant in the R&E Center were announced last week.

The new plant will be custom-built by the developers of the Center, for Van de Kamp's of Los Angeles.

THE central service facility is the heart of an unusual 49-acre industrial park, located immediately south of the Santa Ana Freeway, between Carmenita and Shoemaker avenues.

Designed to serve the needs of a large segment of the Southland food processing industry, the park (initially known as the Santa Fe Springs Complex) is a joint venture of M. A. Nickkian, consulting engineer of Long Beach, Sydney Genser of Los Angeles and Central Plants, Inc., a non-utility subsidiary of

Pacific Lighting Corp., Los Angeles.

The central plant is wholly owned and operated by Central Plants, Inc.

C. T. Dierker, manager of operations for Central Plants, said services of the $3.5 million facility are "ready made" for processors of meats, poultry, fish, eggs and dairy products.

"GREATEST advantage of a central plant," he said, "is that it provides the customer with an immediately usable energy while eliminating his need for large boilers, transformers, cooling towers, refrigeration compressors, equipment rooms, maintenance and operating engineers."

In operation, the central plant supplies its tenants and customers with low temperature refrigeration, high pressure steam and hot ammonia gas for defrost.

Services are delivered through underground pipelines to tenant facilities in the park and to customer-plants in adjacent or nearby locations. Heating and refrigerating energy to each customer is metered and billed accordingly.

EXPLAINING the refrigeration process of the plant, Dierker said natural gas-fired engines, driving centrifugal compressors, are used to condense, cool and liquefy freon gas in a water-cooled condenser. In the condenser, the freon in turn, cools gaseous ammonia to a liquid state with a temperature of -40 degrees F.

The liquid ammonia is then pumped to the customer's facilities for refrigeration purposes. Expanding and warming in the customer's refrigeration coils, the ammonia "blast freezes" the food product, and in the process, is converted to its original gaseous form.

THE gaseous ammonia is then returned by pipeline to the central plant condenser where the cycle starts again.

"We use ammonia as the prime refrigerant because a survey of our potential customers showed it to be the most acceptable."

Gas-fired boilers are used to produce the high pressure steam needed for rapid cooking and cleaning purposes.

Fizz Market

NEW YORK (UPI) — There's going to be plenty of "fizz" this year in the bottled soft drink market, according to industry researchers. As an indication, a forecast by the Econometric Institute says the soft drink industry will buy more than 7.5 billion bottles during the year to help slake the nation's thirst.

value-packed prices, Mancini said. . . . NEW showcases and checkstands, along with a re-fitted, brightly decorated cafeteria will add to the colorful interior of the entire store.

The enlarged yardage department will have quality cottons, synthetics and corduroys, with the entire gamut of materials in solids, prints and plaids, Mancini said.

This department will have sewing accessories, or notions, for the most discriminating buyer. It will be complete with buttons, bows, needles, thread, patterns, hem-makers and even electric scissors.

Kress-Rossmoor in Modernization Project

Now underway is a modernization and re-decorating project at the S. H. Kress & Company store, 12421 Los Alamitos Blvd., on the mall at the Rossmoor Shopping Center.

Throughout the period of the work the store will remain open.

The 35,000-square-foot project is scheduled for completion July 17, according to Frank Mancini, store manager.

"It will be a completely different store," said Mancini, "which will make shopping more exciting and easier for our customers. I'm sure many of our old customers will hardly recognize the store when it is completed," he said.

A MAJOR improvement will be a wide six-unit mall entrance with red carpeting which will blend into the red and grey tile vestibule floor. More than half the store floor area will be carpeted, with an ultimate increase of at least 30 per cent more square feet of selling space throughout.

Emphasis will be placed on expanding the yardage, sporting goods, automotive supplies and shoe departments. New merchandise lines will be added to all departments with the widest range of quality at

Influential Homes' Opening Adding to Lakewood History

Today's grand opening of Influential Homes' Lakewood will formally mark the return of the city of Lakewood of three key members of the development team that helped build the community in the early 1950s.

The trio, now principals in Butler-Harbour Construction Co. of Anaheim, are Merrill Butler Jr., the firm's president; L. B. Harbour Jr., executive vice president, and Doug Hoon, senior vice president.

With their all-new Influential Homes, built on one of the last available residential parcels in Lakewood, they are helping to complete the city they had a hand in building nearly two decades ago when 15,000 homes were built and sold by two companies in five years.

Butler was an engineering consultant who became project engineer for the firm's Lakewood development and helped design the Lakewood master plan, which has received much credit for enabling the community to grow into the city it is today.

IN 1956, THE three men formed Butler-Harbour Construction Co.

They have constructed over 4,700 houses — most of them bearing the Influential Homes tag — in 86 different neighborhoods in Los Angeles, Orange, Riverside, San Bernardino, Santa Barbara and San Diego Counties.

For their return to Lakewood, the Butler-Harbour principals did not leave much to chance.

"These are among the most researched plans we have ever offered," noted Butler. "All members of our design and marketing team made significant contributions."

"First, we talked to veteran staff members of our sales representatives, Walker and Lee, Inc.

These people have been selling homes in Lakewood since the early '50s and know all about its residential real estate market. We asked them to spell out exactly what kind of new homes would encourage people to move up out of their present smaller Lakewood houses," Butler said.

"OUR NATIONAL award-winning architect, Benjamin Urnston, AIA, then designed homes to meet these specifications."

Butler said, "We took these plans back to the sales people for their evaluation to make sure these homes would be ideally tailored to the needs of Lakewood families that need more room but want to stay in the city because of its fine schools, parks, and shopping facilities — and its proximity to Los Angeles.

"We didn't stop there," added Harbour. "Our advertising agency, Vineyard Advertising, Inc., took these house plans and conducted a market study in the communities surrounding Lakewood. People who were looking at new homes in the area were asked to evaluate specially-drawn three-dimensional versions of these plans. The constructive input from this study was cranked into the designs and we entered our third phase of research."

"That was one of our Influential Homeakers Design Conferences, which are coordinated by our public relations counseling firm, Larry Manzo Public Relations, Inc. The design panel, consisting of 12 women who had recently bought homes, was equally divided between those who had purchased our homes and those who had bought other homes," Butler said.

THE PANELISTS carefully went over the actual blueprints and marked their comments, criticisms and suggestions right on the plans," he added. "They made so many worthwhile suggestions that I can truly say these homes simply would not be as good as they are, if we had not had their help."

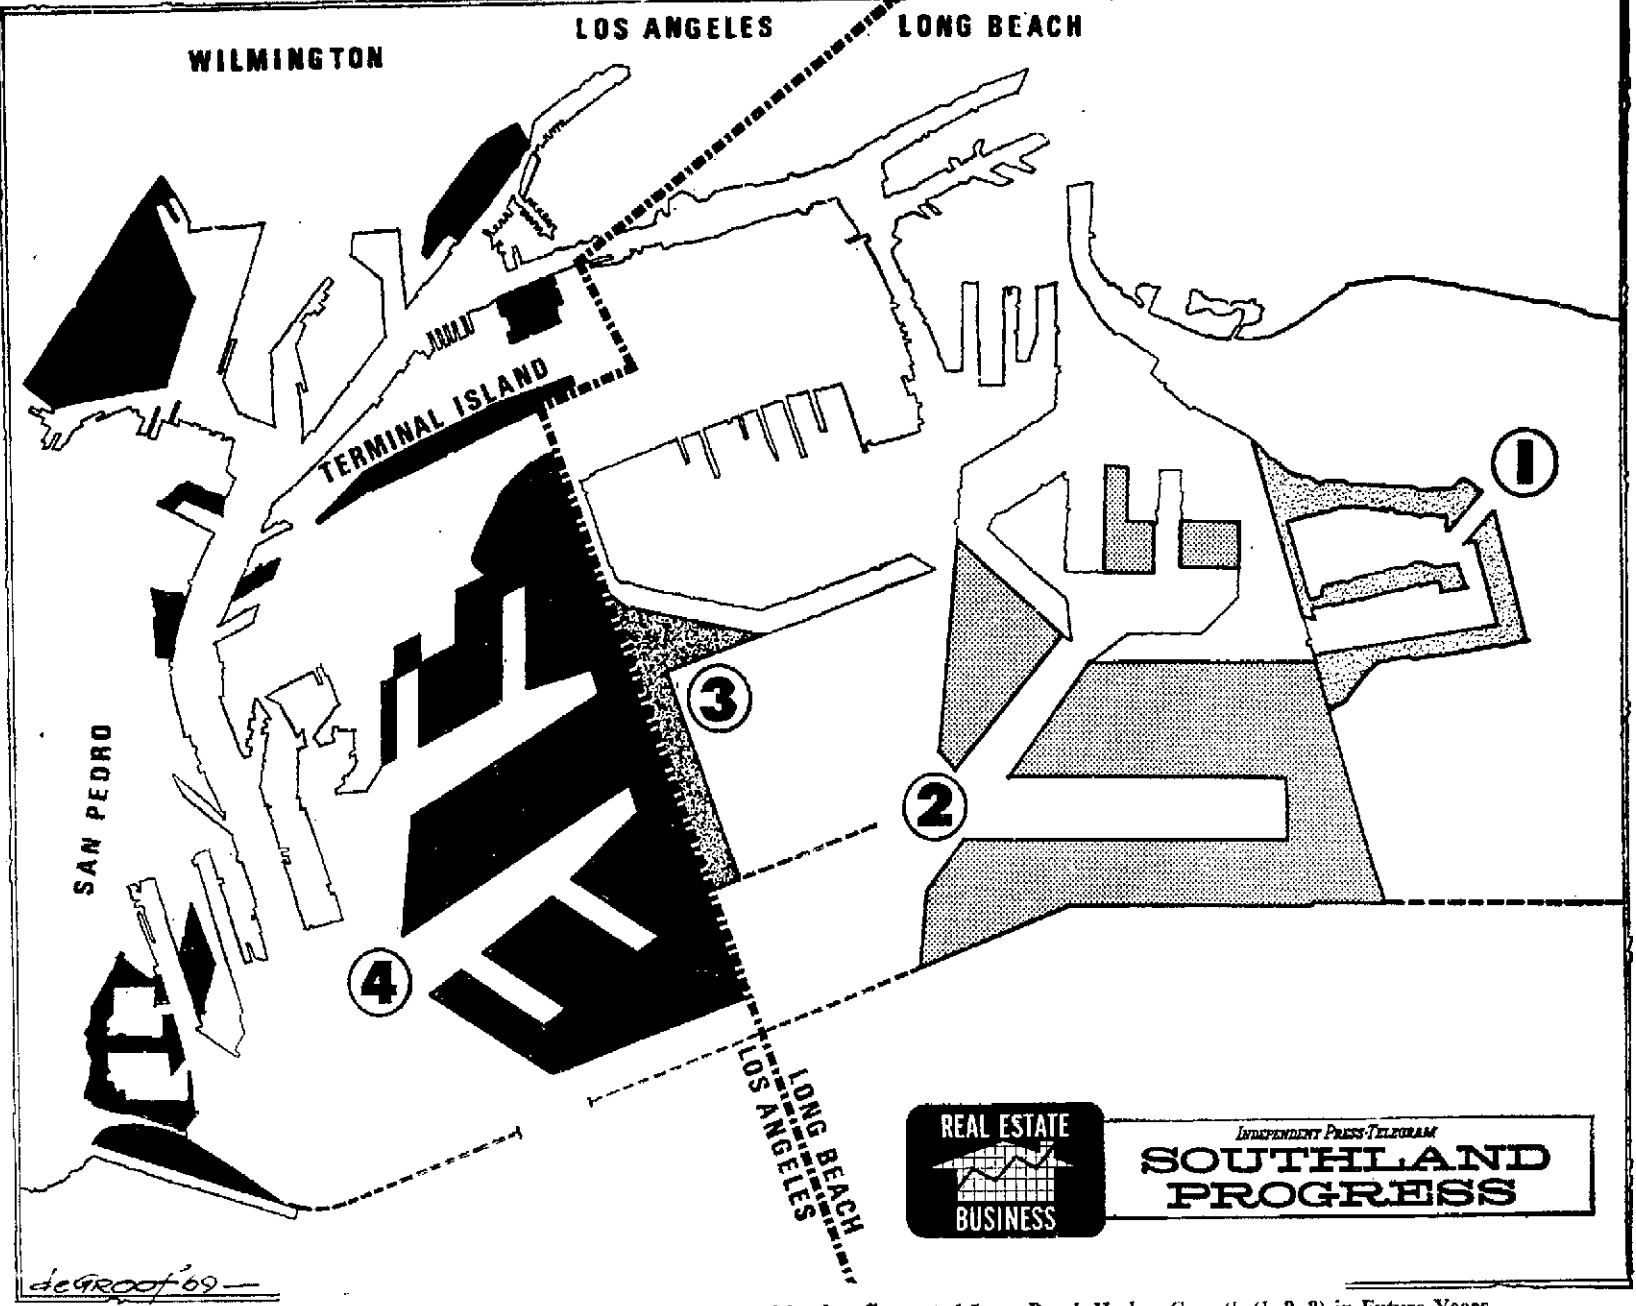

Harbour indicated that the panelists gave high marks to all four of the all-new plans making their debut at Lakewood but added proudly that one of the models, The Bloomfield, was unanimously approved.

The Bloomfield is a five-bedroom, two-story home. On the first floor are the spacious entry hall with twin closets, the two-story living and dining rooms, the kitchen, nook, family room, master suite, and a bedroom ideally located for a den or library.

On the second floor are three family bedrooms and two bonus "funspace" areas that may be used in a variety of ways with the decorated model showing one area as a children's play area and the other as a hobby room.

THE OTHER HOMES in the series include: the three-bedroom, one-story Parkwood; the four-bedroom, two-story Eastgate; and the most spacious model, the four-bedroom, two-story Princeton. Each model has its own unique features.

The Parkwood has an island kitchen counter and a step-up bathtub. The Eastgate has complete separation between the living room, dining room and family room; a central laundry room; and a 106-square-foot "trunk closet" (Continued on Page 10)

LOS ANGELES HARBOR PROPOSED EXPANSION (4) . . . Matches Suggested Long Beach Harbor Growth (1, 2, 3) in Future Years

REACHING OUT TO BREAKWATER Harbors Eye Huge Expansions

By JACK O. BALDWIN
Marine Editor

Imaginative plans to create several thousand acres of new harbor land by literally lifting up the ocean floor have been revealed by engineers for the Ports of Long Beach and Los Angeles.

Plans to extend Pier J in the Port of Long Beach outward to the Federal Breakwater were described by Bob Hoffmaster, chief engineer, to delegates attending the Coastal Resources Development Seminar, held in the Offshore Center Building and sponsored by the World Dredging Conference Assn.

HOFFMASTER SAID AT LEAST 2,000 acres of new land will be needed to meet the demands of the shipping companies which are entering the containerized freight business and for those present companies who plan to expand their operations.

Between 80 to 90 million yards of fill will be needed to create 1,300 acres of new land in the Port of Los Angeles, Lawrence Whiteneck, chief engineer for the Los Angeles Harbor Department, told the delegates.

He said current plans already on the drafting board would result in the creation of 75 new berths.

Since future building costs are unpredictable, neither port official would estimate the cost of the huge projects.

HOFFMASTER, NOTING the Long Beach plans were "long range," said "We now feel it will all happen much more quickly than we estimated."

The chief engineer recalled how the "gloom spreaders and pessimists" labeled the development of the present 311-acre Pier J as "folly" and predicted the facility would never be fully utilized.

"Construction projects are now underway which when completed will result in the full development of Pier J," Hoffmaster said.

"Unless we create new land, we are out of business as far as future expansion of the Port of Long Beach is concerned," he said.

BOTH ENGINEERS SAID the new land would be created by using fill resulting from deepening channels by dredging. The deeper channels are necessary to permit the super-ships with deep draft to enter the port complex.

Whiteneck said as the expanding exomomy of the countries bordering the Pacific rim in the Far East continues to grow, thousands of tons of new cargo will move between all U.S. Pacific Coast ports and the Far East.

"Unless we plan now and act now in anticipation of that new trade, every port on the Pacific Coast will be snowed under," the Los Angeles port official predicted.

ALIGNMENT TOOL IN ALEUTIANS Ostgaard Firm Aids AEC

Special to the Progress Section
The world's largest diameter, deep-bore test hole has been completed by the Atomic Energy Commission in the Aleutian Islands.

The hole was completed just prior to the shipment from Signal Hill of a giant tool which will be used in lining the Aleutian hole.

The 6,000-foot deep, 90-inch diameter test hole is the deepest ever used for an AEC test. The hole will be used for implantment of an experimental explosive device for a nuclear test.

It has been noted that the finished hole will be large enough to hold more than 450 Volkswagens stacked end to end.

To provide maximum safety for personnel during the tests, the hole will be lined with 100 60-foot lengths of 54-inch inside diameter high strength steel casing.

The giant centering and alignment tool was built by John T. Ostgaard & Associates and Hydro-Test, Inc., in Signal Hill.

It was airlifted from the Long Beach airport in a C-130 and transferred to a C-141 which carried the giant tool to the Aleutians.

THE AEC will use the new, 60,000 pound tool to center and align sections of casing as they are welded together and lowered into the hole. A similar tool will also be used for projects the AEC plans to undertake in central Nevada.

The 4-foot-6 diameter by 40-foot-6 long tool works inside the steel casings to center and align each joint of the steel shaft as it is put together for weldment.

The self-supported, hydraulically operated device will hold the casings straight and parallel to the shaft while welding takes place. Specially designed hydraulic cylinder assemblies within the tool assure accurate centering and alignment.

In the course of the project in the Aleutians, 60-foot sections of casing will be lowered into the predilled hole. The special tool will be inserted into the lower casing and a second section of casing will be placed in position over the tool.

The tool will then expand the two sections and bring them into perfect alignment so they can be welded. The casing will then be lowered 60 feet and the tool "walked" up the casing, in 10-foot increments, to the lip. This process will be repeated for the entire 6,000 feet.

DIGITAL displays on the tool's master control console show where the tool is located within the casing. Fail-safe devices are provided to prevent slipping in the event of power failure or other malfunctions; and the tool can be manually "walked" up the shaft.

To complete the tool, Ostgaard and Hydro-Test have set up the largest acceptance test area of its kind at the Signal Hill site. In the future, this test area will be used by Hydro-Test to simulate many oil rig operations to aid petroleum equipment manufacturers in testing new equipment.

Ostgaard & Associates is an engineering consultant firm specializing in the mechanical and electrical control field. Hydro-Test, Inc. has been providing equipment and testing services for the petroleum industry for 25 years.

Spanish-Styled Homes in Bona Fide Liquidation

The bona fide liquidation of over half a hundred Spanish-styled town houses continues, this weekend in Orange County's Fountain Valley.

The three- and four-bedroom, two-story units offer both FHA and Veteran terms and have been cut drastically in price in the liquidation by agents for the owners.

Located in the heart of the Green Valley community about six miles from Huntington Beach State beach and just across the street from the new Orange County public golf course on Warner Ave., the town homes highlight large rear patios, built in kitchens, wall to wall carpet, and the total community facilities of the Green Valley development.

BUYERS may enjoy the twenty acre private park, family club house and giant pool, children's play area, boat storage area, putting green, and adult club house and pool.

The town houses are within walking distance to the park, pools, club houses and golf course and offer ideal investment potential, the agents stressed.

Visitors should stay South on the San Diego Freeway to the Warner-

East off-ramp. Drive East on Warner just past Brookhurst to the Green Valley entry. The site is just off Warner between Brookhurst and Euclid.

THE PORT ROYAL HOME... No. 1 At Seawind

Seawind Homes Emphasize Style, Space, Many Extras

Style and space are emphasized in the new Seawind homes in Huntington Beach without sacrificing any of the traditional Kaufman and Broad value, according to William P. Edwards, general manager of the firm's Southern California Division.

The style of Seawind homes has been characterized as "young elegance."

"Although these homes have up to 2,286 square feet, our marketing and architecture people worked together to utilize the space creatively, so that the homes appear even larger," Edwards reports.

Each of four models at Seawind has a distinctive ambience. The design plans are flexible, permitting a family to entertain formally or casually with equal style. Among the distinctive styling features are conversation pits—generally found in more expensive custom homes.

TRADITIONAL Kaufman and Broad value has not been sacrificed in these homes.

In fact, Edwards points out, they are among the best values available in Orange County.

Seawind home costs are as low as $15 a square foot and their prices include a package of "extras," comparable only to homes selling for one-third more.

These luxury "extras"—all standard items—include burnished bronze hardware in an exclusive Seawind design; stylish light fixtures also in exclusive Seawind designs; fireplace with log lighters; self cleaning ovens, and heavy duty disposals.

The Sandy Hook home at Seawind is a dramatically styled one-story dwelling with a soaring cathedral ceiling in the living areas.

It has a sunken living room, a formal dining room, patio kitchen, family room and three bedrooms and two baths and a separate utility room.

Sandy Hook has 1,412 square feet and is priced at $27,990.

THE architectural simplicity of the Key Largo model belies its dazzling interior. A free standing floor-to-ceiling, massive brick fireplace rising from a sunken conversation pit provides an impressive focal point for the home.

It can serve as the entertainment center for the family since the living, dining and family rooms flow around it in an open floor plan. Priced at $30,990 the Key Largo has 1,683 square feet which includes four bedrooms and two baths.

The Port Royal with 2,286 square feet is a handsome two story home with five bedrooms and three baths, priced at only $34,500.

The home is entered through a dramatic entry way. The openness of the living areas is accentuated by the vaulted ceiling and a large open area on the second floor which overlooks the living room.

A graceful stairway suspended in the center of the area lends style to the living areas.

THE BAY Biscayne model, priced at $33,990, is a tasteful yet dramatic house designed for a family who likes at home entertaining.

The living and dining room are separated from the kitchen and family rooms. The large family room which can accommodate a full sized pool table has a large sunken fire-side conversation pit at one end. It opens to the patio kitchen, providing a real "living center" for a family.

The Bay Biscayne with 2,250 square feet has four bedrooms and two baths upstairs; a third bath is downstairs.

Seawind is the culmination of over $20 million in new homes which Kaufman and Broad has developed in Huntington Beach during the past five years.

The firm first entered the Los Angeles-Orange counties markets in Huntington Beach in 1964 and has been developing new home communities there since.

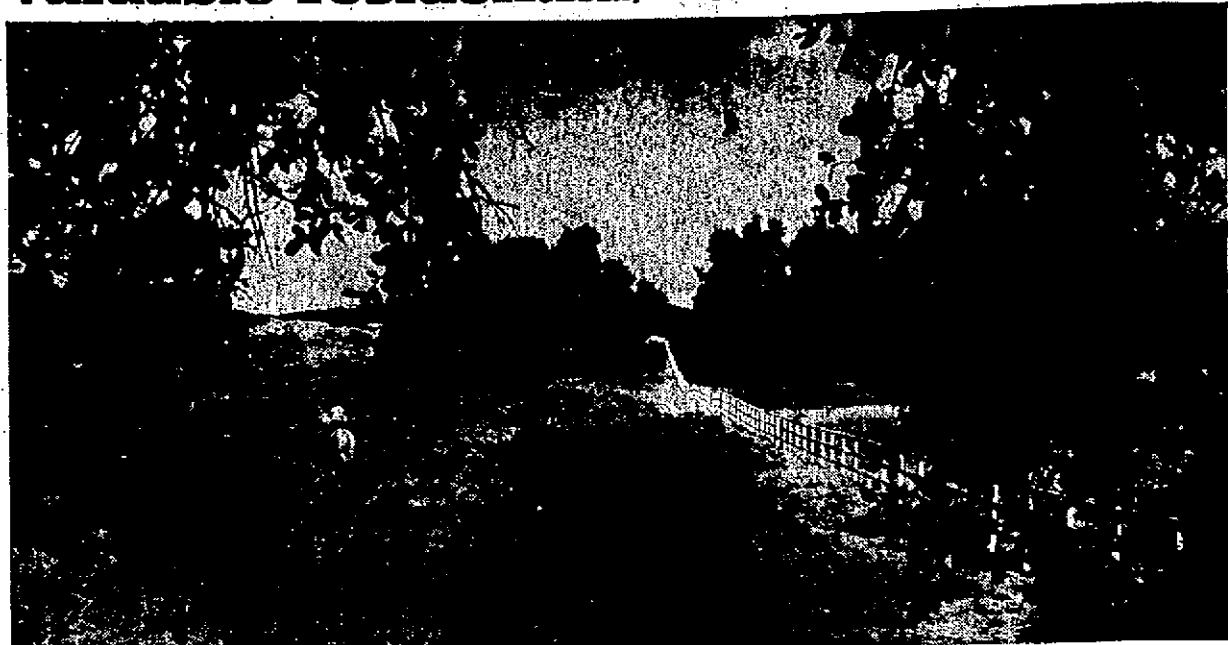

It currently has The Beach development in Huntington Beach as well as Seawind.

AS ONE of the finest remaining beach areas available for development, we foresee a new trend toward larger and more luxurious homes in Huntington Beach, Edwards says. The elegance and style of Seawind homes were created to meet this trend, he notes.

Seawind models may be reached via the San Diego or Santa Ana freeways to the Brookhurst exit. Then south on Brookhurst to Seawind.

From the Pacific Coast Highway, head north on Brookhurst.

Appliance Dealers Get Warning: Erase Complacency

By ROBERT BECKMAN
Business Editor

LAS VEGAS — All appliance dealers should have been in attendance at an unheralded conference here last week.

The warning they could have heard:

"Or industry has been spoiled by a constantly growing demand for our products."

Speaking was Leo C. Beebe, vice president of consumer marketing for Philco-Ford Corporation, and he was warning retailers of home entertainment products and appliances that "affluence is a threat to the energy of our industry."

Two hundred Southland television and appliance merchants had gathered to hear Beebe at the Flamingo Hotel — and more on the hotel later in this column.

Beebe, who has directed the refitting of Philco-Ford's consumer products organization for an aggressive plunge into new marketing strategy, told the group:

"We're led to the onset of complacency, which is the most dangerous affliction we could suffer."

"As an industry, we have served the consumer well. The prices of our products, almost uniformly, are below what they were a decade ago, and there are few businesses in today's inflation-ridden economy that can make that claim.

"But we can never afford to say, 'We're satisfied. We've done a good job.' Our responsibility is to see to it that we are taking the steps every day that enable us to serve our customers better."

Beebe said that consumer attention is focused today on service and reliability.

"If that's the focus, then there's every reason for us to believe that there is dissatisfaction with our policies and greater reason for us to do something about it, now, today."

"Philco-Ford has been absent from big-time advertising programs for many years, but we're changing that. Our entire marketing strategy is aimed at refitting a respected firm to become an aggressor in today's market."

L.B. Realtors to View Slides

Members of the Long Beach District Board of Realtors will hear about "Real Estate and the Changing Market" at their Tuesday breakfast meeting at the Crown Cafeteria.

Jim Speedy, of a Los Angeles newspaper, will speak and show color slides, according to Nada Davis, program chairman.

Billie Phillips, membership chairman, will induct 20 associate members and two Realtors.

IF YOU WANT TO SEE INEPTNESS at its best, try registering into the Flamingo with reservations previously made and verified.

At least two members of the press, including myself, and one public information officer of Philco-Ford were at first turned away with the terse comment: "No room. No record of reservation."

Three hours later, and after pressure from spokesmen for the large corporation doing big business with the lethargic hotel, we were assigned rooms and checked into them.

I was told my room still was to be made up, but that was not true. It was made up — but the bellhop had forgotten my luggage. Mumbling, he returned to the distant lobby (another building) where my bag luckily still remained amid scurrying feet.

The key he was given to admit another member of our party to his room wouldn't work.

Another member of our group boasted for a short time of having two rooms.

At 2 a.m., upon returning to my room, I was confronted with one startling fact: it was occupied by a couple with no intention of vacating, or of allowing me to remove my personal effects.

Trudging back to the lobby and to the desk, I was impolitely informed "there has been a mistake. The room had never been vacated."

I know differently. The room was clean when I took possession. When I left it, only my shaving gear and clothes were in evidence.

An hour later, the sour night clerk informed my luggage now was in another "identical" room, but I no longer was interested.

At 4 a.m., I walked to a cab and departed, the Fabulous Flamingo had become the Flagrantly Inept Flamingo.

DID YOU EVER WONDER ABOUT the men who make change, pay your winnings, and answer your questions in the Nevada casinos?

It comes as a surprise to some visitors to Las Vegas that these men live in homes, have wives and children, vote in elections, participate in sports, belong to service clubs and live the same kind of life that a worker in any other industry does.

Typical of Nevada's plush gaming casinos is the Frontier Hotel, a brand new resort in Las Vegas, located on the famed "Strip."

The Frontier employs 130 dealers, and a recent survey taken among them revealed some facts and figures, which probably would compare to a survey taken of employees of General Motors, Montgomery Ward or a supermarket.

Almost every state in the union is represented as a point of origin for Frontier dealers. One foreign country, France, is represented, and several are former Cuban nationals. Married men outnumber the bachelors three to one.

Of those who are married, the average is slightly over 12 years, topped by one man who has shared bed and board with his wife for 33 years.

They average slightly less than two children each, the most prolific claiming five. Ages of dealers at the Frontier range from 25 to 69, with a mean of 39 years, 10 months. One has lived in Las Vegas less than two years, another almost a quarter of a century. Average length of residence is just over eight years.

EXACTLY ONE HALF of the Frontier dealers own or are buying their own homes.

More than half or those queried belong to civic, social or fraternal organizations. The Elks, Masons, Optimists, Knights of Columbus, VFW, Moose, Lions and Eagles were among those mentioned. Church work, scouting and ethnic participation were included.

A recent move by a rather strong-willed lady in Las Vegas may bring a change in the dealer image. Claiming that women are being discriminated against, she is seeking application of the equal rights provisions passed by the congress to force casinos to hire women dealers.

For some reason, Northern Nevada (primarily Reno and the Lake Tahoe resorts) employ a preponderance of women dealers, while in Las Vegas they are a rarity. For the present, the profession of dealing is the province of the male.

That's the picture. The next time you visit a Las Vegas casino, you might take a second look at the dealer. He has a story to tell.

Buyers at Mesa Woods Benefit From New Land-Plan Concept

Many innovations, headed by a new land-planning concept that results in more interior living space in the home and full use of the entire yard, are attracting numerous buyers to Mesa Woods even before model homes are completed.

The development, now open for preview inspection at Sunflower Avenue west of Bristol Street in Costa Mesa, is by George J. Heltzer & Associates, Southern California's oldest exclusively residential builders, privately owned for over 44 years.

Seymour R. Berman, partner in the firm, describes the "tri-dimension environmental" homes as "an ingenious application of existing codes that permits the homeowner to enjoy every square foot of his lot, without a single foot being wasted."

On a traditional lot, the home is built from five to ten feet, depending on local codes, from the side lot line. As a result, such lots end up with a narrow, unusable and usually hard-to-maintain, wasted strip of land.

IN THE new concept at Mesa Woods, the house is built according to local building codes, but the otherwise wasted strip is "permanently loaned" to the next-door neighbor, permitting the latter to use the land right up to the fence and an exterior wall of the next-door home.

Nobody loses and everybody gains, as each neighbor makes a similar concession to his immediate neighbor.

Less fencing is required, as the solid, windowless wall of each home facing the actual lot line becomes part of the yard enclosure. Rights of entry and egress for maintenance purposes are maintained.

As a result, the home to be built on the lot can be larger than the old-style practice would permit, without sacrificing any of the yard. The positioning on the lot permits new and more practical designs which could not be built without excessive waste in the past.

A FINE example of the kind of features that can be added because of this land use is the open court, available in some floor plans of the Mesa Woods homes.

The open court, surrounded by enclosed living quarters, was a popular feature of Early California architecture and is still universally used in Mexico and South America.

In the Mesa Woods homes, the location of the open court usually is adjacent to the kitchen, family room and master bedroom.

"It is a natural for Southern California, where we have enjoyable outdoor weather the year around," explains Berman. "The open court does not substitute for a back yard, but is an additional outdoor area which can be enjoyed in utmost privacy.

ANOTHER talked-about innovation is the "conversation pit" in one of the floor plans. This is a cozy "open den" in front of a fireplace, complete with built-in seats.

Mesa Woods is offering floor plans of three and four bedrooms, available in twenty exteriors. One of the plans is designed for easy expansion by one or two additional bedrooms in the future.

Preview prices start at $27,950. VA, FHA and conventional terms are offered.

The development is west of the South Coast Plaza Shopping Center, the new growth area of Costa Mesa.

To inspect Mesa Woods, take San Diego Freeway to Fairview Road offramp, go one block north to Sunflower Avenue and right to model home site. Via surface streets, take Harbor Boulevard or Bristol Street to 1101 Sunflower Avenue.

MRS. FITZPATRICK . . . And Kathleen

WORLD OF WINGS

By HERB SHANNON
Aerospace Editor

The youngest pilot in this year's Powder Puff Derby will be Kathleen FitzPatrick, 17, of 2345 Sparta Drive, Miraleste, who will be flying her first All-Woman Transcontinental Air Race as co-pilot with her mother, Mrs. James O. FitzPatrick.

Kathleen, president of the Youth Club at the San Pedro YWCA, received her private pilot's license on her birthday in May while a junior at Miraleste High School. She was taught by her mother, Gene, a certified flight instructor with more than 1,000 hours on her flight log book.

Mrs. FitzPatrick, who works out of Rose Aviation at Hawthorne Airport, will be flying her second Derby. The mother-daughter team will compete in a Cessna 172 in the race starting July 4 at San Diego and ending officially three days later at Dulles International Airport, Washington, D.C.

THEIR SPONSORS IN THE annual distaff classic are the R. B. Furniture Co. of Gardena and Anixter Bros., Inc., of Chicago. Nearly 100 planes are entered in the 2,515-mile event.

En route stops include Las Vegas, Nev.; St. George and Salt Lake City, Utah; Rock Springs and Cheyenne, Wyo.; Kearney, Neb.; St. Joseph, Mo.; Mt. Vernon, Ill. and Huntington, West Va.

The Powder Puff Derby, flown under visual rules in daylight only, scores its contestants according to actual ground speed in relation to previously calculated handicaps to equalize performance of planes of from 145 to 450 horsepower. Only stock model aircraft built in the last 10 years are eligible.

Among the 95 other entries the FitzPatricks will be up against Friday is Fran Bera, Long Beach's seven-time winner and contender in 19 Powder Puff Derbies. Fran will fly a Piper Pa-24 Comanche with Dr. Phyllis C. Walker, 5447 Olea Turn, Long Beach, as co-pilot.

THEY ARE SPONSORED by Aircraft Associates and Aerotron Aircraft Radio, both of Long Beach, and Chrome-Plate, Inc., of San Antonio, Tex.

Fran's 17,000-odd hours of flying time makes her a formidable contender in the Powder Puff Derby, but it doesn't seem to interfere with business as usual at Fran Bera Aircraft Sales at Long Beach Airport.

Among her recent customers was novelist and screenwriter Ernest P. Gann, author of "Fate is the Hunter," "The High and the Mighty," and other best-sellers.

He will commute in his new Cessna 310H to and from his home at Friday Harbor in the San Juan Islands, Washington.

Noses make news — if you're a Jimmy Durante at one extreme or Julie Andrews at the other — but all of a sudden Pontiac is making news with the noses on its cars.

A punch in the nose also makes news if you're a Jerry Quarry — but a punch in the nose of the new Pontiacs doesn't make news.

Nothing happens when you're driving a '69 Catalina, GTO or Bonneville and you absently-mindedly nudge the other end of the family garage, the Pontiac just absorbs the impact by means of what has to be one of the best ideas in the automobile world in many a year.

The material on the noses of these Pontiacs was designed just for that purpose — to take knocks without showing it. The stylists at Pontiac had long felt that too much unnecessary damage is done to chrome-plated bumpers in parking and other routine mishaps, hence the search for a means of sparing the car owner one of modern motoring's not inexpensive annoyances.

THE MATERIAL THAT SOLVES this problem is a combination of a special synthetic compound backed with a heavy gauge steel reinforcement. The molded material is designed to (and does) absorb energy on impact — when it is hit under most circumstances it will depress and then bounce back to its original form almost immediately.

The bumper is called Endura by Pontiac, and was under development for three years before becoming a standard part of the three Pontiac lines. When it was introduced, automotive writers were invited to hit it with a baseball bat. Reluctantly at first, the press soon found they could belt the bumper as hard as they wished, without damage.

A logical question is if the bumper were to undergo a severe impact, what happens? The factory reports that even should such occur, any dent or mark in most cases can easily be repaired by any Pontiac dealer.

IN ADDITION TO THE OBVIOUS benefits of a bumper material that will bounce back into its original shape upon normal impact, the Endura material lends itself to unlimited styling possibilities for front-end design because it can be molded in any shape.

In addition, it carries the same color as the car which gives the vehicle an extended and integrated appearance.

This Pontiac exclusive — the first in the automotive industry — had proved to be not only a styling advancement and a means of avoiding the expensive nicks and dents of metal bumpers, but engineers have found that it further is functionally superior to any metal bumper now being used.

WHAT'S YOUR PROBLEM?
Co-op Apartment Defects Minimized by FHA Law

By DON CAMPBELL
"Point of view" has been defined as the quality that prompts one man to judge the value of a doughnut by its over-all dimensions, and another in terms of the size of the hole in the middle.
In the same way, any discussion of the relative merits of cooperative and condominium apartments runs headlong into more personal prejudices than you'll find at a PTA discussion of compulsory ROTC. For instance:
MR. CAMPBELL:

In a recent column of yours on cooperative and condominium apartments I was struck by your generally favorable attitude toward cooperatives.
Apparently you are either too young to remember, or have a conveniently bad memory, because you made no mention of the terrible hardships that occurred during the early tops, bottle-glass pattern kitchen cabinet doors, and an unusual amount of storage space. Self-cleaning ovens are available in all models.

PRICES AT influential Homes' Lakewood range from $30,900 to $36,850 with FHA and VA terms available.
Less than three-quarters of a mile east of the San Gabriel River Freeway, Influential Homes' Lakewood may be reached via the Del Amo Boulevard off-ramp, proceeding east on Del Amo to Bloomfield and Centralia Road.

1930s when thousands of owners of cooperatives found themselves "stuck" with abnormally heavy expenses because their fellow-tenants skipped out on their obligations. I think you should have stressed this disadvantage of cooperatives more heavily than you did. — T.T.
ANSWER: It's quite true that, during the Great Depression, a lot of owners of cooperatives found themselves in a sticky financial position because of the circumstances mentioned by T.T. As a result, cooperatives did, indeed, gain a deservedly bad reputation which, to some extent, follows them to this day.
As I pointed out earlier, however, new regulations have been written into the FHA law designed to minimize the probability of this sort of thing happening again. True, these changes don't entirely obviate the possibility that cooperatives couldn't again fall into disrepute, but they go a long way toward minimizing the likelihood of it.
In amplification of this, the following letter from a Phoenix, Ariz., real estate developer, Vincent Gilloley, makes an interesting point:
MR. CAMPBELL:
In my continuous search for points of difference between cooperative and condominium types of buying housing, I found very interesting your recent column on the subject.

As you say, it is under the auspices of the Federal Housing Administration that 99.9 per cent of all co-ops and condominiums are built. That agency would not approve loans for either sort of construction unless in an area already prospering or at least with favorable prospects. As a consequence, defaults are few and far between and the problem is for the most part theoretical.
A salient feature of our occupancy contracts at this co-op, one that you failed to mention, and one that takes the "scare" away from people who flinch from signing up for a lifetime period, is the clause in the contracts which provides that after each three-year period every stockholder has the privilege of pulling out, bag and baggage, with no liability to follow him, but of course sacrificing his equity in the corporation.
In actual practice, covering a period of more than six years in this project, a stockholder who wished to leave simply finds a buyer and makes a sale, with the approval of the corporation's board of directors.
It is at this point that the convenience of transferring a cooperator's interest becomes apparent. Since the corporation holds the title there is no need of a title search or other usual complication connected with real estate transactions.
Very little paper work is involved and practically

GRANTED, of course, the anti-cooperative reader can seize on Gilloley's phrase "simply finds a buyer" as an example that — in the event of hard times — the co-op owner might still find himself in trouble. Nevertheless, it must be conceded that about 99 per cent of the risks that existed in connection with cooperatives during the 1930s have been pretty well shaken out.
PLENTY of hot water is assured from the 52 gallon glass-lined water heaters, according to Ray Pat-scheck, Ayres' marketing and sales manager.
Rancho La Cuesta homes are built to last with a minimum of upkeep. Ayres does this by constantly searching for materials which reflect characteristic California appearance combined with 20th Century convenience.
The new homes, now in their third unit, are located just off the new Artesia freeway and minutes from the Santa Ana and 605 freeways.

SOUTHPOINT HOMES Have 15 Different Elevations

Southpoint Is Lauded for Providing Privacy, Space

Southpoint, a development of the Burnam Building Co. of Beverly Hills, is quite a contrast with most home-building projects in Orange and Los Angeles Counties, if privacy and lot size are considerations.

Located in Villa Park, Southpoint homes are constructed on cul-de-sac sites with a minimum 8,500-square-foot to more than one-half acre.

Norman Burnam, president of the Burnam Building Co., said the density of homes at Southpoint runs from 1.75 homes to the acre to three to the acre in this unique plan for privacy and space.

"The density compares with six to the acre in the average home-building project," says Burnam.

"Southpoint homes are 12 feet to 29 feet apart, and the average is less than eight feet in most developments, if measurement is made from house eave to house eave."

SOUTHPOINT, largest development in Villa Park, conforms with the Villa Park Interim General Plan to create an estate-like residential community, Burnam says.

The community has two elementary schools, one junior high school, and one senior high school, will have one shopping center, and this is all the general plan provides.

The City of Orange borders the city on all sides, and Villa Park stands in the tradition of its beginning as an early California community distinguished by its modern estate homes, orchards and peaceful rural atmosphere.

It is obvious, says Burnam, that Villa Park's available acreage will soon reach its built-out period, specially with Southpoint being one of the largest developments in the area.

SOUTHPOINT, he says, will be comprised of 137 homes total in Villa Park.

"The City of Villa Park was incorporated in 1962 and the general plan was adopted five years later," says Burnam. "With communities of homes like Southpoint now within the city limits, Villa Park already knows its impact as a result of the general plan."

Burnam said his firm went into Villa Park with Southpoint, knowing 1) that the general plan assures a balanced and economically stable residential-estate community sustained by moderate property taxes and retail business revenues; 2) that it preserves the rural community's wholesome environment and qualities of contemporary living; 3) protects the residential-estate community although other uses are required to be compatible, complementary and beneficial; and 4) provides establishment of moderate community facilities and services for essential conveniences and protection of the residents.

NOTABLE features in the Southpoint homes are self-cleaning ovens, water outlet to refrigerator for an icemaker, extra-large terrace kitchen sinks, wet bars, custom lighting fixtures, concrete drives, heavy shake roofs, insulated ceilings, garden kitchens and two and three-car garages.

Southpoint's three-to-five bedroom and two-and-three bath homes on 8,500-square-foot sites sell from $36,750 to $43,750. Similar homes on half-acre sites are priced up to $48,750.

Southpoint, with four model homes decorated by Hamilton-Howe, may be reached from the Newport Freeway and east at Kattella exit 3/4-mile. The development is a basic assessment of an analysis of Villa Park citizens, but its orange-scented rural atmosphere is a contrast with its surroundings.

College Park Fullerton Gets National Attention

F. P. Drosch & Associates has been appointed exclusive leasing agents for the $75 million College Park Fullerton, one of the largest college-oriented residential, office and commercial developments in America, according to Wayne Lynch, general manager of the project.

College Park Fullerton, located in North Orange County, is a master-planned area of professional offices, apartments and retail stores which is literally "married" to the campus at California State College, Fullerton (CSF) by an overhead pedestrian bridge spanning Nutwood Avenue.

The campus-oriented business community is situated on 65 acres of land immediately south of CSF. The 15-year project, master-planned for completion in 1975, is so bold in concept that nationwide attention has been attracted.

KEY financial unit in the project is the seven-story College Park Financial Plaza whose major tenant is Newport National Bank.

The $2.1 million bow-tie shaped structure provides 90,000 square feet of space primarily for financial, insurance and legal enterprises, according to Fred Drosch, principal in the financial and investment consulting firm.

PRESIDENT

Robert Gaugler (above), of Garden Grove, has been elected president of Long Beach-Orange County Chapter, California Society of Certified Public Accountants. Other officers: J. Everett Morris, vice president; Paul Southgate Jr., secretary; Leeland Gray, treasurer.

The high-rise tower includes office suites, a law library, a penthouse suite, conference rooms, "walk-in" balconies and free parking guaranteed for the life of each lease.

Also included in this 65-acre complex are twin 12,000 square foot buildings, each valued at $400,000.

They are the two-story Accounting Datamation Building and the Cypress Park Building.

In addition, there are two, 40-unit, two-story College Park Apartments, the first buildings that were completed in the project. They are fully occupied, mostly by Aerospace employees and personnel connected with CSF, according to Drosch.

ANOTHER three-story, 331-unit apartment complex is to be constructed in three stages and will be located on 15 acres bordering on the intersection of State College Blvd. and Nutwood Ave., Drosch stated.

A hotel and golf course, to be located adjacent to these apartments and the Orange Freeway, which borders the eastern bound-

Keeping pace with the rapid expansion of the college is the College Park Shopping Center, which presently includes 36 shops, restaurants and the Titan Theater. Drosch reported that primary trade in the shopping center is dependent upon the approximately 11,000 student body of CSF.

"This demonstration of the Zenith Chromacolor system culminates more than a decade of research and development which, together with the complex manufacturing processes and sophisticated fabrication equipment developed by Zenith's Rauland Division engineers, cost nearly $5 million," he said.

"The new sets should be on retail floors later this month in many markets," he said.

Canyon Lake Begins Homebuilding Program

A homebuilding program to benefit its lot purchasers is under way at Canyon Lake, the 2,017-acre, $45 million family recreation community 20 miles southeast of Corona in Riverside County's Perris Valley canyon country.

W. Gordon Heath, president of the Corona Land Co., developers of the residential recreation project, said home sales of the Foothill Construction Co., a subsidiary of the Corona Foothill Lemon Co., are expected to reach approximately $2.3 million the first fiscal year.

Foothill Construction Co., he said, already has constructed five models located on different sites, varying from lakeview to lakeside.

The homes are from $17,000 to $30,000, and approximately 300,000 in homes have been sold.

HEATH said since Canyon Lake opened 14 months ago a total of 2,800 lots from $5,500 have been sold, with a real estate value of $24 million.

"Canyon Lake has sold

well enough to become one of the most successful family recreation developments in the United States for two reasons," said Heath.

"People get to enjoy the use of the land they purchase immediately, and they have the realization that their purchase will gain in value in the future."

Heath said Canyon Lake, with 383 surface acres and 14.9 miles of shoreline, is master-planned to accommodate a population of approximately 12,000 persons.

WHEN lot sales started, construction was begun on several requirements of the masterplan.

The gradual unfolding of this masterplan has resulted in the construction of a $550,000 clubhouse, an $175,000 village store center, a waterski island, three beaches, tennis courts, shuffleboard courts, a huge swimming pool, marinas and an amphitheater.

The 12,000-square-foot lodge sits on a peninsula across a bay.

Called Canyon Lodge, it features a restaurant, cocktail lounge, game rooms for billiards, ping-pong and cards, and a multipurpose room for social events and meeting of community residents.

CONSTRUCTION of an 18-hole regulation golf course, costing $500,000, is underway as well as an equestrian center, Heath said.

Now in the home-building business, Heath said home designs will conform to the terrain and to the purpose of the development, a family recreation project with water-oriented sports activities.

"The homes will not be of the typical subdivision type," said Heath, renowned as a master builder of recreation lakes, "but they will be of the design found in resorts like Lake Tahoe and Idyllwild."

"They will have plenty of glass and shake roofs to coincide with the styling of the development and constructed strictly for the purchasers of sites at Canyon Lake."

HE SAID lot buyers at Canyon Lake will be the investors and actual builders of Canyon Village Center, Canyon Lake's shopping center.

The center will feature 14 different buildings which will contain 80 different businesses, Heath said.

"The village center," said Heath, "will include a restaurant, drug store, two service stations and shoppes to fulfill the needs of Canyon Lake residents. The Corona Land Co. will sell the sites to buyers who will build the shopping center itself."

Canyon Lake's entrance is one of the most impressive. A country bridge, designed with the "clatter" in the board floor, and a huge rock waterfall set the atmosphere of the watersports community.

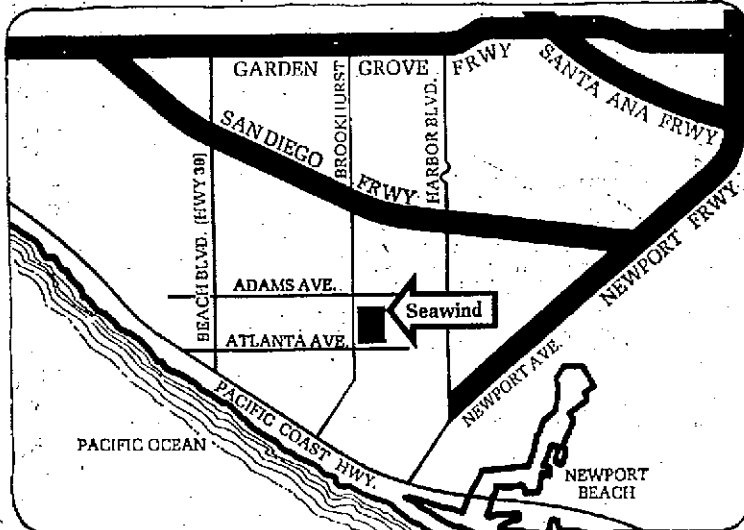

Located in the dramatic canyon country, the development is reached, via Highway 71 through Coro-

Census Survey Started

Households in this area will be included in a nationwide survey of consumer buying and home improvement expectations during July, Director Leonard C. Isley of the Census Bureau's regional office in Los Angeles announced.

Householders will be asked whether they expect to buy a house, car or major appliances during the next year and whether they have made recent purchases of these items.

Homeowners will be asked about home improvements and repairs during the last three months and any planned for the future.

THE SURVEY is taken quarterly throughout the Nation to gather information that will guide Federal agencies and other groups with programs based on consumer spending patterns.

In the most recent survey of the series, taken in April, U.S. families indicated that their plans for buying houses and cars were at about the same level as a year earlier, but on the average they expect to buy more household appliances and furnishings.

Households included in the July survey will not be identified. All answers are kept confidential by the Census Bureau, and information obtained in the survey will be used only for statistical purposes.

Sales at College Park continue to establish the development as one of the most successful in the history of California homebuilding.

RANCHO CAPISTRANO . . . Rich Pastures

Rancho Capistrano Offers Acreages Inside Forest

Southern Californians have turned out by the thousands to visit Rancho Capistrano, a 300 acre development of 2½ to 3-acre rancho sites within the Cleveland National Forest. Of 133 sites available, 75 sold in the first 2½ weeks.

According to Dick Beamish and Ron Diggins of Rancho Capistrano, this response indicates a need for land in the Southern California coastal area. Southern California land in larger parcels is becoming increasingly scarce.

Rancho Capistrano is the last available land in the forest area, and is an unequalled opportunity to invest in the South Coast area of California.

SOUTHERN California land has been rapidly rising in value.

As an example, several years ago similar land on the edges of the Cleveland National Forest was sold for recreational purposes.

This land has appreciated and several parcels have been resold at a substantial profit.

Rancho Capistrano's unique location further insures this land will retain its exclusive value in years to come. A 300-acre island of incomparable beauty, completely surrounded by the sanctuary of the Cleveland National Forest, Rancho Capistrano remains unspoiled and untouched by commercialism and industry.

Early California rancho living and modern recreational facilities have been imaginatively combined in the development of Rancho Capistrano, and the rolling hills, shaded vales, and stately Spanish oaks remain as they have for hundreds of years.

RECREATIONAL facilities include picnic areas in shaded groves, a completely furnished, tile-roofed recreation building, two sparkling lakes, a dock, and a sailboat.

'Young American' Series Popular at Morningside

A rapid sales pace continues at the third and final unit at Morningside, in Cerritos, according to Irv Freivogel, sales manager, Boise Cascade Building Co., builders of the community.

Featuring the "New Homes for Young Americans" series, Morningside homes fulfill the needs and requirements of young, growing families in the middle income bracket.

"Young people find the space they need, the 'extras' and at a price they can afford," Freivogel said.

Priced from $22,995, the spacious homes may be purchased on conventional terms, with low down payments and monthly payments from $145, including principle and interest.

FLOOR plans provide for ample living space, including three and four bedrooms, two and three baths, large family rooms, built-ins and many

"sought after" luxury extras.

The sales manager also cited the central location and realistic pricing as other prime factors contributing to the rapid sales pace at Morningside.

Model homes are open daily for inspection and may be reached from the San Gabriel (605) Freeway, by taking the South Street offramp and continuing west on South Street to Studebaker Road, then left to the models opposite 195th Street.

El Ray Park Now Featuring 'Del Amo'

A new home model, the "Del Amo," is being offered through a special introductory plan, at El Ray Park, in Cerritos, it was announced by John Heil, regional marketing director, for the eastern region of the Boise Cascade Building Co.

The three-bedroom, Del Amo residence is priced at $29,950 and may be purchased on terms featuring monthly payments of $172, including principal and interest, with down payments of 10 per cent, Heil explained.

The spacious new model contains 1,500 square feet of space and floor plans also include a large family room in striking one, two and split-level stylings.

The marketing director also pointed out that purchasers at El Ray Park, may take advantage of the Equity Transfer Plan, allowing them to transfer the equity in their present home as part of the financing arrangements for a new El Ray Park home.

SPURRING sales in recent weeks is the fact that a major shopping center is to be built on a 140-acre site on South Street, just one minute from El Ray Park.

The mall complex of the planned center will contain 70 stores including Sears, Broadway department stores, banks, restaurants and a theater.

El Ray Park may be reached from the Santa Ana or San Diego Freeways to the San Gabriel Freeway (605) continuing on Freeway 605 to South Street offramp, west on South Street to Studebaker Road, then south on Studebaker to the model homes just north of Del Amo Road.

'Instant Energy' Planned in S.F. Springs Center

Special to the Progress Section

Instant energy for commercial food processing is the engineering principle underlying the development of the unique Refrigeration and Energy Center in Santa Fe Springs.

The source of this energy is a recently completed, natural gas-fueled central plant which is already providing high-pressure steam, low-temperature refrigeration and other energy requirements for such customers as Safeway Stores, Inc. and the Market Basket Division of the Kroger Co.

Plans for the construction of a new frozen food plant in the R&E Center were announced last week.

The new plant will be custom-built by the developer of the Center, for Van de Kamp's of Los Angeles.

THE central service facility is the heart of an unusual 49-acre industrial park, located immediately south of the Santa Ana Freeway between Carmenita and Shoemaker avenues.

Designed to serve the needs of a large segment of the Southland food processing industry, the park (initially known as the Santa Fe Springs Complex) is a joint venture of M. A. Nickkian, consulting engineer of Long Beach, Sydney Genser of Los Angeles and Central Plants, Inc., a non-utility subsidiary of

Pacific Lighting Corp., Los Angeles.

The central plant is wholly owned and operated by Central Plants, Inc.

C. T. Dierker, manager of operations for Central Plants, said services of the $3.5 million facility are "ready made" for processors of meats, poultry, fish, eggs and dairy products.

"GREATEST advantage of a central plant," he said, "is that it provides the customer with an immediately usable energy while eliminating his need for large boilers, transformers, cooling towers, refrigeration compressors, equipment rooms, maintenance and operating engineers."

In operation, the central plant supplies its tenants and customers with low temperature refrigeration, high pressure steam and hot ammonia gas for defrost.

Services are delivered through underground pipelines to tenant facilities in the park and to customer-plants in adjacent or nearby locations. Heating and refrigerating energy to each customer is metered and billed accordingly.

EXPLAINING the refrigeration process of the plant, Dierker said natural gas-fired engines, driving centrifugal compressors, are used to condense, cool and liquefy freon gas in a water-cooled condenser.

In the condenser, the freon in turn, cools gaseous ammonia to a liquid state with a temperature of -40 degrees F.

The liquid ammonia is then pumped to the customer's facilities for refrigeration purposes. Expanding and warming in the customer's refrigeration coils, the ammonia "blast freezes" the food product, and in the process, is converted to its original gaseous form.

THE gaseous ammonia is then returned by pipeline to the central plant condenser where the cycle starts again.

"We use ammonia as the prime refrigerant because a survey of our potential customers showed it to be the most acceptable."

Gas-fired boilers are used to produce the high pressure steam needed for rapid cooking and cleaning purposes.

Fizz Market

NEW YORK (UPI) — There's going to be plenty of "fizz" this year in the bottled soft drink market, according to industry researchers. As an indication, a forecast by the Econometric Institute says the soft drink industry will buy more than 7.5 billion bottles during the year to help slake the nation's thirst.

value-packed prices, Mancini said.

NEW showcases and checkstands, along with a re-fitted, brightly decorated cafeteria will add to the colorful interior of the entire store.

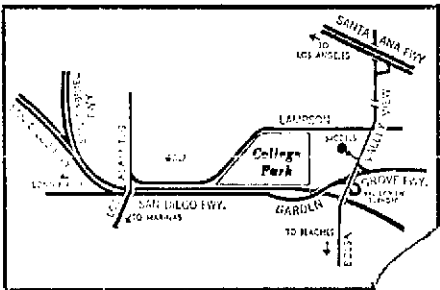

The enlarged yardage department will have quality cottons, synthetics and corduroys, with the entire gamut of materials in solids, prints and plaids, Mancini said.

This department will have sewing accessories, or notions, for the most discriminating buyer. It will be complete with buttons, bows, needles, thread, patterns, hem-makers and even electric scissors.

Kress-Rossmoor in Modernization Project

Now underway is a modernization and re-decorating project at the S. H. Kress & Company store, 12421 Los Alamitos Blvd., on the mall at the Rossmoor Shopping Center.

Throughout the period of the work the store will remain open.

The 35,000-square-foot project is scheduled for completion July 17, according to Frank Mancini, store manager.

"It will be a completely different store," said Mancini, "which will make shopping more exciting and easier for our customers. I'm sure many of our old customers will hardly recognize the store when it is completed," he said.

A MAJOR improvement will be a wide six-unit mall entrance with red carpeting which will blend into the red and grey tile vestibule floor. More than half the store floor area will be carpeted, with an ultimate increase of at least 30 per cent more square feet of selling space throughout.

Emphasis will be placed on expanding the yardage, sporting goods, automotive supplies and shoe departments. New merchandise lines will be added to all departments with the widest range of quality at

Spanish-Styled Homes in Bona Fide Liquidation

R-8--Sunday, June 29, 1969—INDEPENDENT, PRESS-TELEGRAM AND EVENING NEWS

The bona fide liquidation of over half a hundred Spanish-styled town houses continues, this weekend in Orange County's Fountain Valley.

The three and four-bedroom, two-story units offer both FHA and Veteran terms and have been cut drastically in price in the liquidation by agents for the owners.

Located in the heart of the Green Valley community about six miles from Huntington Beach State beach and just across the street from the new Orange County public golf course on Warner Ave., the town homes highlight large rear patios, built in kitchens, wall to wall carpet, and the total community facilities of the Green Valley development.

BUYERS may enjoy the twenty acre private park, family club house and giant pool, children's play area, boat storage area, putting green, and adult club house and pool.

The town houses are within walking distance to the park, pools, club houses and golf course and offer ideal investment potential, the agents stressed.

Visitors should stay South on the San Diego Freeway to the Warner-

East off-ramp. Drive East on Warner just past Brookhurst to the Green Valley entry. The site is just off Warner between Brookhurst and Euclid.

THE PORT ROYAL HOME... No. 1 At Seawind

Seawind Homes Emphasize Style, Space, Many Extras

Style and space are emphasized in the new Seawind homes in Huntington Beach without sacrificing any of the traditional Kaufman and Broad value, according to William P. Edwards, general manager of the firm's Southern California Division.

The style of Seawind homes has been characterized as "young elegance."

"Although these homes have up to 2,286 square feet, our marketing and architecture people worked together to utilize the space creatively, so that the homes appear even larger," Edwards reports.

Each of four models at Seawind has a distinctive ambience. The design plans are flexible, permitting a family to entertain formally or casually with equal style. Among the distinctive styling features are conversation pits — generally found in more expensive custom homes.

TRADITIONAL Kaufman and Broad value has not been sacrificed in these homes.

In fact, Edwards points out, they are among the best values available in Orange County.

Seawind home costs are as low as $15 a square foot and their prices include a package of "extras," comparable only to homes selling for one-third more.

These luxury "extras" — all standard items — include burnished bronze hardware in an exclusive Seawind design; stylish light fixtures also in exclusive Seawind designs; fireplace with log lighters; self-cleaning ovens, and heavy duty disposals.

The Sandy Hook home at Seawind is a dramatically styled one-story dwelling with a soaring cathedral ceiling in the living areas.

It has a sunken living room, a formal dining room, patio kitchen, family room and three bedrooms and two baths and a separate utility room.

Sandy Hook has 1,412 square feet and is priced at $27,990.

THE architectural simplicity of the Key Largo model belies its dazzling interior. A free standing floor-to-ceiling massive brick fireplace rising from a sunken conversation pit provides an impressive focal point for the home.

It can serve as the entertainment center for the family since the living, dining and family rooms flow around it in an open floor plan. Priced at $30,990 the Key Largo has 1,683 square feet which includes four bedrooms and two baths.

The Port Royal with 2,286 square feet is a handsome two story home with five bedrooms and three baths, priced at only $34,500.

The home is entered through a dramatic entry way. The openness of the living areas is accentuated by the vaulted ceiling and a large open area on the second floor which overlooks the living room.

A graceful stairway suspended in the center of the area lends style to the living areas.

THE BAY Biscayne model, priced at $33,990, is a tasteful yet dramatic house designed for a family who likes at home entertaining.

The living and dining room are separated from the kitchen and family rooms. The large family room which can accommodate a full sized pool table has a large sunken fire-side conversation pit at one end. It opens to the patio kitchen, providing a real "living center" for a family.

The Bay Biscayne with 2,250 square feet has four bedrooms and two baths upstairs; a third bath is downstairs.

Seawind is the culmination of over $20 million in new homes which Kaufman and Broad has developed in Huntington Beach during the past five years.

The firm first entered the Los Angeles-Orange counties markets in Huntington Beach in 1964 and has been developing new home communities there since.

It currently has The Beach development in Huntington Beach as well as Seawind.

AS ONE of the finest remaining beach areas available for development, we foresee a new trend toward larger and more luxurious homes in Huntington Beach, Edwards says. The elegance and style of Seawind homes were created to meet this trend, he notes.

Seawind models may be reached via the San Diego or Santa Ana freeways to the Brookhurst exit. Then south on Brookhurst to Seawind.

From the Pacific Coast Highway, head north on Brookhurst.

Dodgers Erase Padres
in Record 19-0 Assault

SAN DIEGO — Don Drysdale pitched eight shutouts last season in those games the Dodgers scored a combined 19 runs.

out here Saturday night against San Diego and the Dodgers scored, hold your hat — 19 runs.
"It was kind of unusual, I'll have to say that," said Drysdale.
It was unusual enough to tie a modern day National League record for the largest score in a shutout victory.

Ashe Blots Out Old Pancho's Hopes

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Arthur Ashe, the 25-year-old from Richmond, Va., blotted out the old lion Pancho Gonzales' hopes of becoming the second oldest man to win Wimbledon Saturday and after his four-set victory admitted:

The Dodgers set two Los Angeles club records — most runs in a game (the previous high was 17, accomplished twice against the Mets in 1962 and against the Cardinals in 1959) and most runs in an inning — 10 (the previous high was nine, at the expense of Pittsburgh on May 9 of this year).

With 17 hits, the Dodgers matched their high of the season and fell three short of the record since the club moved to Los Angeles 12 seasons ago.

Despite the hitting and run production, Dodger manager Walter Alston found the most encouragement in the performance of Drysdale.

The 32-year-old right-hander limited the Padres to five hits and pitched his first complete game since Aug. 11 of last season, when he blanked the Phillies 1-0.

Drysdale is 4-3 on the season and has won three of his four starts since being removed from the disabled list June 13. He hadn't pitched more than 6 2-3 innings in seven previous starts. And it was only two months ago he talked in terms of retirement after complaining of a severe pain deep in his right shoulder.

Beating the Padres, or even shutting them out for that matter, does not rate as a major accomplishment but Drysdale has shown he is ready for the hectic days ahead in the Western Division race of the National League.

The Padres have been shut out 16 times in their 78 games, but none was more embarrassing than the one Saturday night.

San Diego committed three errors and their five pitchers were guilty of 12 walks and five wild pitches. Four of the Dodger runs were unearned as the Padres' defense broke down after a good show-

NOT THIS TIME

Strider Bob Seagren came this close to clearing 18 feet in pole vault Saturday in AAU championships at Miami, but USC star brushed crossbar with hand. Although Seagren didn't get record, he did win at 17-6.

Seagren Getting Close; Carlos Bows

Combined News Services
MIAMI — Bob Seagren's hang-up is the 18-foot pole vault barrier, a level that may cause him to postpone his retirement.

Seagren came within a handspan of clearing the height at the national AAU track and field championships Saturday in his first two attempts at 18 feet. Each time his trailing hand brushed the bar off its fittings after his body was clear.

"The most important thing to me now is that 18-foot vault," Seagren said. He will decide after the U.S.-Russia meet in two weeks whether he'll retire or pursue his objective if he hasn't achieved it by then.

"I thought I came even a little closer to it in Knoxville last week," said Seagren, who won Saturday at 17-6. "The wind there was a tailwind. Here, it was a cross wind. On the second jump I drifted a little to the right and for a second I seemed to lose the feeling of where I was. That did it. My hand touched the bar after I went over."

Although he led all the way during his stunning 9.3 upset over John Carlos, Ivory Crockett said Saturday he thought he got a "bad start" in winning the 100-yard dash.

"I didn't really get moving until about 20 yards out," said the Southern Illinois U. speedster who beat Carlos by about a half stride.

"It really feels great to win but I still think John is the greatest runner," he added. "He has helped me a lot and I appreciate everything he has done for me and our country at the Olympics."

CARLOS, San Jose, said he was "very disappointed, but Crockett ran a great race."

Both Crockett and Carlos said they were bothered, as were other athletes all day long, by the gusty wind which had kept temperatures down at the Miami-Dade Junior College field.

"The wind really bothered me," Crockett said. "We were running right into it at the final."

Bob Seagren and John Pennell, considered the top rivals in the pole vault, also commented on the wind. Both said it was causing them trouble in gauging their jumps.

"The wind keeps changing directions," Pennell said. "There is a sort of cross wind coming around the sands just at the bar which makes it tricky."

However, a photo result showed the chests of the two runners hit the finish line simultaneously.

Jack Bachelor, the skinny Floridian who outlegged little Juan Martinez of Mexico across the finish line to win the six-mile race by three yards in 28:12.2 described the weather conditions as "unmercifully hot and humid out there and if they don't have a sprinkler system, I may not suit up for Sunday's three-mile run."

Double Dip Tops Kaweah Bar
By DAVE DANIEL

It was like Ivory Crockett defeating John Carlos in the 100-yard dash. It just doesn't happen, but it did Saturday in Miami and again Saturday night at Los Alamitos when Double Dips defeated Kaweah Bar in the feature race.

Double Dibs, surprising almost everyone of the 11,810 at the Orange County race track, won the race named for her famous sire — Double Bid Purse — and clocked a speedy 17.8 seconds over the 350-yard course to bout.

Kaweah Bar, 1968 horse of the year as a two-year-old and the early favorite for the Los Alamitos Derby in two weeks, suffered only the third loss of his brilliant career.

Kaweah Bar has now had 15 starts, winning 12 of them as Saturday night's effort snapped an eight-race win streak.

The loss shouldn't affect the palomino's popularity next Saturday night in the Derby Trials, however, as the gelded son of Alamitos Bar will have to contend only with other three-year olds.

Breaking from post position No. 1, Kaweah Bar appeared to have the race won easily until Double Dibs caught him in the final strides to take the win at the wire.

With James Dreyer in the saddle, the four-year-old mare returned $18.80 in picking up her first win of the year as Kaweah Bar was a prohibitive 1-5 favorite.

The feature race was (Continued Pg. S-8, Col. 5)

Buyers at Mesa Woods Benefit From New Land-Plan Concept

Many innovations, headed by a new land-planning concept that results in more interior living space in the home and full use of the entire yard, are attracting numerous buyers to Mesa Woods even before model homes are completed.

The development, now open for preview inspection at Sunflower Avenue west of Bristol Street in Costa Mesa, is by George J. Heltzer & Associates, Southern California's oldest exclusively residential builders, privately owned for over 44 years.

Seymour R. Berman, partner in the firm, describes the "tri-dimension environmental" homes as "an ingenious application of existing codes that permits the homeowner to enjoy every square foot of his lot, without a single foot being wasted."

On a traditional lot, the home is built from five to ten feet, depending on local codes, from the side lot line. As a result, such lots end up with a narrow, unusable and usually hard-to-maintain, wasted strip of land.

IN THE new concept at Mesa Woods, the house is built according to local building codes, but the otherwise wasted strip is "permanently loaned" to the next-door neighbor, permitting the latter to use the land right up to the fence and an exterior wall of the next-door home.

Nobody loses and everybody gains, as each neighbor makes a similar concession to his immediate neighbor.

Less fencing is required, as the solid, windowless wall of each home facing the actual lot line becomes part of the yard enclosure. Rights of entry and egress for maintenance purposes are maintained.

As a result, the home to be built on the lot can be larger than the old-style practice would permit, without sacrificing any of the yard. The positioning on the lot permits new and more practical designs which could not be built without excessive waste in the past.

A FINE example of the kind of features that can be added because of this land use is the open court, available in some floor plans of the Mesa Woods homes.

The open court, surrounded by enclosed living quarters, was a popular feature of Early California architecture and is still universally used in Mexico and South America.

In the Mesa Woods homes, the location of the open court usually is adjacent to the kitchen, family room and master bedroom.

"It is a natural for Southern California, where we have enjoyable outdoor weather the year around," explains Berman. "The open court does not substitute for a back yard, but is an additional outdoor area which can be enjoyed in utmost privacy."

ANOTHER talked-about innovation is the "conversation pit" in one of the floor plans. This is a cozy "open den" in front of a fireplace, complete with built-in seats.

Mesa Woods is offering floor plans of three and four bedrooms, available in twenty exteriors. One of the plans is designed for easy expansion by one or two additional bedrooms in the future.

Preview prices start at $27,950. VA, FHA and conventional terms are offered.

The development is west of the South Coast Plaza Shopping Center, the new growth area of Costa Mesa.

To inspect Mesa Woods, take San Diego Freeway to Fairview Road offramp, go one block north to Sunflower Avenue and right to model home site. Via surface streets, take Harbor Boulevard or Bristol Street to 1101 Sunflower Avenue.

MRS. FITZPATRICK ... And Kathleen

WORLD OF WINGS

By HERB SHANNON
Aerospace Editor

The youngest pilot in this year's Powder Puff Derby will be Kathleen FitzPatrick, 17, of 2345 Sparta Drive, Miraleste, who will be flying her first All-Woman Transcontinental Air Race as copilot with her mother, Mrs. James O. FitzPatrick.

Kathleen, president of the Youth Club at the San Pedro YWCA, received her private pilot's license on her birthday in May while a junior at Miraleste High School. She was taught by her mother, Gene, a certified flight instructor with more than 1,000 hours on her flight log book.

Mrs. FitzPatrick, who works out of Rose Aviation at Hawthorne Airport, will be flying her second Derby. The mother-daughter team will compete in a Cessna 172 in the race starting July 4 at San Diego and ending officially three days later at Dulles International Airport, Washington, D.C.

THEIR SPONSORS IN THE annual distaff classic are the R. B. Furniture Co. of Gardena and Anixter Bros., Inc., of Chicago. Nearly 100 planes are entered in the 2,515-mile event.

En route stops include Las Vegas, Nev.; St. George and Salt Lake City, Utah; Rock Springs and Cheyenne, Wyo.; Kearney, Neb.; St. Joseph, Mo.; Mt. Vernon, Ill. and Huntington, West Va.

The Powder Puff Derby, flown under visual rules in daylight only, scores its contestants according to actual ground speed in relation to previously calculated handicaps to equalize performance of planes of from 145 to 450 horsepower. Only stock model aircraft built in the last 10 years are eligible.

Among the 95 other entries the FitzPatricks will be up against Friday is Fran Bera, Long Beach's seven-time winner and contender in 19 Powder Puff Derbies. Fran will fly a Piper Pa-24 Comanche with Dr. Phyllis C. Walker, 5447 Olea Turn, Long Beach, as co-pilot.

THEY ARE SPONSORED by Aircraft Associates and Aerotron Aircraft Radio, both of Long Beach, and Chrome-Plate, Inc., of San Antonio, Tex.

Fran's 17,000-odd hours of flying time makes her a formidable contender in the Powder Puff Derby, but it doesn't seem to interfere with business as usual at Fran Bera Aircraft Sales at Long Beach Airport.

Among her recent customers was novelist and screenwriter Ernest P. Gann, author of "Fate is the Hunter," "The High and the Mighty," and other best-sellers.

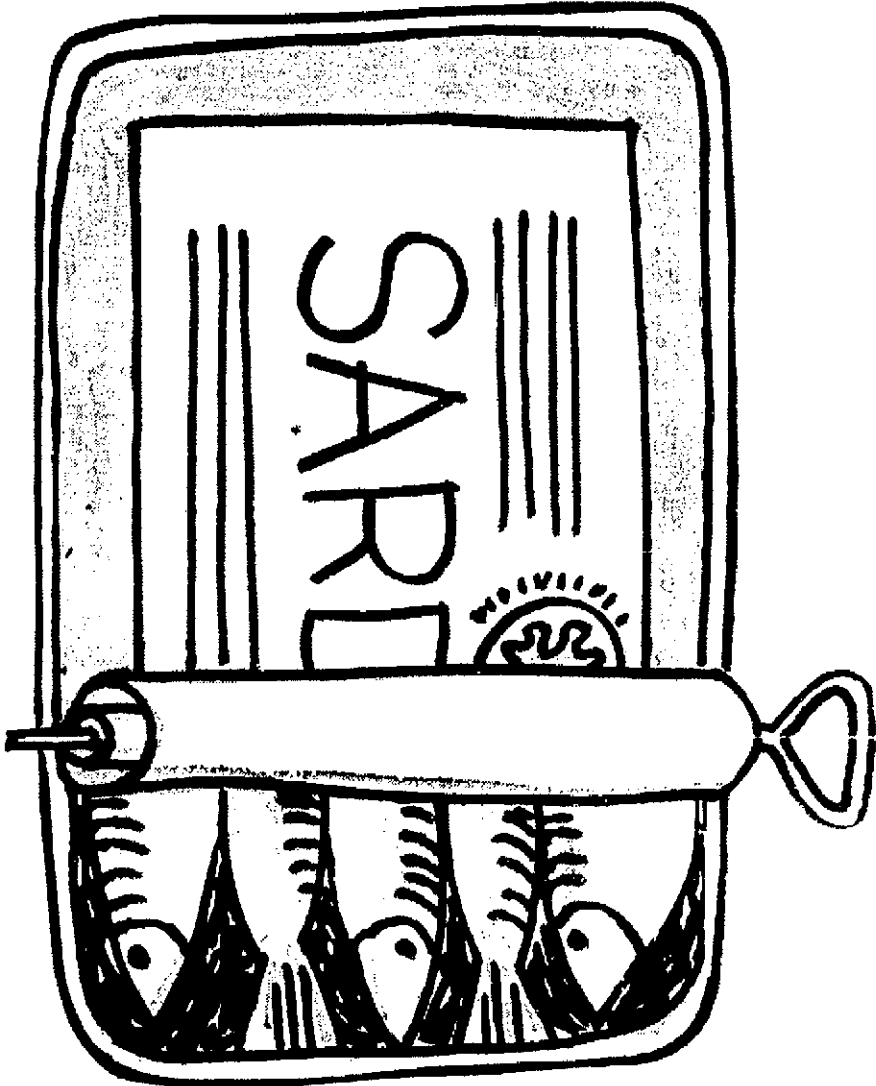

He will commute in his new Cessna 310H to and from his home at Friday Harbor in the San Juan Islands, Washington.

Harper Takes Zip Out of Angels, 3-0

By GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

Tommy Harper, the Seattle super zip, made a clean steal of second base in the third inning Saturday night and immediately someone trotted out something called a "Harper-O-Meter."

"Whoever thought we'd ever see a 'Harper-O-Meter'?" someone asked. Chances are we'll be seeing a lot of it. It compares the current giants of base-stealing, Harper and the Dodgers' Maury Wills. In 1962 it was Wills vs. Ty Cobb.

Right now, Harper, always a good basestealer but never a threat to set a record, is 13 games ahead of the torrid pace Maury set in '62 when he snared 102 bases.

Harper, who answers these days to "Tailwind Tommy," snagged his 43rd base in the third round against the Angels and later scored as the Pilots posted a 3-0 victory.

"I have no goal," says Tommy who played with Cincinnati five years before he was dealt to Cleveland and then claimed by Seattle in the expansion draft.

"I don't think too much about a record or anything like that. I'm just trying to help the club. The only goal I have is to be a winner."

Harper may not be thinking about a record but everyone else is.

His 43rd steal Saturday evening came in his 71st game. Wills didn't sack No. 43 until his 84th game during his memorable record spree.

It was also the 13th time in a row he's pulled off a successful steal. He hasn't been gunned down in nearly three weeks. And all season he's been caught but eight times.

Harper attributes his base-stealing more to know-how than merely speed.

"I'm probably the fourth or fifth fastest guy on the club," he admits with a smile. "But I get by far the best jump when I'm on base. That's what it's all about."

It's a familiar line. Wills always said Willie Davis was by far the fastest of the two. But going from first to second it was all Maury.

It's a delight for Harper to play for the Pilots and run-happy skipper Joe Schultz.

At Cleveland, he rarely had an opportunity to run. He pilfered only 11 bases last year after averaging roughly 24 steals in five years at Cincy.

Schultz has everyone running. Even Don Minchener. The big guy got in on a double steal Saturday; his eighth theft of the year.

ANGEL OF DAY

BILL VOSS singled and tripled to no avail as Angels fell to Pilots, 3-0.

As a team the Pilots have pulled off 91 steals. The Angels, by contrast, have sacked 23, about half of Harper's stolen.

Harper's biggest hurdle if he's to break Maury's record will be with the bat, not on the bases. When Wills set his record he batted in the neighborhood of 300 all season. Harper is hitting but .252.

The idea, of course, is you have to reach first before you can steal second.

The Pilots picked up single runs in the second and third innings and then Rich Rollins slugged his third homer of the year in the sixth.

Fred Talbot, the former Yankee, scattered seven hits over eight-plus innings. Bill Voss' lead-off triple in the ninth brought Diego Segui out of the bullpen and he preserved the win.

Voss and Aurelio Rodriguez each had two of the Angels' seven hits.

Tom Murphy worked five innings for the Angels and took the loss, his sixth in 10 decisions.

ANGEL ANGLES: Aurelio Rodriguez has hit safely in his last three games in the Angels' lineup for the first time in nine games.

Calderon Tom Egan and left-hander Clete Warlick are back from two weeks with Uncle Sam's military service. Egan is eligible yet since the roster is full at 24.

A decision will be made today on who goes to Hawaii. Rudy Map also is back, taking Greg Washburn's spot on the roster. Washburn, 24, has two weeks in Anaheim, is returning to the wall.

Andy Messersmith (3-0) works today's game for the Angels. John Galtner (2-1) starts for Seattle.

Today ends the homestand. The Angels open a 14-game road trip Monday night in Kansas City. After that is Chicago which includes a Fourth of July doubleheader. Seattle is at Oakland. Jim Hicks has been awarded the John Andrew Award for the best minor league pitcher in 1966. Hicks batted .366 for Tulsa in the Pacific Coast League. He will receive a silver Louisville ball.

Seattle's starting pitcher Saturday, Fred Scherzer, celebrated his 28th birthday. Saturday is his last birthday in the major leagues.

Dick Ellsworth had a four-hitter until the sixth inning when singles by Bobby Murcer and Joe Pepitone, a run-scoring double by Bobby Cox and a fielder's choice sent the southpaw to the showers. Williams came in and shutout the Yankees the rest of the way to protect Ellsworth's fourth win of the year.

The Indians drove New York starter Bill Burbach from the mound in the first with a three-run outburst.

FOSTER ONLY FRESH FACE AROUND

Can Light-Heavy Win Crown?

The heavyweight boxing picture will clear up rapidly once the federal courts hand down a final decision on Cassius Clay's appeal of his draft evasion conviction.

If Clay beats the rap, the proposed Joe Frazier-Jimmy Ellis match will determine which gets first crack at Cassius.

Nobody else figures too prominently in the immediate picture unless Clay's conviction is upheld. Then

DAVE LEWIS
Sports Editor

Cassius would be on ice for five years and this would open title opportunities for Sonny Liston along with a few others.

One of the names mentioned as a possible opponent for the winner of the Frazier-Ellis go is that of light-heavyweight champion Bob Foster.

We favor such a match rather than seeing one of the tired old faces try to win the title. Foster has run out of opponents in his division and must now look to the heavyweights for money fights.

Bob, a tremendous puncher, is confident he can beat both Frazier and Ellis. "They're made to order for me," he says.

Many light-heavyweight champions have tried to step up to the heavyweight throne — Jack Root, Philadelphia Jack O'Brien, Georges Carpentier, Tommy Loughran, John Henry Lewis, Billy Conn, Gus Lesnevich and Archie Moore. But none succeeded.

Bob Fitzsimmons held both titles, but Fitz won the heavyweight title 12 years before he became light-heavyweight king.

Fitzsimmons became heavyweight champion when he defeated Jack (The Nonpareil) Dempsey in 1891. And he ruled as champion for 11 years until losing to James J. Jeffries in 1902.

A year later, Fitz captured the light-heavy crown by defeating George Gardner. He lost that title to O'Brien via a 13th-round KO in 1905.

ROOT WAS THE LIGHT-HEAVY KING when he fought Marvin Hart in Reno for Jeffries' vacated title but lost in 12 rounds.

Carpentier was the next one to try his luck against the heavies. The Orchid Man from France met Jack Dempsey in 1921 and was knocked out by the Manassa Mauler in four rounds.

O'Brien twice fought Tommy Burns for the heavyweight title. They fought a draw in their first bout, but Burns won a 20-round decision in their return go.

Loughran went 15 rounds before losing a narrow decision to Primo Carnera in 1934 after giving up his 175-pound championship to campaign as a heavyweight.

LEWIS WAS KNOCKED OUT in the first round by Joe Louis, and the Brown Bomber twice disposed of Conn.

Conn was ahead of Louis on points through 12 rounds of their first bout, but got careless in the 13th and was knocked out. Joe stopped him in eight rounds in their second bout.

Lesnevich was kayoed in seven by Ezzard Charles in his attempt to win the heavyweight title while Moore twice failed in quests to gain the crown.

Archie had Rocky Marciano on the floor of their 1952 bout but couldn't keep him there and finally was belted out by The Rock in the ninth.

In 1956, Moore fought Floyd Patterson for Marciano's vacated title and was kayoed in five rounds.

"I DON'T KNOW WHY A light-heavyweight champion never has won the heavyweight crown," Foster said recently. "Maybe it's a mental thing. I really don't think it was the weight since many of the heavyweight champions were barely over the 175-pound limit of my division."

Fitzsimmons ranged between 160 and 165 pounds in most of his major fights and never weighed more than 172. Burns was only 179, while James J. Corbett, John L. Sullivan, Max Schmeling, Ezzard Charles and Marciano were between 185 and 190 at their best fighting weights.

"And Dempsey was supposed to have weighed 191 when he fought big Jess Willard, but I've read that Jack admitted in later years he weighed closer to 180."

"I figure I can hit around 185 if necessary, but I think I'd try to go into a fight for the heavyweight title at about 182," Foster said.

FOSTER HAS MET THREE full-fledged heavyweights. He lost to Doug Jones, Ernie Terrell and Zora Folley, but he claims that was a different Bob Foster. The guy who fought them was a young, hungry and in-

KANSAS CITY (UPI) — Bob (Hawk) Taylor's bases-loaded two-run pinch single ignited an eighth inning three-run rally that lifted the Kansas City Royals to a 7-4 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

Taylor, who delivered Kansas City's game-winning hit Friday night, lined a 1-1 pitch into center field, scoring Bob Oliver and Martinez to break a 4-4 tie.

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Tony Horton drove in a run and scored two others Saturday as the Cleveland Indians defeated the New York Yankees 7-3 with the help of Stan Williams' 3½ innings of shutout relief.

Dick Ellsworth had a four-hitter until the sixth inning when singles by Bobby Murcer and Joe Pepitone, a run-scoring double by Bobby Cox and a fielder's choice sent the southpaw to the showers. Williams came in and shutout the Yankees the rest of the way to protect Ellsworth's fourth win of the year.

The Indians drove New York starter Bill Burbach from the mound in the first with a three-run outburst.

WHAT'S YOUR PROBLEM?
Co-op Apartment Defects Minimized by FHA Law

By DON CAMPBELL
"Point of view" has been defined as the quality that prompts one man to judge the value of a doughnut by its over-all dimensions, and another in terms of the size of the hole in the middle.
In the same way, any discussion of the relative merits of cooperative and condominium apartments runs headlong into more personal prejudices than you'll find at a PTA discussion of compulsory ROTC. For instance:
MR. CAMPBELL:
In a recent column of yours on cooperative and condominium apartments I was struck by your generally favorable attitude toward cooperatives.

Apparently you are either too young to remember, or have a conveniently bad memory, because you made no mention of the terrible hardships that occurred during the early tops, bottle-glass pattern kitchen cabinet doors, and an unusual amount of storage space. Self-cleaning ovens are available in all models.

PRICES AT influential Homes' Lakewood range from $30,900 to $36,850 with FHA and VA terms available.

Less than three-quarters of a mile east of the San Gabriel River Freeway, Influential Homes' Lakewood may be reached via the Del Amo Boulevard off-ramp, proceeding east on Del Amo to Bloomfield and Centralia Road.

1930s when thousands of owners of cooperatives found themselves "stuck" with abnormally heavy expenses because their fellow-tenants skipped out on their obligations. I think you should have stressed this disadvantage of cooperatives more heavily than you did. — T.T.

ANSWER: It's quite true that, during the Great Depression, a lot of owners of cooperatives found themselves in a sticky financial position because of the circumstances mentioned by T.T. As a result, cooperatives did, indeed, gain a deservedly bad reputation which, to some extent, follows them to this day.

As I pointed out earlier, however, new regulations have been written into the FHA law designed to minimize the probability of this sort of thing happening again. True, these changes don't entirely obviate the possibility that cooperatives couldn't again fall into disrepute, but they go a long way toward minimizing the likelihood of it.

In amplification of this, the following letter from a Phoenix, Ariz., real estate developer, Vincent Gilloley, makes an interesting point:

MR. CAMPBELL:
In my continuous search for points of difference between cooperative and condominium types of buying housing, I found very interesting your recent column on the subject.

As you say, it is under the auspices of the Federal Housing Administration that 99.9 per cent of all co-ops and condominiums are built. That agency would not approve loans for either sort of construction unless in an area already prospering or at least with favorable prospects. As a consequence, defaults are few and far between and the problem is for the most part theoretical.

A salient feature of our occupancy contracts at this co-op, one that you failed to mention, and one that takes the "scare" away from people who flinch from signing up for a lifetime period, is the clause in the contracts which provides that after each three-year period every stockholder has the privilege of pulling out, bag and baggage, with no liability to follow him, but of course sacrificing his equity in the corporation.

In actual practice, covering a period of more than six years in this project, a stockholder who wished to leave simply finds a buyer and makes a sale, with the approval of the corporation's board of directors.

It is at this point that the convenience of transferring a cooperator's interest becomes apparent. Since the corporation holds the title there is no need of a title search or other usual complication connected with real estate transactions.

Very little paper work is involved and practically

GRANTED, of course, the anti-cooperative reader can seize on Gilloley's phrase "simply finds a buyer" as an example that — in the event of hard times — the co-op owner might still find himself in trouble. Nevertheless, it must be conceded that about 99 per cent of the risks that existed in connection with cooperatives during the 1930s have been pretty well shaken out.

SOUTHPOINT HOMES . . . Have 15 Different Elevations

Southpoint Is Lauded for Providing Privacy, Space

Southpoint, a development of the Burnam Building Co. of Beverly Hills, is quite a contrast with most home-building projects in Orange and Los Angeles Counties, if privacy and lot size are considerations.

Located in Villa Park, Southpoint homes are constructed on cul de sac sites with a minimum 8,300-square-foot to more than one-half acre.

Norman Burnam, president of the Burnam Building Co., said the density of homes at Southpoint runs from 1.75 homes to the acre to three to the acre in this unique plan for privacy and space.

"The density compares with six to the acre in the average home-building project," says Burnam.

"Southpoint homes are 12 feet to 29 feet apart, and the average is less than eight feet in most developments. If measurement is made from house eave to house eave."

SOUTHPOINT, largest development in Villa Park, conforms with the Villa Park Interim General Plan to create an estate-like residential community, Burnam says.

The community has two elementary schools, one junior high school, and one senior high school, will have one shopping center, and this is all the general plan provides.

The City of Orange borders the city on all sides, and Villa Park stands in the tradition of its beginning as an early California community distinguished by its modern estate homes, orchards and peaceful rural atmosphere.

It is obvious, says Burnam, that Villa Park's available acreage will soon reach its built-out period, especially with Southpoint being one of the largest developments in the area.

SOUTHPOINT, he says, will be comprised of 187 homes total in Villa Park.

"The City of Villa Park was incorporated in 1962 and the general plan was adopted five years later," says Burnam. "With communities of homes like Southpoint now within the city limits, Villa Park already knows its impact as a result of the general plan."

Burnam said his firm went into Villa Park with Southpoint, knowing 1) that the general plan assures a balanced and economically stable residential-estate community sustained by moderate property taxes and retail business revenues; 2) that it preserves the rural community's wholesome environment and qualities of contemporary living; 3) protects the residential-estate community although other uses are required to be compatible, complimentary and beneficial; and 4) provides establishment of moderate community facilities and services for essential conveniences and protection of the residents.

NOTABLE features in the Southpoint homes are self-cleaning ovens, water outlet to refrigerator for an icemaker, extra-large terrace kitchen sinks, wet bars, custom lighting fixtures, concrete drives, heavy shake roofs, insulated ceilings, garden kitchens and two and three car garages.

Southpoint's three-to-five bedroom and two-and-three bath homes on 8,500-square-foot sites sell from $36,750 to $43,750. Similar homes on half-acre sites are priced up to $48,750.

Southpoint, with four model homes decorated by Hamilton-Howe, may be reached from the Newport Freeway and east at Kattella exit 3 1/2-mile. The development is a basic assessment of an analysis of Villa Park citizens, but its orange-scented rural atmosphere is a contrast with its surroundings.

College Park Fullerton Gets National Attention

F. P. Drosch & Associates has been appointed exclusive leasing agents for the $75 million College Park Fullerton, one of the largest college-oriented residential, office and commercial development in America, according to Wayne Lynch, general manager of the project.

College Park Fullerton, located in North Orange County, is a master-planned area of professional offices, apartments and retail stores which is literally "married" to the campus at California State College, Fullerton (CSF) by an overhead pedestrian bridge spanning Nutwood Avenue.

The campus-oriented business community is situated on 65 acres of land immediately south of CSF. The 15-year project, master-planned for completion in 1975, is so bold in concept that nationwide attention has been attracted.

KEY financial unit in the project is the seven-story College Park Financial Plaza whose major tenant is Newport National Bank.

The $2.1 million bow-tie shaped structure provides 80,000 square feet of space primarily for financial, insurance and legal enterprises, according to Fred Drosch, principal in the financial and investment consulting firm.

PRESIDENT

Robert Gaugler (above), of Garden Grove, has been elected president of Long Beach-Orange County Chapter, California Society of Certified Public Accountants. Other officers: J. Everett Morris, vice president; Paul Southgate Jr., secretary; Leeland Gray, treasurer.

The high-rise tower includes office suites, a law library, a penthouse suite, conference rooms, "walk-in" balconies and free parking guaranteed for the life of each lease.

Also included in this 65-acre complex are twin 12,000 square foot buildings, each valued at $400,000.

They are the two-story Accounting Datamation Building and the Cypress Park Building.

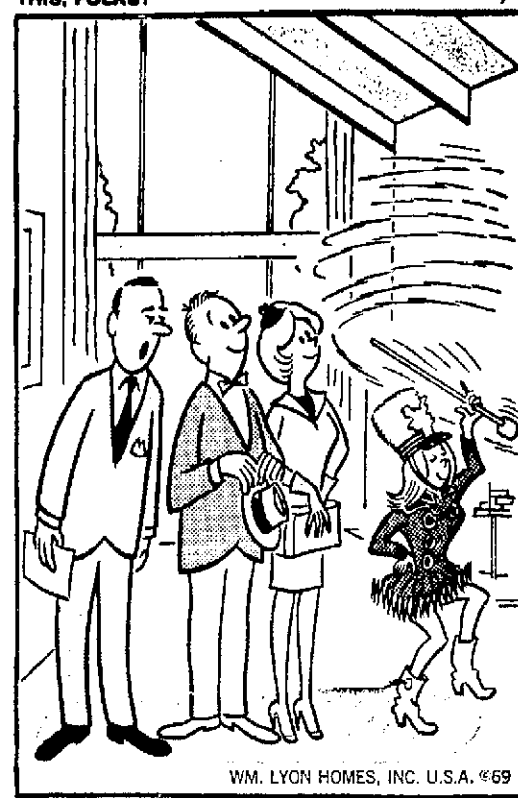

In addition, there are two, 40-unit, two-story College Park Apartments, the first buildings that were completed in the project. They are fully occupied, mostly by Aerospace employees and personnel connected with CSF, according to Drosch.

ANOTHER three-story, 381-unit apartment complex is to be constructed in three stages and will be located on 15 acres bordering on the intersection of State College Blvd. and Nutwood Ave., Drosch stated.

A hotel and golf course, to be located adjacent to these apartments and the Orange Freeway, which borders the eastern bound-

Census Survey Started

Households in this area will be included in a nationwide survey of consumer buying and home improvement expectations during July. Director Leonard C. Isley of the Census Bureau's regional office in Los Angeles announced.

Householders will be asked whether they expect to buy a house, car or major appliances during the next year and whether they have made recent purchases of these items.

Homeowners will be asked about home improvements and repairs during the last three months and any planned for the future.

THE SURVEY is taken quarterly throughout the Nation to gather information that will guide Federal agencies and other groups in their programs based on consumer spending patterns.

In the most recent survey of the series, taken in April, U.S. families indicated that their plans for buying houses and cars were at about the same level as a year earlier, but the average they expect to buy more household appliances and furnishings.

Households included in the July survey will not be identified. All answers are kept confidential by the Census Bureau, and information obtained in the survey will be used only for statistical purposes.

Canyon Lake Begins Homebuilding Program

A homebuilding program to benefit its lot purchasers is under way at Canyon Lake, the 2,017-acre, $45 million family recreation community 20 miles southeast of Corona in Riverside County's Perris Valley canyon country.

W. Gordon Heath, president of the Corona Land Co., developers of the residential recreation project, said home sales of the Foothill Construction Co., a subsidiary of the Corona Foothill Lemon Co., are expected to reach approximately $2.3 million the first fiscal year.

Foothill Construction Co., he said, already has constructed five models located on different sites, varying from lakeview to lakeside.

The homes are from $17,000 to $30,000, and approximately $300,000 in homes have been sold.

HEATH said since Canyon Lake opened 14 months ago a total of 2,800 lots from $5,500 have been sold, with a real estate value of $24 million.

"Canyon Lake has sold

well enough to become one of the most successful family recreation developments in the United States for two reasons," said Heath.

"People get to enjoy the use of the land they purchase immediately, and they have the realization that their purchase will gain in value in the future."

Heath said Canyon Lake, with 383 surface acres and 14.9 miles of shoreline, is master-planned to accommodate a population of approximately 12,000 persons.

WHEN lot sales started, construction was begun on several requirements of the masterplan.

The gradual unfolding of this masterplan has resulted in the construction of a $550,000 clubhouse, an $175,000 village store center, a waterski island, three beaches, tennis courts, shuffleboard courts, a huge swimming pool, marinas and an amphitheater.

The 12,000-square-foot lodge sits on a peninsula across a bay.

Called Canyon Lodge, it features a restaurant, cocktail lounge, game rooms for billiards, ping-pong and cards, and a multipurpose room for social events and meeting of community residents.

CONSTRUCTION of an 18-hole regulation golf course, costing $800,000, is underway as well as an equestrian center, Heath said.

Now in the homebuilding business, Heath said home designs will conform to the terrain and to the purpose of the development, a family recreation project with water-oriented sports activities.

"The homes will not be of the typical subdivision type," said Heath, renowned as a master builder of recreation lakes, "but they will be of the design found in resorts like Lake Tahoe and Idyllwild."

"They will have plenty of glass and shake roofs or coincide with the styling of the development and constructed strictly for the purchasers of sites at Canyon Lake."

HE SAID lot buyers at Canyon Lake will be the investors and actual builders of Canyon Village Center, Canyon Lake's shopping center.

The center will feature 14 different buildings which will contain 80 different businesses, Heath said.

"The village center," said Heath, "will include a restaurant, drug store, two service stations and shoppes to fulfill the needs of Canyon Lake residents. The Corona Land Co. will sell the sites to buyers who will build the shopping center itself."

Canyon Lake's entrance is one of the most impressive. A country bridge, designed with the "clatter" in the board floor, and a huge rock waterfall set the atmosphere of the watersports community.

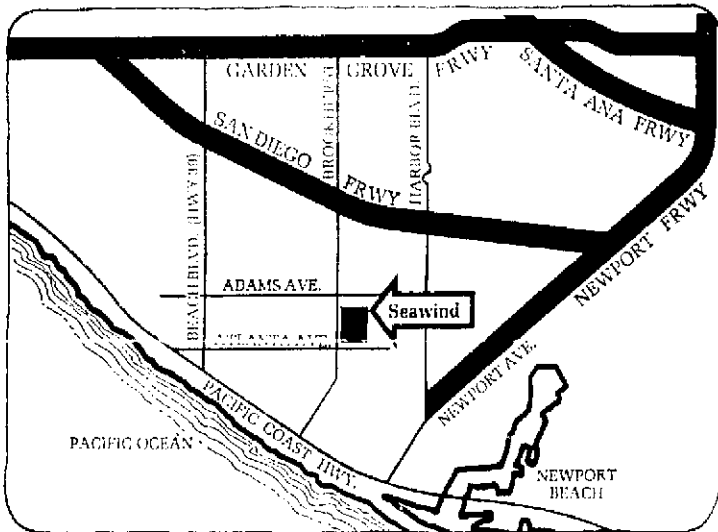

Located in the dramatic canyon country, the development is reached via Highway 71 through Corona to Railroad Canyon Highway 395 past Sun Road and left at Railroad Canyon Road.

Sales at College Park continue to establish the development as one of the most successful in the history of California homebuilding.

Jerry Degen, marketing director for S&S Construction Co. recently analyzed the continuing success of College Park and commented:

"This development has proven that the techniques of mass buying and volume building can be successfully used in custom home construction."

PRICED from $32,300, College Park homes offer such custom features as slate or marble entryways, huge master suites, stone fireplace walls and custom paneling in family rooms, and luxurious, hand-finished cabinetry throughout.

Like all homes built by S&S Construction, the construction features includes genuine oak and plaster, raised entries and dramatic, cathedral ceilings, and granite tile in all baths and kitchens.

College Park homes range in size from a three-bedroom home for the young family to a six-bedroom, three-bath home with a three-car garage.

All models include family rooms, and every room except kitchen and bathrooms include luxurious custom quality carpeting.

CAMDEN, N.J. (UPI) — RCA will spend about $1 million on engineering studies and the initial phase of a renovation of its Camden plants that ultimately could cost $20 million. H. F. Campbell Co. of Detroit and Barton-Aschman Associates, Inc., of Washington have been engaged to make the studies.

TORONTO (UPI) — Trans Canada Pipe Lines, Ltd., has announced it is joining Peoples Gas Co. of Chicago and American Natural Gas Co. of Detroit in studying plans for a large diameter pipeline to bring oil from the Prudhoe Bay area of Alaska to the U.S. border near Emerson, Man. Such a line probably would cost more than $1 billion, Trans Canada said.

NEW YORK (UPI) — St. Joseph Lead Co. directors have authorized a $19 million expenditure to develop a new lead mine and 5,000-ton a day ore mill in the Brushy Creek area of Missouri. Production would be about 65,000 tons of lead concentrates yearly, plus some copper and zinc concentrates.

MATTOON, Ill. (UPI) — Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co. of Milwaukee will build a plant here to make fork lift trucks and other materials handling equipment at a cost of about $6 million. WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Water Pollution Control Administration has made its largest ever industrial pollution grant to St. Regis Paper Co. to develop a promising new water control system. The system involves the use of activated carbon to treat pulp and paper mill effluents. It could result in 90 per cent reuse of the primary water supply in a kraft paper mill, the company said. About $500,000 has been spent on the process so far.

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Council of Housing Producers, composed of 15 of the nation's largest homebuilding firms, said elimination or reduction of accelerated tax depreciation credits, now being considered in Congress, would lead to a much bigger housing shortage and inflated rents. RANCHO CAPISTRANO . . . Rich Pastures

Rancho Capistrano Offers Acreages Inside Forest

Southern Californians have turned out by the thousands to visit Rancho Capistrano, a 300-acre development of 2½ to 3-acre rancho sites within the Cleveland National Forest. Of 133 sites available, 75 sold in the first 2½ weeks.

According to Dick Beamish and Ron Diggins of Rancho Capistrano, this response indicates a need for land in the Southern California coastal area. Southern California land in larger parcels is becoming increasingly scarce.

Rancho Capistrano is the last available land in the forest area, and is an unequalled opportunity to invest in the South Coast area of California.

SOUTHERN California land has been rapidly rising in value.

As an example, several years ago similar land on the edges of the Cleveland National Forest was sold for recreational purposes.

This land has appreciated and several parcels have been resold at a substantial profit.

Rancho Capistrano's unique location further insures this land will retain its exclusive value in years to come. A 300-acre island of incomparable beauty, completely surrounded by the sanctuary of the Cleveland National Forest, Rancho Capistrano remains unspoiled and untouched by commercialism and industry.

Early California rancho living and modern recreational facilities have been imaginatively combined in the development of Rancho Capistrano, and the rolling hills, shaded vales, and stately Spanish oaks remain as they have for hundreds of years.

RECREATIONAL facilities include picnic areas in shaded groves, a completely furnished, tile-roofed recreation building, two sparkling lakes, a dock, and a sailboat.

New stables and white-rail fenced paddock area are available for the care and boarding of horses, and miles of equestrian trails.

Plan to visit Rancho Capistrano soon. Take a drive to see the famed swallows at Mission San Juan Capistrano, then east on Hwy. 74 for 23 miles and follow the signs. Rancho Capistrano is open every day from 9 to 5.

Tennis Balls Kept on Ice

At Wimbledon, the tennis capital of the world, they keep the balls in a green refrigerator and the men standing in the summer heat.

"The players find cold balls bounce better," explains an old Wimbledon hand, "but nobody in England likes cold beer. Our American visitors sometimes complain about warm beer, but we never have had a protest over a hot ball."

FORMER world heavyweight boxing champion, Joe Louis, only hours out of a New York Hospital, arrived in Dayton Saturday to assist in television coverage of the United Golf Assn. tournament at the Kitty Hawk course.

TWO MORE gold medals of the United States' great women's Olympic swimming team have retired from competition.

The latest to call it quits are Caludia Kolb and Pokey Watson, both 18, and both from Santa Clara.

Miss Kolb won the 200 and 400-meter individual medleys in Mexico City while Miss Watson, won the 200 backstroke. Earlier this year, Jane Barkman (17) and Cattie Ball (16) retired.

JOCKEY Jerry Lambert was admitted to Centinela Hospital when it was discovered he was suffering from a partially collapsed right lung.

"They said I would be hospitalized about four or five days," Lambert reports, "but I'll be back in action just as soon as I'm able." Lambert is currently the second leading rider at Hollywood Park with 51 victories.

PLANS for an attempt to travel 300 mph in the speed boat Hustler have been announced.

Johnny Beaudoin, 54, says he will make the record try around Aug. 20 at Lake Isabelle in Kern County.

Beach, and Miss Casals; of San Francisco, had both won singles matches earlier. Mrs. King, the defending singles champion, downed Kristy Pigeon of Danville, Calif., 6-3, 6-2, and Miss Casals eliminated Kerry Harris of Australia 6-2, 6-2.

In the women's singles, Miss Richey was the subject of an official investigation by referee Capt. Mike Gibson.

The trouble came in the final set of her match against Miss Krantzke, the big Australian girl. "Shut up," little Nancy snapped twice at the towering Kathy, eight inches the taller, after the Dallas girl help up play disputing a call against her.

OK, Football Fans. Start Memorizing

By AL LARSON Staff Writer

Football positions have gone through a number of changes. You've heard of split ends, wide receivers, flanker and even lonesome ends, all designating the same spot. So memorize this, fans — the new standard for this year in the pros will be WR (wide receiver).

On the other side, remember when they were left halves (or right halves), wingbacks, secondaries and cornerbacks. Now, call 'em CB (Cornerback).

Okay, start memorizing.

THE REDSKINS, who haven't had a winning season in 14 years, will be the first NFL team to open pre-season training next month.

Vince Lombardi has ordered rookies to report to the "Skins" camp at Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa., July 9. Veterans are due four days later. The Rams play at Washington on Nov. 30. It marks their first visit to the capital city since 1963 when the "Skins" won, 20-14.

The Rams begin drills July 12 at Cal State Fullerton. Joining the 37 rookies will be 15 veterans. They include Roman Gabriel, Les Josephson, Milt Plum, Jim Nettles, Dick Absher, Coy Bacon, Gene Breen, George Burman, Dave Cahill, Vilnis Ezorins, Dean Halverson, Harold Jackson, Frank McRae, Frank Marchlewski and Bob Sanders.

From the Atlantic side of the continent is Mystic, Marvyn Carton, New York. A Great Lakes vessel will also make the race — Da Kine, owned by Harry Guest of Detroit.

Getting closer to home, Scotch Mist, owned by Robert O'Brien, and Nimble, William A. Nickerson, come from Portland, Ore.

Of all 82 entries, the majority — 44 — come from Southern California. The next largest group comes from the San Francisco Bay area.

All of the crafts are expected to hit the starting line off Point Fermin at high noon Friday, July fourth. This year's race marks the Silver Anniversary of the ocean racing classic.

Due to building and remodeling over the summer months, wrestling at the Long Beach Municipal Auditorium will not be held. Wrestling will return in the fall.

Hughes' Radar Praised

New radar equipment for warships of three free world nations is being built at Fullerton by Hughes Aircraft Co. under U.S. Navy contracts, the company reported.

Five complex radar-computer systems are being built for guided-missile destroyers of Spain, said Dr.

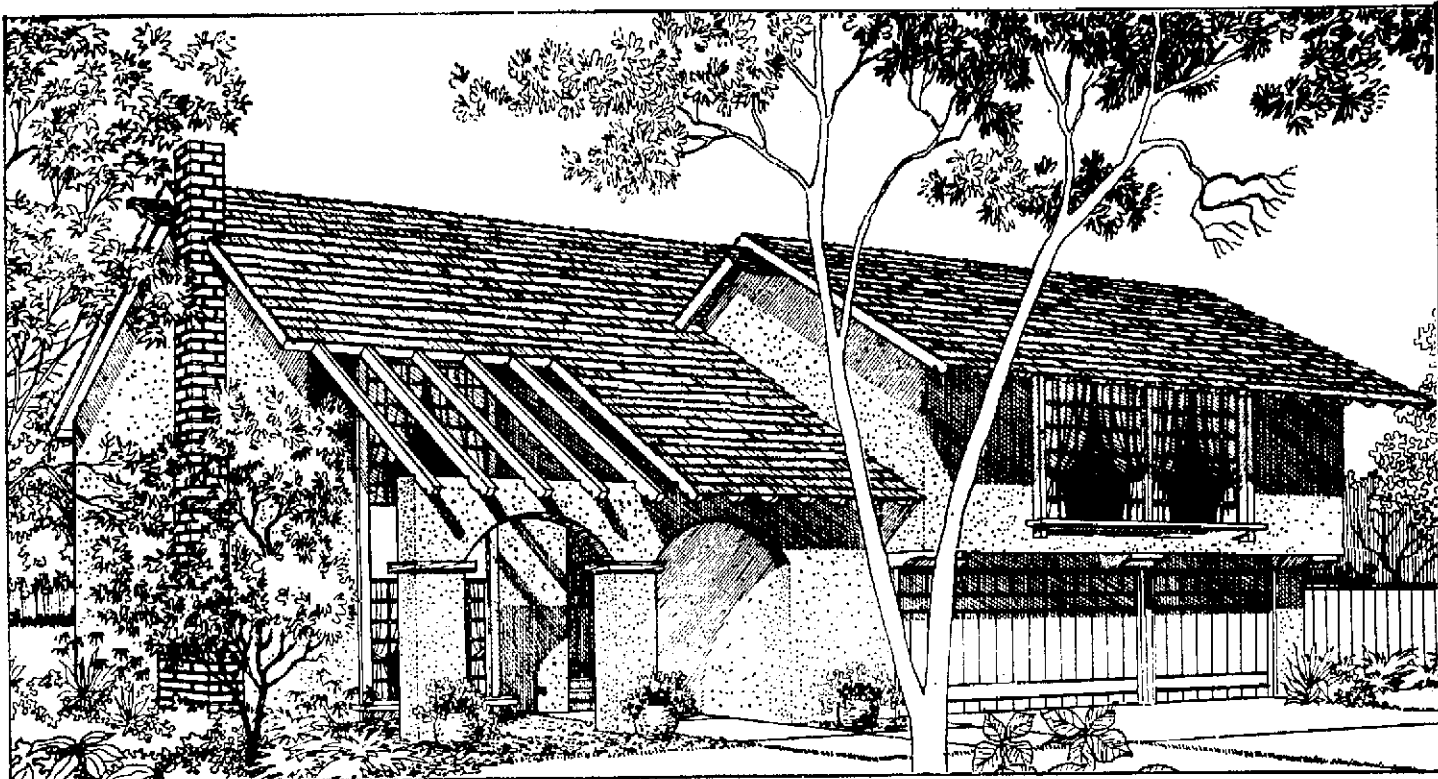

Nicholas Yaru, a Hughes vice president.

In addition, Hughes is building five planar, or billboard-shaped radar antennas — four for France and one for Japan.

"The equipment will be installed aboard warships of those countries to provide simultaneous three-dimensional information about air targets — height, range and bearing," Dr. Yaru said.

DELIVERY of the units is expected to be completed by the summer of 1970 under contracts exceeding $7 million, he added.

Marker is There, Where's the Fish?

Just in case you are a long-distance boater in any kind of aircraft, the 209-Fathom Marker, 26 miles south-east of the east end of Catalina Island, is in place again. It should prove to be a valuable navigational aid to all sportfishermen who will be looking for albacore and billfish.

The buoy, an idea of Ralph Clock and the Balboa Angling Club, was used for the first time last year. Although it was not intended to be an attractor for fish, some Spanish mackerel and other bait fish were taken near it. The 209 Bank itself forms the habitat for albacore, yellowtail, marlin and broadbill.

Once the idea was relayed to other clubs, it caught on rapidly, with the Long Beach YC, Pacific Anglers, Southern California Tuna Club, Shark Island YC, Newport Harbor Anglers, Bahia Cerritos YC, Light Tackle Marlin Club, San Pedro YC and the Del Rey YC lending financial assistance.

The Department of Fish and Game thought so much of the idea that it loaned the N. B. Scofield to the Balboa AC to tow and moor the buoy in its proper place. The buoy is not designed to support any substantial weight and chairman Clock has requested boaters not to tie their craft to it.

The buoy is equipped with a radar reflector and flashing light and is painted with orange and white stripes. It has a 16-foot mast with a black flag at its top so that it can be seen from greater distances.

SPEAKING OF OCEAN FISHING and just in case you have been hearing albacore rumors, forget what you have heard unless the stories are authenticated by some responsible person. Several boats have been roaming the blue Pacific, some just as far as the skippers dare without running out of fuel before returning to home ports.

Mostly, the talk of longfins has been just chit-chat, but inasmuch as there always is so much static on the ship radio bands, some eager beavers on shore who seem to be listening 24 hours a day pick up the one word, "albacore," out of all that noise and immediately start screaming that the schools have arrived.

Albacore could arrive before this column sees print, but as of this writing late Friday, there was no official word.

Other than that, yellowtail, bonito, bass, halibut and other species have provided the fishing fun at sea. However, the yellowtail fishing has been a yo-yo affair for all landings, even those in San Diego.

One San Diego operator said that there was so much squid in the water around the Coronados that the yellows were gorging themselves at night and, for the most part, didn't care to look at jigs or baits in the daylight hours. Long Beach operators have caught a dozen or more yellows at San Clemente almost daily, but those fish, too, are boat-slay.

FISHING AT BIG BEAR LAKE reminds one of the "old days" when big trout were weighed in every day. Resort operators are reaping the benefits of a full lake for a change and 2- and 3-pound fish are not unusual. The largest fish caught in June was taken by Enmette Keale, Anaheim, who was using that famous Zeke's Floatin' Bait, which is being manufactured at Downey. The brown weighed 7 pounds, 9 1/2 ounces.

Trollers have been having a field day with rainbow trout at the east end of the lake. They have been taking fish up to 5 1/2 pounds, but mostly on hardware, such as Dave Davis and Ford Fender rigs, with night crawlers for bait.

In fact, a Big Bear spokesman reported just yesterday that the best baits are night crawlers, Zeke's Floatin' Cheese, Mepps spinners and Hot-Shots.

Jim Caldwell, a Palm Springs resident, has been fishing at Big Bear for five years without any success. Just last week he caught a 2 1/2-pound rainbow and some smaller "bows." It was the first time that he had ever taken any fish in fresh water.

This is the start of the biggest week of the year for all resorts, with a long Fourth of July weekend ahead of us. If you haven't made motel, cabin, camping and boat reservations, you'd better stay home. In fact, one coastal resort owner actually is discouraging people from trying to enter his place. It has been filled for weeks.

OUTDOOR PERSONALS — More than 1,200 fishermen already have weighed in fish at South Lake Tahoe, which has a $25,000 Fishing Sweepstakes going this season. This is the California side of the city. Nevada's side probably couldn't care less, except that the gamblers there know that they'll reap the profits from fishermen as well as other tourists.

Mackinaw, kokanee, brown and rainbow are the species being weighed in for the derby prizes. The derby continues through July 31, so if you are in that area, give Tahoe a try but register first at The Outdoorsman, a sporting goods store on the California side. You also may be able to pick up some fishing tips there.

The Department of the Interior has distributed $24 million in federal aid funds to the 50 states. The money must be spent for fish and wildlife, land acquisition and development projects that will benefit fish and game.

The money comes from federal excise taxes collected from manufacturers, importers and producers of hunting and fishing equipment.

In the breakdown of state figures, California receives $298,500 for fish and $880,024 for wildlife.

Mrs. Gehrig Stricken at Mets Game

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mrs. Lou Gehrig was suddenly stricken Saturday night while watching an old-timers' ceremony at Shea Stadium prior to the regularly scheduled game between the Pittsburgh Pirates and New York Mets.

She was removed on a stretcher from the field box seat and given first aid.

Mrs. Gehrig apparently collapsed of heat prostration. She was given oxygen to revive her and then taken to a hospital as a precautionary measure.

The entire Mets dugout emptied immediately and surrounded the rail in front of Mrs. Gehrig's field box when they learned she was ill.

The wife of the former New York Yankee first baseman regularly attends old-timers games and seemed to be enjoying herself when she was stricken.

Mrs. Gehrig, the former Eleanor Twitchell, married the late Yankee first baseman on Sept. 29, 1933, during the height of his success with the American League club. Gehrig died June 2, 1941, at the age of 37 and his wife has been a frequent spectator at games involving both the Yankees and Mets.

Dodgers Erase Padres
in Record 19-0 Assault

By FRED CLAIRE
Staff Writer
SAN DIEGO — Don Drysdale pitched eight shutouts last season in those games the Dodgers scored a combined 19 runs.

out here Saturday night against San Diego and the Dodgers scored, hold your hat — 19 runs.
"It was kind of unusual. I'll have to say that," said Drysdale.

It was unusual enough to tie a modern day National League record for the largest score in a shutout victory. The Padres had a part of the record previously as they had been defeated 19-0 by Chicago on May 13.

The other 19-0 shutouts in the National League were by St. Louis over Pittsburgh in 1961 and Chicago over New York in 1906.

The Dodgers set two Los Angeles club records — most runs in a game (the previous high was 17, accomplished twice against the Mets in 1962 and against the Cardinals in 1959) and most runs in an inning — 10 (the previous high was nine, at the expense of Pittsburgh on May 9 of this year).

With 17 hits, the Dodgers matched their high of the season and fell three short of the record since the club moved to Los Angeles 12 seasons ago.

Despite the hitting and run production, Dodger manager Walter Alston found the most encouragement in the performance of Drysdale.

The 32-year-old right-hander limited the Padres to five hits and pitched his first complete game since Aug. 11 of last season, when he blanked the Phillies 1-0.

Drysdale is 4-3 on the season and has won three of his four starts since being removed from the disabled list June 13. He hasn't pitched more than 6 2/3 innings in seven previous starts. And it was only two months ago he talked in terms of retirement after complaining of a severe pain deep in his right shoulder.

Beating the Padres, or even shutting them out for that matter, does not rate as a major accomplishment, but Drysdale has shown he is ready for the hectic days ahead in the Western Division race of the National League.

The Padres have been shut out 16 times in their 78 games, but none was more embarrassing than the one Saturday night.

San Diego committed three errors and their five pitchers were guilty of 12 walks and five wild pitches. Four of the Dodger runs were unearned as the Padres' defense broke down after a good show.

CHICAGO (AP) — Lead-off home runs by Don Young in the third inning and Willie Smith in the sixth sparked the Chicago Cubs to a 3-1 victory Saturday over the St. Louis Cardinals behind Bill Hand's three-hit pitching.

Smith pounded his sixth homer to break a 1-1 tie and the Cubs added an insurance run in the seventh when Don Kessinger singled, moved to second on a sacrifice and scored on Ron Santo's single.

Hands, 8-6, had a one-hit shutout going into the sixth when Curt Flood opened with a single and scored on Lou Brock's double.

Ashe Blots Out Old Pancho's Hopes

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Arthur Ashe, the 25-year-old from Richmond, Va., blotted out the old lion Pancho Gonzalez' hopes of becoming the second oldest man to win Wimbledon Saturday and after his four set victory admitted:
"Sixty per cent of it was age. If Pancho had been one step quicker on each shot, the match might have gone the other way."

Ashe gained the quarter-finals by beating Pancho, Mexican-born tennis artist from Los Angeles, 7-5, 4-6, 6-3, 6-4. And until fatigue took command in the third set, the veteran always looked capable of pulling it out.
Pancho thrilled the center court crowd with some fantastic retrieving shots and flashing winners in the second set but tired visibly in the third and from then had little chance. At the end center court rose as a man to give him a thunderous ovation reserved for heroes.
Two other Americans joined Ashe in the quarter-finals. They are Clark Graebner, the power-ser-er from New York, who defeated Andres Gimeno, the Spanish professional, and Don Lutz, the 21-year-old student from Los Angeles, who beat the eager Australian teen-ager John Alexander.

Lutz, in a battle of the babies, won a grueling five setter, 9-7, 4-6, 3-6, 6-4, 6-4.
Graebner, seeded seventh, went through because Gimeno slipped and fell while going for a shot and had to retire with a sprained ankle. Gimeno had taken the first set 9-4 and was behind 5-6 with his serve to come when he was forced to default.

There were three U.S. Australian clashes in the fourth round, and Lutz was the only American winner.
The others, between Stan Smith and Rod Laver and Dennis Ralston and Tony Roche, both went to the Australians in five sets. With a little U.S. luck, both could have gone the other way.
The others through to the quarter-finals are John Newcombe, last winner of Wimbledon before it went open last year, who beat fellow Australian Fred Stolle, 6-1, 7-6, 6-0, 6-0; Cliff Drysdale, of South Africa, who beat Roy Emerson of Australia 6-4, 6-8, 0-6, 6-3, 9-7; and Tom Okker, the young Dutchman who had the easiest match of the round in disposing of Bobby Wilson, the veteran Briton, 11-9, 6-4, 6-2.

Pencches Bartkowicz and Julie Heldman pulled off a big upset in the women's doubles, defeating the second seeded team, Miss Billie Jean King and Rosemary Casals.
Miss Bartkowicz, of Hamtramck, Mich., and Miss Heldman of New York City won 5-7, 6-3, 8-6.
Miss King, of Long Beach, Calif., and Miss Cliff Drysdale, of South

NOT THIS TIME

Strider Bob Seagren came this close to clearing 18 feet in pole vault Saturday in AAU championships at Miami, but USC star brushed crossbar with hand. Although Seagren didn't get record, he did win at 17-6.

Seagren came within a handspan of clearing the high at the national AAU track and field championships Saturday in his first two attempts at 18 feet. Each time his trailing hand brushed the bar off its fittings after his body was clear.

Seagren Getting Close; Carlos Bows

MIAMI — Bob Seagren's hang-up is the 18-foot pole vault barrier, a level that may cause him to postpone his retirement.
Seagren came within a handspan of clearing the high at the national AAU track and field championships Saturday in his first two attempts at 18 feet. Each time his trailing hand brushed the bar off its fittings after his body was clear.

"The most important thing to me now is that I stood vault," Seagren said. He will decide after the U.S.-Russia meet in two weeks whether he'll retire or pursue his objective if he hasn't achieved it by then.

"I thought I came over a little closer to it in Knoxville last week," said Seagren, who won Saturday at 17-6. "The wind there was a tailwind. Here, it was a cross wind. On the second jump I drifted a little to the right and for a second I seemed to lose the feeling of where I was. That did it. My hand touched the bar after I went over."

Although he led all the way during his stunning 9.3 vault over John Carlos, Ivory Crockett said Saturday he thought he got a "bad start" in winning the 100-yard dash.

"I didn't really get moving until about 20 yards out," said the Southern Illinois U. speedster who beat Carlos by about a half stride.

"It really feels great to win, but I still think John is the greatest runner." He added, "He has helped me a lot and I appreciate everything he has done for me and our country at the Olympics."

CARLOS, San Jose, said he was "very disappointed," but Crockett ran a great race.

Both Crockett and Carlos said they were honored, as were other athletes all day long, by the gusty wind which had kept temperatures down at the Miami-Dade Junior College field.

"The wind really bothered me," Crockett said. "We were running right into it at the final."

Bob Seagren and John Pennell, considered the top rivals in the pole vault, also commented on the wind. Both said it was causing them trouble in gauging their jumps.

"The wind keeps changing directions," Pennell said. "There is a sort of cross wind coming around the sands just at the bar which makes it tricky."

Leon Coleman, who finished in a dead heat with Willie Davenport for first place in the 120 yard hurdles in 1:33, said he thought "I leaned my head down and got my head in front of Willie."

However, a photo result showed the chests of the two runners hit the finish line simultaneously.

Jack Bachelor, the skinny Floridian who out-leaped little Juan Martinez of Mexico across the finish line to win the six-mile race by three yards in 28:12.2 described the weather conditions as "unmercifully hot and humid out there and if they don't have a sprinkler system I may not suit up for Sunday's three-mile run."

Upset in Alamitos Feature

Double Dip Tops Kaweah Bar
By DAVE DANIEL

It was like Ivory Crockett defeating John Carlos in the 100-yard dash.

It just doesn't happen, but it did Saturday in Miami and again Saturday night at Los Alamitos when Double Dips defeated Kaweah Bar in the feature race.

Double Dips, surprising almost everyone of the 11,810 at the Orange County race track, won the race named for her famous sire — Double Bid Purse — and clocked a speedy 17.8 seconds over the 350-yard course to boot.

Kaweah Bar, 1968 horse of the year as a two-year-old and the early favorite for the Los Alamitos Derby in two weeks, suffered only the third loss of his brilliant career.

Kaweah Bar has now had 15 starts, winning 12 of them as Saturday night's effort snapped an eight-race win streak.

The loss shouldn't affect the palomino's popularity next Saturday night in the Derby Trials, however, as the gelded son of Alamitos Bar will have to contend only with other three-year olds.

Breaking from post position No. 1, Kaweah Bar appeared to have the race won easily until Double Dips caught him in the final strides to take the win at the wire.

While James Dwyer in the saddle, the four-year-old mare returned $18.80 in picking up her first win of the year as Kaweah Bar was a prohibitive 1-5 favorite.

The feature race was accompanied by S-S, Col. 3

Girls 'SCAT' to Europe

Thirty-two svelte and perky ambassadors of the American way of life leave Southern California today on the first leg of a journey which will include gymnastics exhibitions and competitions in six European nations during July and early August.

The group is the Long Beach SCATS, or Southern California Aero Team, a self-supporting women's gymnastics program organized by parents of girls in the greater Long Beach area and which has earned recognition as one of the world's finest young girls' athletic organizations. The touring SCATS range in age from 10 to 22.

First stop will be the mammoth Gymnastrada in Basel, Switzerland, where the girls will be the official United States representatives to one of international gymnastics' most important annual events.

Arrangements for this event and for the entire tour were made with the assistance of the U.S. Gymnastics Federation and Sundry Publications, publishers of Mademoiselle Gymnast and Modern Gymnast, the sport's leading magazines.

AND AWAY WE GO! Long Beach SCATS members (from left) Cathy Rigby, Bev Marquette and Lisa Nelson prepare for girl gymnast's five-week tour of Europe.

For most of the girls on the tour, the trip will be a first experience in international competition.

For two of the SCATS, it won't be novel at all. Doll-like Cathy Rigby, the 4-foot-10, 90-pound blonde from Los Alamitos, was the leading U.S. woman in last fall's Olympic Games in Mexico City. An Olympic teammate was fellow SCAT Wendy Cluff, 18-year-old from Torrance.

The two leading disciples of veteran coach Bud Marquette of Long Beach have campaigned successfully throughout North America, and little Cathy further distinguished her self last April by winning the championship of the first annual U.S.G.F. World Invitational Cup over an outstanding international entry list at Long Beach.

The SCATS will perform both group and individual routines July 11 at Munich, Germany; July 16 at Copenhagen, Denmark; July 20 at Stockholm, Sweden; July 23 at Oslo, Norway; July 25 at Edinburgh, Scotland; July 29 in London and Aug. 1 in Frankfurt, Germany.

The return flight to the U.S. is scheduled for Aug. 5 from Zurich, Switzerland, and there'll be a brief stay in New York for sight-seeing before the girls return to Long Beach.

Miss Rigby and Marquette will leave the group briefly on July 9 to fly to Stuttgart, where Cathy will compete in the German National Championships.

For Cathy and her teammates, the trip is the culmination of a year of planning and fund-raising within the community. The total expense for the girls is $30,000 — of which about half has been collected in shared receipts for exhibitions and meets in Southern California, projects such as cake sales and car washes and in donations from industry and individuals.

Further donations are still being sought, and may be made by writing to SCATS, 282 Coronado Street, Long Beach 90803.

Accompanying the girls in addition to Marquette are assistant coaches Dan Speraw of Long Beach and Lou Hirtman of Manhattan Beach and chaperones Mr. and Mrs. Vince Pietrok of Anaheim and Mr. and Mrs. Ed Teisere of Long Beach, parents of SCATS members.

The group will be identifiable by red-white-and-blue traveling outfits and competition uniforms and will take an illustrated brochure for distribution to fans at each exhibition as well as postcards to exchange with European girl athletes.

"The girls have been practicing hard five nights a week and most weekends for months now," says Marquette. "Putting this tour together and raising the money has been an enormous project, but the parents and I all agree that these girls are worth all that work and effort."

The 32 SCATS, listed by home town in Southern California and with their ages,

- Long Beach — Karen Audley, 16; Mrs. Kerry Barber, 22 (wife of Cal State College at Long Beach coach); Claudia Bodnar, 12; Bev Marquette, 18; Sarah Sieroni, 12; Sue Spruiell, 10; Stephanie Strawn, 14; Louise Sullivan, 16; John Tolson, 10; Laurence Truitt, 20; Gay Walker, 12; Gale Wyckoff, 15.
- South Bay Area — Teresa Cluff (Alhambra), 18; Douglas Hirtman (Manhattan Beach), 16.
- Southeast Area — Debra Bugar (Long Beach), 15; Karen Gallagher (Torrance), 16.
- Orange County — Carol Ance (Fountain Valley), 16; Debbie Boyd (Fountain Valley), 15; Lisa Nelson (Westminster), 16; Lori Nelson (Westminster), 15; Kathy Perry (Mountain View), 19; Sue Perry (Mountain View), 16; Patricia Pietrok (Anaheim), 16; Cathy Rigby (Los Alamitos), 19; Alicia Smith (Fountain Valley), 14; Denise Wells (Westminster), 12.

MONTEBELLO VS. N.Y. U.S. Soccer Cup On Line Today

The 1969 United States National Soccer Open Cup championship will be settled today at 3 when the New York Greek-Americans battle the Montebello Armenians at Rancho Cienega Stadium.

The program will start at 1 with an exhibition game between the San Pedro Yugoslavs and Costa Mesa Rangers.

The Cup final, a one-game affair, must be decided today, by overtime periods of two 15 minutes each, if necessary until the champion is declared.

New York has won the U.S. Cup for the two consecutive years, having defeated Orange County, 4-2, in 1967 and Chicago Olympic, 2-1, in 1968.

Should the visitors win again, they will become the first soccer team in the 55-year U.S. Cup history to win the title three in a row.

Only twice in the nationwide tournament has the Cup final taken place in Los Angeles, and both times local teams won it.

In 1959, the San Pedro Canvashals defeated Fall River, Mass., 4-3, at Rancho Cienega and in 1961 the Los Angeles Kickers won, 2-0, over Philadelphia at old Wrigley Field.

This will be the second opportunity for the Montebello Armenians to win the Cup. They failed in 1963, bowing to Philadelphia Ukrainians, 1-0.

Manager Leo Hawthorne and coach Ralph Moskian have high hopes of capturing the $3,000 national silver trophy for Montebello.

Ocean Swim Set at Seal Beach

An ocean swim meet in both novice and AAU classifications will be held next Sunday on the west side of Seal Beach Pier.

The meet, sponsored by the Seal Beach Swim Club, will include events ranging from a 100-yard stretch for boys and girls 7-8 years old to a one-mile adult race.

Entry fee for each event is $1 and open event swimmers should have garboard paddlers to accompany them, officials say.

Lakers Face Alcindor in NBA Opener

The Lakers open their 1969-70 National Basketball Assn. home season at the Forum on the night of Oct. 24 against Lew Alcindor and the Milwaukee Bucks.

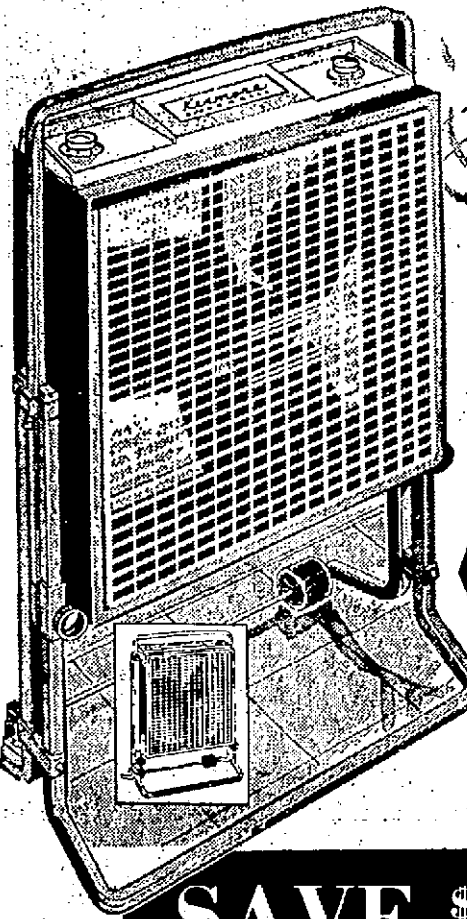

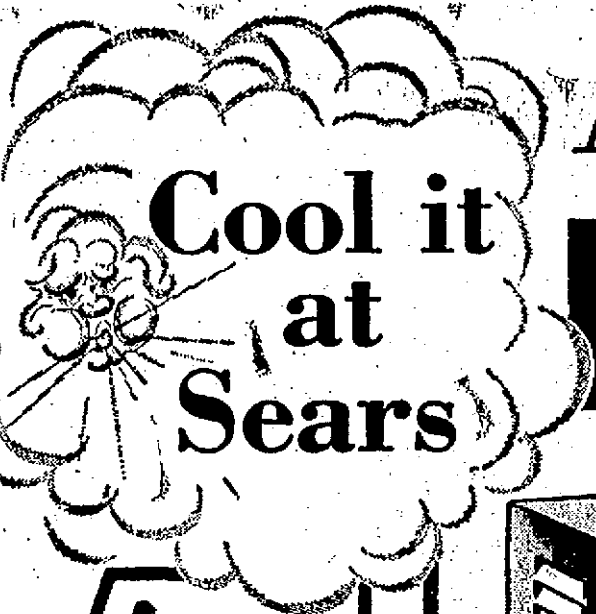

The game will mark the local professional debut of Alcindor, three-time all-America, from UCLA. Schaus said the Lakers have scheduled a pre-season doubleheader at the Forum Oct. 6 between the San Francisco Warriors and the Phoenix Suns, with Connie Hawkins aboard, and the Lakers against the San Diego Rockets.

Tennis Balls Kept on Ice

At Wimbledon, the tennis capital of the world, they keep the balls in a green refrigerator and the beer standing in the summer heat.

"The players find cold balls bounce better," explains an old Wimbledon hand, "but nobody in England likes cold beer. Our American visitors sometimes complain about warm beer, but we never have had a protest over a hot ball."

FORMER world heavyweight boxing champion

SPORTS BEAT

Joe Louis, only hours out of a New York Hospital, arrived in Dayton Saturday to assist in television coverage of the United Golf Assn. tournament at the Kitty Hawk course.

TWO MORE gold medalists of the United States' great women's Olympic swimming team have retired from competition.

The latest to call it quits are Caludia Kolb and Pokey Watson, both 18 and both from Santa Clara.

ASHE --

Beach, and Miss Casals, of San Francisco, had both won singles matches earlier. Mrs. King, the defending singles champion, downed Kristy Pigeon of Danville, Calif., 6-3, 6-2, and Miss Casals eliminated Kerry Harris of Australia 6-2, 6-2.

In the quarter-finals Laver plays Drysdale, Lutz meets Ashe. Newcombe plays Okker, and Graebner plays Roche.

In the women's singles, Miss Richey was the subject of an official investigation by referee Capt. Mike Gibson.

The trouble came in the final set of her match against Miss Krantzke, the big Australian girl. "Shut up," little Nancy snapped twice at the towering Kathy, eight inches the taller, after play disputing a call against her.

JOCKEY Jerry Lambert was admitted to Centinela Hospital when it was discovered he was suffering from a partially collapsed right lung.

"They said I would be hospitalized about four or five days," Lambert reports, "but I'll be back in action just as soon as I'm able." Lambert is currently the second leading rider at Hollywood Park with 51 victories.

Five yachts will have to sail from the finish line to the starting line to begin the race. These Hawaiian entries are Avenue, owned by John L. Milligan of Honolulu; Americana, John G. Moore of Honolulu; Hawaiiana, Jay R. Moore, Kaneohe, Oahu; Roughneck II, Nathaniel Sceva, Honolulu, and Curioso, C. Hayden Brown, Honolulu.

From the Atlantic side of the continent is Mystic, Marvyn Carlton, New York. A Great Lakes vessel will also make the race — Da Kine, owned by Harry Guest of Detroit.

Getting closer to home, Scotch Mist, owned by Robert O'Brien, and Nimble, William A. Nickerson, came from Portland, Ore.

Of all 82 entries, the majority — 44 — come from Southern California. The next largest group comes from the San Francisco Bay area.

All of the crafts are expected to hit the starting line off Point Fermin at high noon Friday, July fourth. This year's race marks the Silver Anniversary of the ocean racing classic.

OK, Football Fans. Start Memorizing

By AL LARSON Staff Writer

Football positions have gone through a number of changes. You've heard of split ends, wide receivers, flanker and even lonesome ends, all designating the same spot. So memorize this, fans — the new standard for this year in the pros will be WR (wide receiver).

On the other side, remember when they were left halves (or right halves), wingbacks, secondaries and cornerbacks. Now, call 'em CB (Cornerback).

Okay, start memorizing.

THE REDSKINS, who haven't had a winning season in 14 years, will be the first NFL team to open pre-season training next month.

Vince Lombardi has ordered rookies to report to the 'Skins' camp at Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa., July 9. Veterans are due four days later. The Rams play at Washington on Nov. 30. It marks their first visit to the capital city since 1963 when the 'Skins' won, 20-14.

The Rams begin drills July 12 at Cal State Fullerton. Joining the 37 rookies will be 15 veterans. They include Roman Gabriel, Les Josephson, Milt Plum, Jim Nettles, Dick Absher, Coy Bacon, Gene Breen, George Burman, Dave Cahill, Vilnis Ezerins, Dean Halverson, Harold Jackson, Frank McRae, Frank Marchlewski and Bob Sanders.

Josephson, who underwent two operations for a severed Achilles tendon, reports: "I've heard of a few athletes coming back from this injury. Elijah Pitts is one. But to be honest, I've heard of more who didn't."

"The leg's coming along," says the big half-back who has been working out for six weeks in Long Beach. "I haven't gone all out yet, because I don't want to press it."

As a team, the Rams never have played on a synthetic surface, but they'll get their chance on Nov. 16 against the Eagles in the newly surfaced Franklin Field on Astro-Turf.

DONNELL CULPEPPER

Marker is There, Where's the Fish?

Just in case you are a long-distance boater in any kind of a craft, the 209-Fathom Marker, 26 miles south-east of the east end of Catalina Island, is in place again. It should prove to be a valuable navigational aid to all sportfishermen who will be looking for albacore and billfish.

The buoy, an idea of Ralph Clinek and the Balboa Angling Club, was used for the first time last year. Although it was not intended to be an attractor for fish, some Spanish mackerel and other bait fish were taken near it. The 209 Bank itself forms the habitat for albacore, yellowtail, marlin and broadbill.

Once the idea was relayed to other clubs, it caught on rapidly, with the Long Beach YC, Pacific Anglers, Southern California Tuna Club, Shark Island YC, Newport Harbor Anglers, Bahia Cerritos YC, Light Tackle Marlin Club, San Pedro YC and the Del Rey YC lending financial assistance.

The Department of Fish and Game thought so much of the idea that it loaned the N. B. Scofield to the Balboa AC to tow and moor the buoy in its proper place. The buoy is not designed to support any substantial weight, and chairman Clinek has requested boaters not to tie their craft to it.

The buoy is equipped with a radar reflector and flashing light and is painted with orange and white stripes. It has a 16-foot mast with a black flag at its top so that it can be seen from greater distances.

SPEAKING OF OCEAN FISHING and just in case you have been hearing albacore rumors, forget what you have heard unless the stories are authenticated by some responsible person. Several boats have been roaming the high Pacific, some just as far as the skippers dare without running out of fuel before returning to home ports.

Mostly, the talk of longfins has been just chit-chat, but inasmuch as there always is so much static on the ship radio hands, some eager beavers on shore who seem to be listening 24 hours a day pick up the one word, "albacore," out of all that noise and immediately start screaming that the schools have arrived.

Albacore could arrive before this column sees print, but as of this writing late Friday, there was no official word.

Other than that, yellowtail, bonito, bass, halibut and other species have provided the fishing fun at sea. However, the yellowtail fishing has been a yo-yo affair for all landings, even those in San Diego.

One San Diego operator said that there was so much squid in the water around the Coronados that the yellows were gorging themselves at night and, for the most part, didn't care to look at jigs or baits in the daylight hours. Long Beach operators have caught a dozen or more yellows at San Clemente almost daily, but those fish, too, are boat-shy.

FISHING AT BIG BEAR LAKE reminds one of the "old days" when big trout were weighed in every day. Resort operators are reaping the benefits of a full lake for a change and 2- and 3-pound fish are not unusual. The largest fish caught in June was taken by Emmitt Keale, Anaheim, who was using that famous Zeke's Floatin' Bait, which is being manufactured at Downey. The brown weighed 7 pounds, 9 1/2 ounces.

Trollers have been having a field day with rainbow trout at the east end of the lake. They have been taking fish up to 5 1/2 pounds, but mostly on hardware, such as Dave Davis and Ford Fender rigs with night crawlers for bait.

In fact, a Big Bear spokesman reported just yesterday that the best baits are night crawlers, Zeke's Floatin' Cheese, Mepps spinners and Hot-Shots.

Jim Caldwell, a Palm Springs resident, has been fishing at Big Bear for five years without any success. Just last week he caught a 2 1/2-pound rainbow and some smaller "bows." It was the first time that he had ever taken any fish in fresh water.

This is the start of the biggest week of the year for all resorts, with a long Fourth of July weekend ahead of us. If you haven't made motel, cabin, camping and boat reservations, you'd better stay home. In fact, one coastal resort owner actually is discouraging people from trying to enter his place. It has been filled for weeks.

OUTDOOR PERSONALS — More than 1,200 fishermen already have weighed in fish at South Lake Tahoe, which has a $25,000 Fishing Sweepstakes going this season. This is the California side of the city. Nevada's side probably couldn't care less, except that the gamblers there know that they'll reap the profits from fishermen as well as other tourists.

Mackinaw, kokanee, brown and rainbow are the species being weighed in for the derby prizes. The derby continues through July 31, so if you are in that area, give Tahoe a try but register first at The Outdoorsman, a sporting goods store on the California side. You also may be able to pick up some fishing tips there.

The Department of the Interior has distributed $24 million in federal aid funds to the 50 states. The money must be spent for fish and wildlife, land acquisition and development projects that will benefit fish and game.

The money comes from federal excise taxes collected from manufacturers, importers and producers of hunting and fishing equipment.

In the breakdown of state figures, California receives $295,500 for fish and $880,024 for wildlife.

Mrs. Gerhig Stricken at Mets Game

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mrs. Lou Gehrig was suddenly stricken Saturday night while watching an old-timers ceremony at Shea Stadium prior to the regularly scheduled game between the Pittsburgh Pirates and New York Mets.

She was removed on a stretcher from the field box seat and given first aid.

Mrs. Gerhig apparently collapsed of heat prostration. She was given oxygen to revive her and then taken to a hospital as a precautionary measure.

The entire Mets dugout emptied immediately and surrounded the rail in front of Mrs. Gerhig's field box when they learned she was ill.

The wife of the former New York Yankee first baseman regularly attends old-timers games and seemed to be enjoying herself when she was stricken.

Mrs. Gerhig, the former Eleanor Twichell, married the late Yankee first baseman on Sept. 29, 1933, during the height of his success with the American League club. Gehrig died June 2, 1941, at the age of 37 and his wife has been a frequent spectator at games involving both the Yankees and Mets.

Desert Law, Gamely Hold Off 'Invader'

Desert Law and her more esteemed stablemate, Gamely, survived a foul claim and finished 1-2 in the $81,350 Vanity Handicap at Hollywood Park Saturday.

Desert Law, with Laffit Pincay Jr. in the saddle, got in first by 1 1/2 lengths while Gamely and the threatening eastern import, Amerigo Lady, battled it out for second, with the latter losing by a nose.

Jockey Manuel Ycaza on Amerigo Lady claimed interference by the entry of Desert Law and Gamely in the turn toward the stretch.

A dejected Ycaza, who flew West to win the $100,000 Invitational Turf Handicap last week with Amerigo Lady's stablemate, Fort Marey, reported, "My mare was running real easy when we were moving up on the outside and then both of those other horses came out and hit me. My mare seemed to lose her action after that."

But the stewards disallowed the claim after careful study of the video tape patrol pictures and the Perry Stable collected its third successive Vanity Championship, much to the delight of those in the crowd of 41,930, who sent the twosome postward as the 4-5 choice.

The entry returned $3.80, $3.20 and $2.20 while Amerigo Lady returned $3.60 to show.

For Amerigo Lady, it was a case of the loss of too much valuable ground on the final turn as Ycaza, moving from last place in the field of 11, was forced eight wide while making his bid on the final bend.

But it also was a case of too much "Perry Power" as Desert Law, the Stable's improving 5-year-old daughter of Court Martial, and Gamely, the defending Vanity and National distaff champion, also performed in championship manner in a near duplication of the stable sweep of last summer when Gamely, now retired Princessnesian and Desert Law dominated the event.

Gamely turned in a tremendous effort to edge Amerigo Lady for the place and prompted trainer Jim Maloney to comment, "At the weights (128-119 for Desert Law), and considering the trouble she had almost all the way, I think Gamely still is the best mare of all."

DODGERS... $250,000 RACE INAUGURAL

ing in a 5-0 shutout over the Dodgers Friday night.

The Dodgers held an 2-0 advantage over San Diego and have humbled the Padres by scores of 14-0, 9-1, 7-3, 11-0, 10-1, and, now, 19-0.

The Dodgers' half of the third inning was particularly painful for the Padres as it required 46 minutes while the Dodgers scored 10 times on six singles, six walks (two with the bases loaded) and had the advantage of four wild pitches.

The Dodgers' attack was remarkably balanced considering the one-sided nature of the game. The Dodgers didn't have a player with more than two runs batted in, partly because Alston did a full-scale job of substituting midway through the game. Drysdale had two hits and drove in two runs. The only extra base hits for the Dodgers were a double by Drysdale, a triple by Ted Sizemore—who went four-for-five—and a home run by Wes Parker which produced the Dodgers' first run.

DOUGHER NOTES: Dodger rightfielder Andy Kosco, who had started at games in a row, was kept out of the lineup Sunday night due to the flu and leftfielder Manny Mota was substituted by a new infielder, Rick Burdette.

Alan Foster (24), who has a string of 21 consecutive scoreless innings, will start for the Dodgers tonight against the Padres at San Antonio (3-5). Foster's last start was against the Padres, June 17, and the pitcher's seven-hit shutout. He had started in the second half of a doubleheader at Cincinnati last Sunday but the game was rained out.

Lona Beach's Timmie Sisk had a rough time in relief in the third inning, giving up three hits and three runs, including a home run, to a batter.

The 10 runs by the Dodgers in the third inning was the most the club has scored since moving to the West Coast. The Dodgers had scored nine runs against Pittsburgh May 9 to set the L.A. record.

The Dodgers' last six games—six wins—have all ended in a scoreless tie.

Firemen's Show Highlights 4th

ALL DRESSED UP AND SOMEPLACE TO GO
Miss Firecracker, Gayle Kovaly, to Be at Show
—Staff Photo

The Long Beach Firemen's Memorial Association's 12th annual fireworks and variety show highlights Fourth of July events in the area Friday.

While Southlanders planned for long holiday weekend relaxation, words of caution went out from the National Safety Council and local law enforcement agencies.

Besides urging motorists to remain alert on highways over the holiday the council declared its opposition to the use of fireworks by adults and children. It urged that displays be conducted only by professionals under controlled conditions.

FIREWORKS ARE banned in Long Beach. Various minor Fourth of July items are permitted in surrounding county territory and in Orange County. Questions about particular items should be directed to the local police agency.

On the holiday, the annual fireworks and variety show will be held at 7 p.m. at Veterans Stadium. As in the past, proceeds will benefit a charity. This year, the Long Beach Children's Clinic will be beneficiary.

The Long Beach show will include Jerry Van Dyke as master of ceremonies, with entertainment by Molly Bee, The Ruddells, Hobo Kelly and the Stardusters.

The preshow announcer will be Capt. Garrett Cady, and music will be by Don Heaston and his band. The fire department clowns and the championship Long Beach City College gym team will participate. Firefighting apparatus will be paraded.

BEACH COMBING

MALCOLM EPLEY

NORTHBOUND, US 395 — We knew we were in good country when it happened at a pa-and-ma type service station in the Topaz Lake area.

Three elderly folk — two men and a woman — were sitting on the tongue of an old wagon in the shade.

The old guys, smoking their pipes in solid comfort, stayed right there in the shade while the woman came over in the hot sun, serviced us with gasoline and a windshield wipe.

To our all-male company, this was clear evidence of excellent tradition and proper distribution of the work load between the sexes. We recommend it for widespread emulation.

FIVE of us are bound — as indicated in a previous note here — for the Sacramento River delta country where we've lined up a houseboat trip. My noble companions are Walt Hoffman, Dr. Logan Jackson and Hank DeLacy of Long Beach and John Wyatt, ex-Long Beacher now living in Lake San Marcos.

Going to the Stockton area by way of Reno isn't exactly a direct routing, a fact that even has us a little puzzled. There has been some argument as to who suggested it. There has been some talk about financing the trip by some activities at Reno, but all of us have been to Nevada many times and know better.

We'll be lucky if we'll be able to divvy up the not inconsiderable week's rental fee for the houseboat.

BUT I'm glad we came this way because I've got a long-standing affection for US 395, which I began traveling over two decades ago when I lived in Oregon and my parents resided at La Puente.

It's a great route for speedy, unhampered motoring and the Sierra region it crosses offers some of the west's most spectacular scenery.

It's especially impressive on the northbound trip, as we've noted today.

Coming into the Owens Valley, our left was flanked by the rugged, towering ramparts of the Sierra, crowned by Mt. Whitney, excluding Alaska continental America's highest peak. From the lower valley this escarpment looks dry, treeless and forbidding, but fascinating, nevertheless.

THE valley, whose early-day residents say it was raped by Los Angeles for water, is desert-like in the lower stretches.

But coming on north, we rolled through attractive, tree-studded towns like Lone Pine, Independence, Olancha and Big Pine. And then into Bishop, the lively center of a great outdoor sports region. Lunching at Bishop, we listened to the inevitable talk about fishing, pack trips and skiing.

The run north from Bishop is the finest section of the route, scenery-wise. Here the highway passes by such noted lakes as Crowley (where we didn't see one fishing boat), Mono and Topaz. It climbs from the valley into the heart of the Sierra, with the patches of snow on the mountains making them an impressive mosaic.

At picturesque Bridgeport, a "must" is a stop to look at the frozen fish in a box in front of a sporting goods store. Those big ones, caught in nearby Bridgeport reservoir and other waters, always stir the vitals of the sports fisherman.

MOUNTAIN fishing is not for us, this time. We'll be trying our luck in the placid waters of the delta a little later. I'm not certain how active it will be. I've envisioned doing it with a line tied to my big toe.

Anyway, interesting experiences lie ahead as we head down into the lush Carson Valley. I'll let you know about them in the next installment of this journal.

'Safe, Sane' Fireworks Are Neither

By CHUCK CHEATHAM
Staff Writer

"Safe" and "sane" fireworks are neither safe nor sane, Fire Chief Tullio J. Rizzo and Police Chief William J. Mooney warned today.

Furthermore, they added, the sale, possession and use of any type of fireworks in Long Beach is illegal.

Every year the police make arrests for "possession of pyrotechnics" and the bail is $35, Chief Mooney said.

Both chiefs urged Long Beach residents to celebrate Independence Day Friday in a safe and sane manner without the use of firecrackers or fireworks.

"While states in which two thirds of the nation's population live have laws against fireworks," Chief Rizzo said, "every year approximately 5,000 persons are injured, some fatally, by fireworks."

Chief Rizzo pointed out that sparklers, considered harmless by most persons, burn with a high temperature of 2,000 degrees Fahrenheit.

"Even when the sparkler has ceased sparkling," the fire chief said, "the temperature is so high that it can cause burns to the person or easily ignite buildings or grass."

Chief Rizzo and Chief Mooney suggested attending the firemen's annual fireworks and variety show at the Veterans Memorial Stadium or free fireworks display at Queens Park, formerly the Nu-Pike.

Who could say anything but, "It was a beautiful day Saturday"? Surf lapped lazily against sand, and sunshine—so long a stranger to the shoreline—twinkled happily on the white-edged Pacific. Southland beaches, forlorn these many weekends of cloudiness, resounded with the frolicking of one of the biggest crowds of the season. Today should bring more of the same, according to a preliminary forecast, with temperatures in the 70s and a sunny afternoon.

ATOP SIGNAL HILL

Ham Operators Stage Call Contest

By WALT MURRAY
Staff Writer

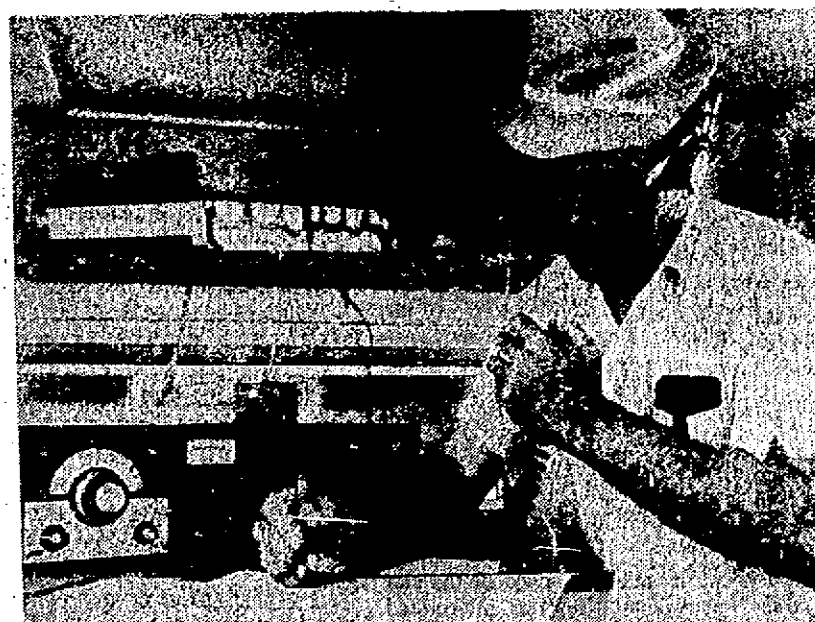

On the back lot of a Signal Hill oil company Saturday, about 30 men aged from 10 to 75 began a 27-hour endurance contest.

They're competing with thousands of like-minded enthusiasts on hillsides, open plains and ocean peninsulas from Hawaii to Maine.

Supplied with coffee, lemonade and roast beef by wives and girlfriends, they're entered in the nation's largest participant sport — amateur radio Field Day.

"Our goal is to contact as many different Field Day stations in as many different states as possible during the contest," says George Riggins, president of the Associated Radio Amateurs of Long Beach.

Bold ideas advanced on environment...

PRACTICAL politicians as well as political theorists will be on the alert for innovations growing out of a three-day regional development conference just ended in Seattle.

No noteworthy decisions were taken at the meeting, but its whole tone was one that could lead to experimentation on a scale never attempted in this country.

THE RECURRENT theme among 400 delegates was that the northwest states collectively must choose between daring action or environmental disaster in their efforts to save a relatively unspoiled environment.

The conference had a regional outlook from the start, for it was a joint undertaking of Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Alaska and Canada's British Columbia. Officials in all these states hope to act in time to head off all the forms of pollution that afflict more densely settled sections of the United States.

Even in the Northwest, despite its vast expanses of wilderness, pollution is more than a threat for the future. Dr. Athelstan Spiethaus, president-elect of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, noted that estuaries, bays, lakes and streams constitute one of the region's chief natural resources. Yet, he added, they are "surely and rapidly being poisoned."

Impatience with the ineffectiveness of existing political entities and methods was prevalent. Former Gov. Philip H. Hoff of Vermont, as an example, asserted: "The states are on the firing line. Either they produce or there will be no recourse but to move around them. The stakes are too high."

What he seems to have had in mind was a regional organization, with considerable powers, for the whole northwest. And Gov. Daniel J. Evans of Washington spoke of "developing a strategy of regional growth." He mentioned social and economic problems as well as the protection of natural resources.

MANY HIGHLY-POPULATED areas, among them Southern California, would not need to cross state boundaries to find chronic conflicts among small local agencies. Yet so far they have made little headway toward area-wide collaboration.

The whole nation will owe gratitude to the Pacific Northwest if it can provide a new spirit and a few solid working rules for reversing the course of physical spoilage and governmental frustration.

will report on its one and only assignment: the drafting of specifications for a detailed study.

Who will make this study, how much it will cost and how long it will take are unknown at this time. However, the chairman of the State Water Resources Control Board, Kerry W. Mulligan, says the state will have some funds for the project and will ask the federal government for more. He thinks the study might be started by next January.

All of which indicates a leisurely pace and no sense of urgency. Little wonder that the regional board's leading crusader for conservation, Mrs. Ellen Stern Harris, takes a dim view of the whole procedure, including the appointment of the task force.

But the slow and placid approach to harbor pollution is an old story. A Wilmington vegetable oil company currently being prosecuted for violating Los Angeles Harbor rules has admitted dumping untreated wastes into the harbor since 1923.

killed while reaching toward his back pocket for a card explaining his handicap.

The letter writer reports he voted for Charles Stenwig, the former police detective who was elected mayor of Minneapolis in a "law and order" campaign, and adds "I quite agree with Mayor Yorty."

Then he confesses, "I have certainly had second thoughts about this law and order theme. If it means a policy of such toughness, it is too strong and hardly fair as Mayor Yorty implies."

POLICEMEN MUST make instant judgments. If they are well trained and disciplined, however, they will seldom make grievous mistakes about the necessity to shoot first and ask questions later.

The political mood of the moment should not be interpreted by law officers or anyone else as granting immunity from standards and rules designed to protect everyone except the lawless.

Moscow seeks U.S. support on China

WASHINGTON — The Soviet charge d'affaires here, Yuri N. Tcherniakov, recently called on the State Department to deliver a copy of the bitter protest note which Moscow had sent Peking blaming it for troubles on the Sinkiang border. Tcherniakov went on to make a little speech on the evils of the Chinese.

This kind of effort to 'cuddle up' to the U.S. in a fight between Communist countries is no longer unusual, but the gesture would have been startling before the Soviet-Chinese clash on the Ussuri River early this spring. It obviously represents not only an intense sharpening of the Sino-Soviet conflict but Moscow's growing preoccupation with its 'China' problem, perhaps above all else.

THE SOVIET Union has been trying with increasing urgency to elicit some sort of support from the U.S. in its quarrel with China. The effort has gone as far as indirect warnings that progress in the many areas where Russia and the U.S. are seeking agreement could be endangered by any American gesture of detente toward China.

The reason Tcherniakov delivered the note was that Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin had suddenly been called home to Moscow for consultations. He went in to see U.S. Secretary of State William Rogers before he left and talked about the Middle East, preparations for missile talks and other subjects currently at direct issue between Moscow and Washington.

FLORA LEWIS

But U.S. experts believe the real reason for Dobrynin's trip home was to report on American attitudes toward China. A number of other Soviet ambassadors were called home at the same time, mostly from the Far East, so the assumption is that Moscow is now conducting a special policy review on its tense relations with China, perhaps even weighing some important new step against Peking.

FOR SOME time now, the Russians have used every opportunity they could invent to question U.S. officials on American intentions toward China. Every time there is a hint that there might be a renewal of the interrupted Chinese-American talks in Warsaw, the Russians get the jitters and don't mind showing it.

The American position so far has been to play it mute. The Russians are told the U.S. has no intention of changing its policy but is still interested in contact with Peking. In fact, the U.S. has put out feelers for renewal of the talks but there has been no response from Peking. That may come soon, however, because after three years of virtual self-quarantine, the Chinese are sending ambassadors out again and they are having talks with Canada about establishing relations.

Clearly, gestures toward detente with China provide the strongest possible bargaining leverage with which the U.S. might move Moscow. In comparison, restrictions on east-west trade, deploying anti-ballistic missiles, holding the line in the Middle East are fly-weight negotiating counters.

IT IS strange, then, that Washington makes no use of it. Nor is it just a matter of exercising more effective persuasion on the Soviets. No Southeast Asia settlement is likely to work for long unless the Chinese are somehow involved in agreements made. Long-range U.S. Pacific interests cannot ignore China.

Worst of all, if the U.S. does allow itself to be dragged into the Sino-Soviet conflict on Russia's side, whether deliberately or just by the inertia of clinging to its present hard line against Peking, there looms the ultimate risk of a world-wide color war.

IN THE short term, the medium term and the long term, it is profoundly in America's interest to do what it can to take the sting out of non-relations with China. At the moment, China isn't willing. But the U.S. can make a start nonetheless by dropping its anti-Peking stand in the United States and abandoning the useless trade embargo.

By the time Peking is willing, it may be too late for America to stay neutral between Communist China and Soviet Russia. The time may be approaching when any attempt to be even-handed will be tantamount to taking sides. This is a case where doing nothing may be risking all.

Party dogma losing ground as a solution

BILL KING is an unlikely heretic. In 1964 he was state speakers chairman for Rockefeller's presidential bid in California. In 1966 he was executive director of Californians for Reagan. In 1968 he was speakers chairman for Sen. Thomas Kuchel and chairman of Southern Californians for Nixon.

This year he was chairman of Republican Congressman Alphonzo Bell's unsuccessful primary race for mayor of Los Angeles, then switched to cochairman of Negro Democrat Tom Bradley's campaign against Mayor Sam Yorty.

From Reagan to Bradley? That's right. And, King says, "if the 1970 Reagan Republicans welcome all elements of the Republican party in that campaign he would work for Reagan again."

William T. King, 36, a successful Los Angeles attorney with a home in Bel Air, "caught on" rather recently, he admits, to a need for more problem solving and less party-line politics.

A Bradley victory would have nurtured that need, King believes. But with failure there, he turned to a new mode. He starts this week as a "resident expert" on urban affairs at the UCLA faculty-sponsored Institute of Government and Public Affairs.

HE WANTS TO USE his legal and political background to investigate the whole field of law and order. His goal is understanding. Blacks must understand what law and order means to the white man. Whites have to make clear that the police force and "law and order" are not used "to keep the black man in his place," King says.

Everybody is hip that the young do not trust the "too conservative" establishment, King notes, but "that lack of confidence by the young is matched by the 'old' who vote for law and order and consider the establishment 'too liberal.'"

King says voting over the past two years has been against the "ins" for this reason. By his interpretation, that held true even for Yorty's victory, i.e., Bradley's primary victory and his lead in the polls enabled Yorty to assume the role of challenger; Bradley came to be regarded as the "liberal establishment."

It's a new political world, King contends. "We're entering a period of concurrent majorities—a host of different, mobile and changing minorities which may comprise, at any given election, a majority."

IT'S EXTREMELY difficult to govern under these conditions, King says, and points to Nixon as example. "Nixon's walking a tight rope. And so, at the Air Force Academy he hits the liberals. A little later he is praising former Chief Justice Earl Warren. He's simply trying to hold together this shifting majority."

"It's a different electorate, free to move beyond partisan appeals. The GOP, says King, 'has as many from the right wing as we're going to get. And the young are not on the right. We've got to get the young and the blacks.'"

In the Bradley campaign, Republican King got plenty of them. They were more surprised than he, often remarking, "If there were more Republicans like you, we could become Republicans."

Says King, "I'd like to give them the option."

The fledgling

Nixon lags on health care

SINCE JANUARY, as one of the leaders of the loyal opposition, I have tried to put forth my ideas in as positive and constructive a way as possible. Like most Americans, I think the new administration deserves a chance to come up with new programs and put its stamp on our foreign and domestic policies.

But the Nixon administration now may be graded in two areas:

—Improvement of the quality of education.

—Improvement and availability of quality medical care.

In both areas, I believe the Nixon administration deserves a grade of "poor." The Nixon formula in both education and health has been to drift, to cut expenditures, to do nothing to solve the difficult problems that we face.

LET US LOOK this week at the health and medical care record of the new administration. The question should be asked: who has been speaking for the public interest in the field of health and medical care? The answer is: nobody.

For five months, with medical costs soaring, the Nixon administration has had no top health official to represent the public interest.

For five months, with growing evidence of abuses by physicians, dentists, and druggists in the Medicaid and Medicare programs, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Robert H. Finch has battled with Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen over who should fill the important post of assistant secretary of health and scientific affairs.

Back in January, Secretary Finch said he wanted Dr. John Knowles, director of Massachusetts General Hospital, as his assistant secretary.

By threatening to fight the Knowles nomination on the Senate floor, Senator Dirksen was able to hold up any appointment for five months, thereby creating a serious leadership vacuum at HEW.

AT STAKE IS the $10 billion a year federal investment in health and medical care.

At stake is the $50 billion a year we pay for medical care, an average of over $200 for every man, woman, and child.

At stake is the leadership and coordination of the many health and medical care efforts scattered throughout HEW and other federal agencies.

Where do we stand on health and medical care in this country?

Despite the miracles of science and the drama of heart transplants, many of our 30 million poor do not receive minimum medical care.

The problem is not that we do not know how to provide top-quality health and medical care. The problem is one of planning, leadership, coordination, and commitment.

We know we need more physicians and nurses. We know neighborhood health centers can reduce hospital use by as much as 80 per cent by preventing serious illness.

WE KNOW THERE are less costly alternatives to hospital care such as outpatient care, home health services, extended care facilities, and nursing homes.

We know the quality of health care in many rural areas is becoming a critical problem.

We know mental patients respond better if treated in community mental health centers rather than being put away in state mental hospitals.

We know prepayment programs can help reduce hospital use by encouraging people to take advantage of preventive and diagnostic health services. Yet 30 million Americans have no health insurance at all, and two-thirds of our personal health costs are not covered by insurance.

We know many children are permanently damaged by inadequate prenatal and infant care.

We know we are paying a heavy price for the disorganization and fragmentation of our health services. Better planning and use of biomedical communications networks can help end expensive duplication and provide better medical care at lower cost.

Federal leadership is needed. The federal government must play a much needed supportive role. I do not advocate federal control, or federal interference in the doctor-patient relationship or in the selling of fees.

WHAT KIND OF leadership are we getting?

President Nixon has ordered $300 million in Medicare and Medicaid cuts which will lower mental health care and nursing home benefits. He advocates a $100 million cut in Hill-Burton grants for hospital construction. He is not expanding neighborhood health centers or medical education programs.

And worst of all, for five months the Republican administration will not take the lead, it is up to the Democratic majority in Congress to take over the leadership responsibility of helping to provide better health care to every American.

The sick, the elderly, the babies—every American—deserve better treatment than they are getting.

... but so slow these 'foes' of pollution

OFFICIALS responsible for cleaning up water pollution in the Los Angeles and Long Beach harbors have adopted a sort of longrange attitude toward their job. And the proper response by conservationists may be stated briefly: What else is new?

The principal local official agency in this field is the Los Angeles Regional Water Control Board. It has decided that there isn't enough technical knowledge available to decide just what waste products can be tolerated without totally poisoning the harbor waters. So it has established a task force composed of representatives of 19 official and unofficial groups.

IN DUE course, possibly by next November, the task force

'Law, order' need doesn't exempt police

THE OBVIOUS potency of "law and order" as a political slogan this year places an extra value on the discipline and professional conduct of police departments.

Everyone except the criminal and revolutionary classes believes in law and order, as that phrase used to be understood. But it will lose its magic if police officers in large numbers use it as an excuse to go trigger-happy. Already, some voters are beginning to have second thoughts.

A FORMER Long Beach resident who now lives in Minneapolis has written a letter to this newspaper protesting the fatal shooting by Los Angeles policemen of a man who suffered from a speech defect. The victim was

Three students (and one parent) offer views on campus unrest

Listen in on almost any coffee break roundtable and you're likely to find that Topic A has to do with American youth and the "situation" on high school, college and university campuses. And the odds are pretty good that much of the chatter will be devoted to lambasting the "militants and dissidents" and demanding to know "why the other students don't do something." Following are excerpts from four letters, three by students and one by a parent who observed a number of "concerned" high school students in action in Long Beach.

Perhaps some of the questions about the "youth problem" are partially answered here.

Letter No. 1 is written by Charles S. Paul, a sophomore at Stanford University. Here's what he says in part:

"In light of the recent Senate investigations into the connections between the Students for Democratic Society and the Communist party I believe that there should be some clarification of the actual support that the SDS receives from other students.

At Stanford . . . the SDS . . . could claim approximately 30 members. They are regarded as hard core radicals and very few people listen to them with any seriousness. What is important, I feel, is the fact that the protests on our campuses today are merely participated in by the SDS and aren't necessarily by the SDS. Concerned and interested students at Stanford, for instance, protested over issues and not as the result of urging of any hard core radicals. The issues and situations present in this society today obviously do not precipitate peaceful or rational change.

Students, as most young people, are frustrated by the slow pace of this society in matters of correcting the violent and malevolent factors in this system. I urge adults to keep an open mind and not close their ears to rational discussion taking place on some college campuses. Every protest is not SDS formulated and most students do indeed realize that our real enemies are the communists and not our government. I also urge adults not to condemn peaceful or non-violent measures which worried and aware students use to express their justified dissatisfaction with the older generation's efforts to cure the troubled world and domestic scene. Discussion is needed and the generation gap can only widen if the news is misinterpreted and one side's ears become closed."

Letter No. 2 was written to a state senator and circulated widely by him. The author is Ronald Kelly, Berkeley, an honors student, National Merit Scholar and Eagle Scout. Here's what he had to say:

"I'd like you to know that you're going to force me and a lot of good students like me to join the militants, if you pass the bills now before you which aim at squashing campus demonstrations.

"I hope you make no mistake about one point; most of your 'silent majority' supports the programs the militants propose. The argument between us and the militants is in no way, whether or not the changes the militants demand should be made — it is only whether or not the only way to achieve these changes is through student strikes and violent disruption. The 'silent majority' supports the programs the militants demand. The University must change to meet the needs of blacks and other minorities. It must change to give students a voice in shaping the direction of their own education. On this we are agreed.

"The militants are telling the rest of us students however, that society will never willingly change, that we must all become violent militants and force change upon it. Don't prove that they are right. If you as legislators must do anything in the way of political pressure on the University, then pressure it to adopt the programs of change.

"If you pass the legislation you are now considering, what you are saying to me and to the rest of the good students is that the militants are right — that your only response to our repeated cries for change in the University is to try to get rid of those who are becoming loudest and most persistent in their demands.

"Please don't make me into a militant, I don't believe in violence, and I don't believe it's the right way to change the University."

Letter No. 3 is written by Donald J. Davis, Felton, a Long Beach youth and recent senior at the University of California at Santa Cruz. Expressing concern at the "growing violence and lack of communication" in America, he commented:

"Here in northern California revolution is becoming a reality. Conflicting ideals and divergent lifestyles are creating an intolerable chasm in our society; polarizing the population and undermining our commitment to the democratic process and the traditional ideals which underpin it.

"Radicalism has become a legitimate social force, and all attempts to suppress its growing momentum only serve to enhance its legitimacy and sustain its growing appeal. Too many Americans are impervious to the painful reality that our present social order is shamefully unjust and dangerously inadequate. These Americans have no response to give, they can give no rational justification for the growing militarism and capacity for violence in American society. They have no answer to give to impatient blacks who remain manacled to their impoverished and sub-human ghettos. In the midst of wealth and abundance, pockmarked with pockets of poverty and scarred by deep furrows of intolerance, these Americans cling to their cherished principles of liberty and justice for all. When confronted with the reality of American life their sacred principles crumble, and they become indignant. Loyalty to the status quo sanctions the most deplorable measures to squash dissidents and preserve the present social order.

"Unfortunately, those Americans who are devoted to the present social arrangement have but one recourse in response to the radical challenge — political suppression. In the name of Americanism they have revived the doctrine of Might makes Right.

"Perhaps the mounting tension and violence can be tempered if we guarantee open dialogue between conflicting interests. Factual and unbiased news reporting is imperative if we expect to retain any semblance of the democratic process. The news media must re-dedicate itself to objective and informative reporting, but unfortunately, it has been incredibly negligent in these very critical times."

Final letter was written by Dr. Leon J. Pinsker of Lakewood to the Long Beach Board of Education. Dr. Pinsker refers in his letter to an unofficial, day long "convocation" held June 7 in Lakewood Village Community Church by some 200 high school students from Long Beach. Ralph Hlman, our education editor who attended the unsanctioned conference, reported that no major conclusions were reached by the students but that he was deeply impressed with the intelligence, sincerity and dedication of the students. Portions of Dr. Pinsker's letter follow:

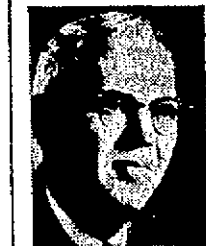

"WHEN I FIRST listened to some of the 'gripes' of the students, I brushed them off as somewhat childish and 'run of the mill' complaining. However, I began to develop a new respect for their position and more important I began to listen to high school students!

"I was rather surprised that there was no Administrative and Board representation because these groups had refused to participate . . .

"I am really sorry that official representation was not present. We few parents who participated are convinced that a dialogue such as occurred on that sunny Saturday will go a long way in preventing irresponsible people from creating and inciting irresponsible acts.

"However, if we as a parent and teacher generation, fail to heed the call of our youth, if we prevent their reaching us with their dialogue, if we fail to recognize that some problems do exist, if we fail to acknowledge that change can be beneficial, especially when guided and controlled by responsible people, if we fail to accept the challenge that these young people have thrust upon us, we will most assuredly fail as educators and parents, we will most assuredly lose them to others perhaps more intent on rapid change and more impatient with our generation.

"We can, together with an enlightened student body and a school administration, go forward toward a goal that could bring the Long Beach Unified School District before the eyes of the nation. I hope our leaders have the foresight to take advantage of this opportunity. A nation will be beholden to us for it. It is not too late."

L. A. C. SAYS

Interest and fines paid by government

By L. A. COLLINS Sr.

The record high interest rates now being charged for loans is eased for the borrower by a reduction in his taxes. This applies to the small borrower, as well as the large corporations. They can charge off this interest on their tax return. If they are in the 30 per cent tax bracket it means the government is paying 30 per cent of the interest. Corporations in the 52.8 per cent tax bracket — including the surcharge — save 52.8 per cent of the interest charge on federal returns as well as the amount of state tax they pay. This is one angle that, to some extent, eases the pressure of high interest rates. It is a normal and justified write-off of taxable income. But it is an indication of how high interest rates hurt government in getting less money in taxes.

There is another "write off" system that is going to cost government a lot of taxes this year. This will be because the stock market plunge has caused many shareholders to sell out at a loss. They can write off that loss against their normal income and thereby pay less taxes because of those losses. This is also a normal way which helps to reduce the loss incurred in selling stocks or other assets at a loss.

THERE IS HOWEVER one "write off" that does not seem reasonable. That is allowing a company convicted of law breaking in unlawful price fixing to write off two-thirds of the fines imposed on it when convicted. On this basis, a company fined $1,000,000 can write off $750,000 — thereby saving about $400,000 in taxes it would pay the government. The National Federation of Independent Business gives the views of its 225,000 members as follows:

A tax write-off of penalties against violators of the nation's anti-trust laws doesn't make sense to most of the nation's independent business men. A majority, at least, agree with Rep. Emanuel Celler of New York that companies guilty of such things as price-fixing should not be able to write off civil penalties as "ordinary and necessary" business expense.

Under a 1964 Internal Revenue Service ruling, they have been able to do this. Any judgment in a civil treble damages suit exceeding actual damages has been deductible from tax returns of the guilty firms. With big companies now paying an income tax rate of 52.8 per cent, including surtax, this write-off softens the punishment substantially. Congressman Celler, after trying unsuccessfully to get Internal Revenue to change its ruling, has introduced legislation which would clearly make damages imposed under the Clayton Antitrust Act not deductible by the defendants.

The IRS ruling followed a celebrated case in which the government indicted major electrical equipment companies for conspiracy to fix prices to government and industry customers about eight years ago. Representative Celler recalls: "The defendants admitted their responsibility and pleaded guilty to the charges. Substantial fines were imposed and several corporate officials went to jail. In the wake of these government victories, more than 2,000 private cases were filed against General Electric, Westinghouse and other electrical equipment manufacturers."

CONGRESS AUTHORIZED treble damage civil suits in the Clayton Act, as an important adjunct to government antitrust enforcement. But, says Congressman Celler, the IRS ruling "frustrates the national policy that makes price-fixing in interstate and foreign commerce a criminal offense." He maintains that the treble damage provision is punitive in nature and such penalties should not be deductible as business expenses. When Internal Revenue ruled the payments were income to plaintiffs, its ruling has this effect.

More than 500 companies are currently pressing charges against eight of the nation's leading plumbing manufacturers for alleged overcharges in a price-fixing conspiracy, involving more than a billion dollars of sales. Three companies were convicted of the conspiracy and five others pleaded no contest. Unless the present ruling is changed, civil damages awarded in these cases will be tax write-offs. With Congress now intent upon tax reform, the independent businessmen believe this tax loophole needs plugging.

Nixon works to put own stamp on the presidency

WASHINGTON — Richard Nixon has gone to elaborate lengths to place his own stamp on the presidency. He deliberately adopted a style, say intimates, that would contrast with that of his predecessor. His orderly, go-slow approach was intended to dramatize the difference from Lyndon Johnson's strenuous pace.

Because of LBJ's spur-of-the-moment scheduling, for example, President Nixon carefully lays out his schedule as far in advance as events will permit. This sometimes upsets the Secret Service, which would prefer that he withheld his travel plans for security reasons.

NIXON won't even use teleprompters because of the attention Johnson's fancy, transparent teleprompters attracted. He always used teleprompters in the past. But now he makes the extra effort to memorize short statements, which he scribbles in advance on legal-size yellow pads. The longer speeches he reads from the script, glancing up from the manuscript to look into the TV cameras.

LBJ's publicized midday naps and dips in the White House pool, a natural, prompted aides to spread the word that the new President doesn't indulge in such habits.

Herb Klein, the new communications czar, explained to reporters that the water was too tepid for a rugged surfer swimmer like Nixon.

"You could mix instant coffee in it and drink it," Klein said after poking a finger into the White House pool. The only way to coax the President into the pool, Klein suggested, would be to "pour in about a ton of Morton's and then figure out some way to churn up some waves."

The truth is that Nixon usually takes a 20-minute nap after lunch and swims half-a-dozen laps in the pool in the evening. You can be sure, however, that he'll never permit photographers to picture him holding poolside conferences with aides as Johnson did.

NIXON has also removed all traces of LBJ from the President's oval office. He has ripped out all the push buttons and electronic gadgets that Johnson loved. In place of LBJ's 42-button desk phone, Nixon's has only half-a-dozen buttons.

Gone are the muffled news tickers and the huge, three-screen TV console which enabled Johnson to check what the wire services were reporting and to watch all three networks at once. The President has also completely revamped the interior of Air Force One, so that it no longer looks like the same plane on the inside.

The message is clear: Richard Nixon wants the world to know there's a new President in the White House.

Schools to Use A Chicano Book

By BOB ANDREW
Staff Writer

Banning High School in Wilmington will use a new book on the problems and aspirations of Mexican-American citizens in special classes when school resumes in September.

The book, "Mexican-American: Readings for Students in Mexican-American Studies," is being published by the Los Angeles City School System. Previously teachers had to conduct their own research and select appropriate reading material.

"WE WERE unable to find any books on this course," said Dr. Jack P. Crowther, superintendent of schools, "so we assembled and published our own. It should be valuable in helping students understand this part of our society."

Federal grants under the Elementary and Secondary Education Act paid publishing costs for the book which will also be used in ten other Los Angeles high schools.

IT INCLUDES 24 articles on economics, labor, language and other aspects of Mexican-American life. The articles were selected from professional journals, newspapers, books and magazines by a committee of teachers and administrators.

The 320-page book also contains a list of Mexican-American recipients of the Congressional Medal of Honor and the test of the Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo by which Mexico ceded California to the United States.

Some Banning High teachers have recently completed a five-day workshop on methods of using the book in their classes. Other teachers will attend the second workshop session in the week of July 18.

The cover was designed by TV artist Jesus Gutierrez of San Pedro. It features a portrait of a Mexican-American citizen and reflects the Indian, Spanish and Catholic background of the Mexican Culture.

ACTOR TALKS TO LULAC DELEGATES
The 40th national convention of the League of United Latin-American Citizens ended its three-day run at Hyatt's Edgewater Inn Saturday, and the estimated 500 delegates left for home this morning.

An address by actor Gilbert Roland highlighted a banquet at the hotel Saturday night. The actor's topic was the heritage, culture and honor of being an American of Latin descent.

Gov. Ronald Reagan addressed the convention by telephone from his Sacramento office during a luncheon gathering Saturday.

The convention began Thursday.

Prowler Gets Mower
A prowler wheeled away a $115 lawnmower from the back yard of Lloyd H. Musgrove, 348 Dayman St., Long Beach police said Saturday.

TEN MILLIONTH VISITOR TO CAROUSEL OF PROGRESS
Meredith Pexton, 7, and brother Steve, 5, walk hand-in-hand with Disneyland characters Mickey, Goofy and Pluto. The San Bruno girl became the 10 millionth person to see the General Electric Carousel of Progress exhibit at Disneyland. The Pexton family received a General Electric color television in commemoration of the occasion.

RADIO AMATEURS IN FIELD TEST

first in our class," he says. "We hope to do well again this year."

As the contest began Saturday afternoon, the dots and dashes of Morse code, and radiotelephone calls of "CQ Field Day" rang out across the lot, donated by the Signal Oil and Gas Co. at 28th Street and Junipero Avenue.

"We have about 10 stations on the air — one on every major amateur radio band," Riggins said.

The stations are housed in tents, trailers, and autos.

Power for the installation comes from a 25 kilowatt generator that will chug away on the Field Day site until the contest ends this afternoon.

Riggins explained that one purpose of the contest is to test emergency operating gear — and test the ham operators themselves — so they'll be ready to operate under similar rugged conditions in time of disaster.

"Since we perform that service, we thought we could get use of part of a city park for the contest, but the city turned down our request," Riggins lamented.

But, he said, the Signal Hill Oil Co. offered their property.

He invited ham radio operations in the Long Beach area to visit the installation today.

AGENCY GETS GRANT TO HELP PATIENTS

A grant of $20,081 has been awarded to the Family Service of Long Beach Agency, Dr. Jean F. Crum, president of the American Cancer Society, Los Angeles County Branch, said Saturday.

The grant, effective July 1 for a year, is to enable the agency to continue and expand its homemaker services to cancer and

A homemaker helps with food preparation, does marketing and sees that the patient is able to keep medical appointments.

The local agency is at 1047 Pine Ave.

Seal Beach Sets Events for July 4th

A sidewalk fashion show, featuring beautiful Jill Shelton, the current Miss Seal Beach, and a rough water swimming meet along the Seal Beach beach have been scheduled as part of the city annual Fourth of July Open House.

The Open House will open Tuesday, July 1, and continue through Sunday, July 6, sponsored by the Seal Beach Chamber of Commerce.

The fashion show, also featuring five other contestants in the city's recent beauty pageant, will begin at 11 a.m. Friday, July 4, along two blocks of downtown Main Street and continue until 2 p.m.

The swim meet will begin at 11 a.m. Sunday on the beach adjacent to the west side of the Seal Beach Pier. More than 200 swim clubs have been invited to participate and more than 300 entrants have already been received.

The meet will feature short-distance races for boys and girls 7 and 8 years old up to a mile-long event for both men and women. Several relay events will also be offered.

Standard Gets Right to Survey

Permission for another geophysical survey along city streets has been granted by the City Council to Standard Oil Co. of California.

The company will use the "vibrosels" method in conducting the survey for oil potential along Del Amo Boulevard between the west city limits and Cherry Avenue, between Lakewood and Bellflower boulevards, and between Stevely Avenue and San Gabriel River.

The survey is to be conducted some time during the period from June 30 and Aug. 20.

TO CARROT TOP, her puppet friend, Lili (Dolly Boyd) sings her wonderful discovery, "Love Makes the World Go Round."

WITH HIS CONCERTINA, Jacquot (Vince Trani) leads the carnival troupe in a verveful version of "Grand Imperial Cirque de Paris," the imposing name of a run-down carnival in Europe.

A chilling, thrilling, spine-shivering Leap for Life.

Puppets—whimsical, witty, wiser than people.

Jugglers that dazzle the eye with spinning, shining balls.

A dancer wearing a real, live snake as a necklace.

Hawkers and ballyhoo and popcorn and balloons.

The sticky-sweet scent of pink cotton candy, the scratchy, dry feel of sawdust under foot.

This is the setting for "Carnival," musical comedy story of the Grand Imperial Cirque de Paris and its people who make believe the world is magic and full of stars.

With seven performances in the Concert Hall of Municipal Auditorium, July 10 through 20, Long Beach Civic Light Opera will climax its 21st anniversary season.

"Carnival" — perhaps better known in its film version, "Lili," starring Leslie Caron — is the story of a winsome waif who seeks a job with the run down traveling show and entwines her life with circus people.

Robert McCaman directs Dolly Boyd in the title role, Dick Johnson as puppeteer Paul, Carolyn Thompson as the worldly and funny Rosalie, Phil Richards as the philanthropic Marco, and the supporting cast — Joe Carr, Cozette Walker, Vince Trani, Alan Amador, the chorus and dancers.

"SPECIAL EFFECTS are essential to 'Carnival,' as necessary as the melodies on which the show is built," said Harvey Waggoner, CLO's general manager. "We can't take chances with the safety of our cast. Frankly, we were worried about the wire act — the Leap for Life.

UP IN THE AIR, high on the wire—that's the element for Hans Winn, long a circus director in Europe, who is lending his advice for Civic Light Opera's production of "Carnival."

"Then I heard about Hans Winn, a German circus director, whose high wire act was famous for years in Europe. I called to ask him who could advise us about rigging."

Winn's answer was instant: "Why ask anyone else — I am the best!"

No mere braggadocio, this.

The lean, hard-muscled aerialist is a third generation circus performer, his wife was a sixth generation trouper. Two sons, Hans and Karl, and a daughter-in-law, Sheila, are touring now with Rudi Brothers Circus and on July 4 will do their daring, high wire motorcycle act at the "Thrill-a-mine" in Los Angeles Coliseum.

"In Europe," explained Winn, who lives at 25508 Pennsylvania Ave., Laguna, "the circus is a proud family tradition. Just being a good acrobat doesn't pay — you must do the thrilling (one of Winn's thrillers was riding a motorcycle on the high wire to the top of some of Europe's tallest cathedrals — it is like music — people don't go just to hear classical music, they want the lively, the thrills."

WINN SERVED his young apprenticeship, then was star performer and headliner and finally circus director.

"In Europe, the director must see all, do all, teach. His eye must be everywhere, he must be ready to jump in to take the place of anyone who is absent, to correct the mistakes. These people in the circus are your children, your brothers."

At rehearsal, Winn paused to listen to musical director Jack Kroesen conduct the show's hauntingly sweet theme song, "Love Makes the World Go Round."

IN EUROPE, he resumed, "the circus goes on in spite of hunger, no matter what the problems. The performer would rather get $5 worth of applause and $2 in money than to get $10 cash and little applause."

"Everyone should be in show business for at least two years. They learn to know people and to understand them; there is no possibility of hate — there would be no wars."

"The people in Civic Light Opera who make 'Carnival' are very good people, they do it from the heart, not for pay."

"I do it for the same reason. This will be a real show. Real jugglers, real snake dancer, real puppeteers."

"We'll work together from the heart for art."

Honeymoon's a ball - - and a chain, too

By IOLA MASTERSON

KNOW THEY'RE a bowling bunch — but is this really cricket? At the wedding reception following marriage of Beverly Ashton and Don Nelson, Bob Cunningham, a bowler and friend of Bill and Midge Ashton, the bowling bride's parents, padlocked a regulation bowling ball with long chain to the bridegroom's ankle.

He had to wear it the balance of the party. What's more, they wouldn't produce the key. Instead, gave it to the bride who promised not to reveal she had it until they were in their honeymoon suite at Charter House near Disneyland.

Conspiracy paid off in laughter, especially as the chagrined bridegroom had to walk past all the people in the lobby carrying his ball and chain — and still in tuxedo because he couldn't get out of it.

Don is a sergeant in the Air Force and his bride is an airman first class. He's due to get out of service in nine months. But she's in for a full three years more!

WHOOPIING IT up, 25th wedding anniversary style, were Stephen and Marion Myers with a dinner and dancing party in their home, 5509 Hazelbrook Ave., Lakewood.

DON NELSON

From Scott AFB, St. Louis, Ill., where they met, they're being transferred to Altus AFB in Oklahoma. So the service has some romance back of its spit and polish. Uncle Sam is letting them stay together for their honeymoon.

Assisting were their children, Stephanie, 20, and Jeff, who'll be 16 in the sweet by-and-by. Put it that way because what teen-age boy wants to be referred to as 15½?

ALL THIS month Pamela Ann Price, new stewardess for United, has had a keen schedule, with one flight a week into Los Angeles. Daughter of Christine (Mrs. Richard) Wolter, LB, and Tolbert Price, Lakewood, her other cities are Omaha, Spokane and Chicago.

THE NAME of Yvette Marie Mohler is freshly engraved (or soon will be) on a plaque in the Nursing Educational Department of Long Beach City College.

That's because she was presented the outstanding student award in the class of Registered Nurses. She maintained a 3.8 grade point average and earned a Phi Beta Kappa certificate and that's something, considering she has four children to take care of — Kathleen, 11, Robert, 10, Michael, 9, and Karen, 6.

FOR THE first time in more than 60 years, Martha Pekkala, 77, is having a reunion with her sister, Tiny Rynnman, 70. Tiny is here from their native Finland with friend, Elsa Levasta.

Finnish is the language at Martha's, 2742 E. Third St., and will continue until next Saturday when the visitors leave. The Finlanders came by plane and are impressed that it was made by McDonnell-Douglas right here in Long Beach.

GETTING SQUARED away for anything BUT a "square" type vacation is Bronwynn Jones. She is taking leave of absence from nursing duties at Memorial Hospital for two and one half months. She and sister, Barbara, are flying to Europe.

First they'll tour Scandinavian countries and visit good friends in Norway. Then they'll pick up a car in Germany, which Barbara is buying and will have shipped back here after they've visited relatives in both England and Wales and other friends who reside in Switzerland and Italy.

TO CARROT TOP, her puppet friend, Lili (Dolly Boyd) sings her wonderful discovery, "Love Makes the World Go Round."

WITH HIS CONCERTINA, Jacquot (Vince Trani) leads the carnival troupe in a verveful version of "Grand Imperial Cirque de Paris," the imposing name of a run-down carnival in Europe.

A chilling, thrilling, spine-shivering Leap for Life.

Puppets—whimsical, witty, wiser than people.

Jugglers that dazzle the eye with spinning, shining balls.

A dancer wearing a real, live snake as a necklace.

Hawkers and ballyhoo and popcorn and balloons.

The sticky-sweet scent of pink cotton candy, the scratchy, dry feel of sawdust under foot.

This is the setting for "Carnival," musical comedy story of the Grand Imperial Cirque de Paris and its people who make believe the world is magic and full of stars.

'Machine' catapults 'Dolls' author to top spot

By PAT McDONNELL
Staff Writer

Jacqueline Susann not only looks like the heroines of her novels, she lives in the same glamorous world which ultimately brings about their destruction.

However, competition and tragic excesses of the entertainment world which she chronicles so thoroughly don't seem to be indulged in by Miss Susann.

Movie-star pretty in lime green organdy blouse and pants, the writer relaxed in her suite at the Beverly Hills Hotel, often a rendezvous point of her star-crossed characters.

Curled on a couch, she scanned a best seller list, then regaled:

"Isn't this great? The 'Love Machine' has become number one in five weeks."

The news was no surprise, judging from the record-breaking sales of her first novel, "Valley of the Dolls."

Show business and the temptations that ensnare its stars are again the background upon which Miss Susann weaves her story. This time, she spins her narrative around Robin Stone and his meteoric rise in the TV industry — and inevitable descent.

Have her sizzling close-ups of life behind-the-scenes won her enemies?

"No, at least not among my friends. They realize the characters are composites of personality types in the industry," replied the wife of TV producer Irving Mansfield.

"CRITICISMS COME FROM strangers who figure they can break into print by condemning me for revealing their indiscretions. I've met TV executives like Danton who live and die according to the numbers. I've known secretaries with very big mouths, like Ethel, who circulate ratings on men they date.

"I've been exposed to both sides of the industry. I've observed my husband's agency meetings and production decisions. As an actress, I've witnessed rivalries and endless crises.

"If 'The Love Machine' were based on personal experiences, I'd be a walking, breathing specimen of a relic pickled in alcohol.

"Show business happens to be what I know. If medicine were my field, then Robin Stone would have been a doctor, Amanda and Maggie, nurses. If my life revolved around politics, Robin could have been a senator."

Life's blood of any novel isn't so much the story it tells, but the credibility of its characters whose pulses beat to the rhythm of the dialogue.

NO TRANSFUSIONS are needed by the people who inhabit Miss Susann's novels. She paints portraits in dialogue: The uneducated comedian lacing his fractured English with four-letter words . . . The well-born matron issuing nervous invitations to seduction . . . The tormented hero shouting anguished cries in nightmare.

"I have a good ear. I'm an inveterate people-watcher, a born mimic," she said and proceeded to prove a point by impersonating Zsa Zsa Gabor, the Duchess of Windsor and Goldie Hahn.

Miss Susann sees her novel as a no-punches-barred appraisal of the lack of communication in contemporary society.

"My prescription for society's ills is communication. It's become chic not to reveal one's feelings. Granted, this is a necessity in rarefied atmospheres of specialists — such as the surgeon who must remain emotionally detached from his patient.

"THE DANGER LIES in turning off altogether. When this happens, a man no longer is human, he's a machine.

If it's expensive it's what the kids want

By ERMA BOMBECK

An article in Time magazine recently warned housewives that the meat index (whatever that is) has risen to 9 percent and by this summer some hysterical butchers are predicting that round steak will be $2 a pound.

My kids hate round steak. But that doesn't make any difference. When it reaches $2 a pound they will develop a round steak deficiency and jump up and down at the meat counter screaming, "Mama, we need round steak!"

My husband and I agreed that if we had known it would cost so much to feed children, we'd have raised registered Great Danes. As it stands now I have gotten the youngsters down to nine meals a day: pre-breakfast snack, breakfast, mid-morning brunch, lunch, post lunch break, before dinner appetizers, dinner, table clearing sustainer (disposals with teeth), and the pre-bedtime orgy (to get them through the night).

There was a short span of time (between the time the umbilical cord was severed and they grew teeth) that we could take them out to dinner. No more. I remember too well the last time we took them out.

"How would all of you like the Piggly Wiggly dinner?" I suggested. "They serve it in a milk glass chicken. And if you eat all your fluffy potatoes and gravy, we'll get you a Bozo-the-clown ice cream cone with chocolate chip eyes and a big, red mouth."

"Are you kidding?" answered my son. "I want the shrimp cocktail, tossed salad with Roquefort, whole lobster with steamed clams on the side, baked potato with sour cream and pecan pie with ice cream." (I didn't know a 3-year-old used words like that!)

"Look, kids," he said. "Give us a break. Your Mother and I have just made the final payment on the last meal we treated you to. How about a nice hamburger?"

"How about a nice filet mignon, medium rare," shouted one.

"Or how about frog legs?"

"Or how about flaming aardvark?"

My husband and I ordered diseased duck on a stale bun. Even at that, the bill was astronomical. The waitress could have cared less. "How do you want to handle the bill? On deferred? Or 90 days same as cash?"

'Machine' catapults 'Dolls' author to top spot

Jacqueline Susann not only looks like the heroines of her novels, she lives in the same glamorous world which ultimately brings about their destruction.

However, competition and tragic excesses of the entertainment world which she chronicles so thoroughly don't seem to be indulged in by Miss Susann.

Movie-star pretty in lime green organdy blouse and pants, the writer relaxed in her suite at the Beverly Hills Hotel, often a rendezvous point of her star-crossed characters. Curled on a couch, she scanned a best seller list, then regaled:

"Isn't this great? The 'Love Machine' has become number one in five weeks."

The news was no surprise, judging from the record-breaking sales of her first novel, "Valley of the Dolls."

Show business and the temptations that ensnare its stars are again the background upon which Miss Susann weaves her story. This time, she spins her narrative around Robin Stone and his meteoric rise in the TV industry — and inevitable descent.

Have her sizzling close-ups of life behind-the-scenes won her enemies?

"No, at least not among my friends. They realize the characters are composites of personality types in the industry," replied the wife of TV producer Irving Mansfield.

"CRITICISMS COME FROM strangers who figure they can break into print by condemning me for revealing their indiscretions. I've met TV executives like Danton who live and die according to the numbers. I've known secretaries with very big mouths, like Ethel, who circulate ratings on men they date.

"I've been exposed to both sides of the industry. I've observed my husband's agency meetings and production decisions. As an actress, I've witnessed rivalries and endless crises.

"If 'The Love Machine' were based on personal experiences, I'd be a walking, breathing specimen of a relic pickled in alcohol.

"Show business happens to be what I know. If medicine were my field, then Robin Stone would have been a doctor, Amanda and Maggie, nurses. If my life revolved around politics, Robin could have been a senator."

Life's blood of any novel isn't so much the story it tells, but the credibility of its characters whose pulses beat to the rhythm of the dialogue.

NO TRANSFUSIONS are needed by the people who inhabit Miss Susann's novels.

She paints portraits in dialogue:

The uneducated comedian facing his fractured English with four-letter words...

The well-born matron issuing nervous invitations to seduction...

The tormented hero shouting anguished cries in nightmare.

"I have a good ear. I'm an inveterate people-watcher, a born mimic," she said and proceeded to prove a point by impersonating Zsa Zsa Gabor, the Duchess of Windsor and Goldie Hahn.

Miss Susann sees her novel as a no-punches-barred appraisal of the lack of communication in contemporary society.

"My prescription for society's ills is communication. It's become chic not to reveal one's feelings. Granted, this is a necessity in rarefied atmospheres of specialists — such as the surgeon who must remain emotionally detached from his patient.

"THE DANGER LIES in turning off altogether. When this happens, a man no longer is human, he's a machine.

If it's expensive it's what the kids want

Petitions plead for 'old house'

More than 3,000 concerned citizens have signed petitions to keep the historic Bembridge House in its present location at 953 Park Circle.

"Furthermore," said Mrs. Gus A. Walker, member of the Long Beach Historical Society which champions the cause, "about 200 petitions are still out, being circulated by many civic groups and by individuals. When all of the petitions are in, we will present them to the City Council."

At issue is the question of whether or not the site of the stately old Victorian mansion shall give way to expansion of Drake Park. According to present plans, the land on which the house stands will become a picnic area. Dr. Frank Harnett, 730 Sunrise Blvd., heads the Historical Society's committee which seeks to retain the house and make it available for public use, perhaps as a library or museum.

Both Dr. Harnett and Mrs. Walker, who is in charge of the petitions, made reports at the society's annual meeting Monday night. Robert Mulvey was inducted as president, succeeding Mike Murphy.

WHERE THE ACTION IS

Pants can go everywhere

"Sure, deck your lower limbs in pants; Yours are the limbs, my sweeting. You look divine as you advance — Have you seen yourself retreating?"

By MARY ELLIS CARLTON
Director, Women's News

NEW YORK — Poet Ogden Nash penned those lines in the '30s, when people looked up every time an airplane flew over and when any woman who wore pants was either an actress or an athlete.

He could hardly have seen the day when, at high noon, two out of every five women rushing down Manhattan's madly fashionable Fifth Avenue would be dressed in trousers.

The fact that women's pants are a fact of life (45 million pairs will be sold in the U.S. this year) was never more apparent than in fall-winter collections previewed here the past nine days for the nation's press.

In more than 100 collections by American designers, two legged fashions have been almost as numerous as skirts. They range in price from $50 to $3,700.

At least half the 250 fashion editors here from all over the world have shown up in pants at least sometime during the showings.

California women may well say, "So what else is new?" They've been wearing pants for 20 years.

But the 1969 citypants are not to be confused with what California women wear with sweatshirts, T-shirts, jersey tops and haircurlers to the supermarket.

The new pants are dressed-up fashions that can go anywhere a skirt can go. And in the height of fashion.

The New York jetsetter wearing trousers and go-with jacket or topper — accessorized with the just-right hat, shoes, scarf and jewelry — looks so chic she turns more heads than a Wimbledon tennis match.

In fact, pants are where the action is for fall — with virtually all other separates keyed to them in some way or other.

DAYTIME PANTS are straight and narrow, a definitely trimmer look than last season. If you have a wardrobe of bellbottoms and elephant legs, better start tapering now.

The wide-leg "flappers" are still around — but only for evening or at-home wear.

Newest look for the coming season is the jumpsuit, both for daytime and evening, done in soft fabrics with plenty of "give."

They have a long stretched-out look, giving a beanpole-thin appearance — the most popular silhouette for fall.

Some of the best are by Victor Joris of Cuddlecourt, winner of this year's Coty Award. He even solves the jumpsuit problem with a style called "Grandfather Revisited." It has a drop seat fashioned with a dozen or more decorative buttons.

The pant-lengths question has now become as valid as the skirt lengths question once was.

There's the real floor-sweeper length almost covering the shoe, the comfortable shoe-top length, the mid-length, plus short culottes, knickers, leggings and britches.

THE GENERAL CONSENSUS is that the long length should be long enough to reach the shoe top so there's no skin showing around the ankles. As for other lengths, it's your decision.

Many of Manhattan's posh eateries banned them from the premises until popular opinion caused them to change.

Word is that comedienne Judy Carne of Laugh-In arrived at New York's 21 a few months ago in a tunic-top pantsuit. Pants are unacceptable she was told, so Judy slipped off her pants, left them at the check room and paraded past the maitre d' suitably dressed in her tunic only — the miniest of mini skirts. Next day the restaurant stopped barring pants.

Women are, indeed, winning their fashion freedom. Now it's a question of voting for the looks that are best for you.

NEW YORK SIDELIGHTS: Central Park with its acres and acres of trees and shrubs, the most expensive greenery in the world — has got to be one of the wonders of the world. On a typical summer weekend Gothamites desert their monolithic cliff dwellings and pour into the park on their bikes, pushing strollers, carrying picnic baskets, bringing their miniature sail boats or toting the Sunday papers.

There are so many different ways of spending the day in Central Park — the zoo, the art museum, the concerts, the lakes, the trails, the outdoor restaurant at Bethesda Fountain.

The hippies are there in force . . . but so are the Beautiful People in their fashionable casual attire. In fact, it seems all classes of New Yorkers have learned something from the hippies. They've learned it's great to be casual, but better yet to be clean.

You can learn a lot walking down Fifth or Madison or Lexington Avenues. Someone is always pushing a handbill in your direction . . . like one advertising a new "ape drape" hairstyle being done at a salon on 57th Street. Another giving the day's bill of fare at Topkati, billed as New York's only authentic Turkish restaurant.

New York's Pace College has come up with an alternative for the grueling grind of working by day and trying to earn a degree by night. Starting in September, the college will hold special weekend classes for students who will be able to earn a bachelor of arts or associate degree in four years.

• New York is now living up to its "Naked City" billing on TV. The off-Broadway take-it-off revue, "Oh! Calcutta!" which stars ten nude bodies, is apparently going to be permitted to stay on despite a flood of protests. Word is that the NYPD and DA's office are apparently going to let it continue indefinitely.

• The most-talked-about thing in New York these days is the cost of living. And no wonder. Prices are not to be believed. (For a hamburger and coffee I ordered through room service at the Pierre Hotel, my tab was $5.95). Even the 1,118 priests in the New York archdiocese are complaining they can't live on their monthly stipend.

More Monday.

WHERE THE ACTION IS

Pants can go everywhere

"Sure, deck your lower limbs in pants; Yours are the limbs, my sweetling. You look divine as you advance — Have you seen yourself retreating?"

By MARY ELLIS CARLTON
Director, Women's News

NEW YORK — Poet Ogden Nash penned those lines in the '30s, when people looked up every time an airplane flew over and when any woman who wore pants was either an actress or an athlete.

He could hardly have seen the day

when, at high noon, two out of every five women rushing down Manhattan's madly fashionable Fifth Avenue would be dressed in trousers.

The fact that women's pants are a fact of life (45 million pairs will be sold in the U.S. this year) was never more apparent than in fall-winter collections previewed here the past nine days for the nation's press.

In more than 100 collections by American designers, two legged fashions have been almost as numerous as skirts. They range in price from $50 to $3,700.

At least half the 250 fashion editors here from all over the world have shown up in pants at least sometime during the showings.

California women may well say, "So what else is new?" They've been wearing pants for 20 years.

But the 1969 citypans are not to be confused with what California women wear with sweatshirts, T-shirts, jersey tops and haircurlers to the supermarket.

The new pants are dressed-up fashions that can go anywhere a skirt can go. And in the height of fashion.

The New York jetsetter wearing trousers and go-with jacket or top — accessorized with the just-right hat, shoes, scarf and jewelry — looks so chic she turns more heads than a Wimbledon tennis match.

In fact, pants are where the action is for fall — with virtually all other separates keyed to them in some way or other.

DAYTIME PANTS are straight and narrow, a definitely trimmer look than last season. If you have a wardrobe of bellbottoms and elephant legs, better start tapering now.

The wide-leg "flappers" are still around — but only for evening or at-home wear.

Newest look for the coming season is the jumpsuit, both for daytime and evening, done in soft fabrics with plenty of "give."

They have a long stretched-out look, giving a beanpole-thin appearance — the most popular silhouette for fall.

Some of the best are by Victor Joris of Cuddlescott, winner of this year's Coty Award. He even solves the jumpsuit problem with a style called "Grandfather Revisited." It has a drop seat fashioned with a dozen or more decorative buttons.

The pant-lengths question has now become as valid as the skirt lengths question once was.

There's the real floor-sweeper length almost covering the shoe, the comfortable shoe-top length, the mid-length, plus short culottes, knickers, leggings and britches.

THE GENERAL CONSENSUS is that the long length should be long enough to reach the shoe top so there's no skin showing around the ankles. As for other lengths, it's your decision.

Many of Manhattan's posh eateries banned them from the premises until popular opinion caused them to change.

Word is that comedienne Judy Carne of Laugh-In arrived at New York's 21 a few months ago in a tunic-top pantsuit. Pants are unacceptable she was told, so Judy slipped off her pants, left them at the check room and paraded past the maitre d' suitably dressed in her tunic only — the mildest of mini skirts. Next day the restaurant stopped harrising pants.

Women are, indeed, winning their fashion freedom. Now it's a question of voting for the looks that are best for you.

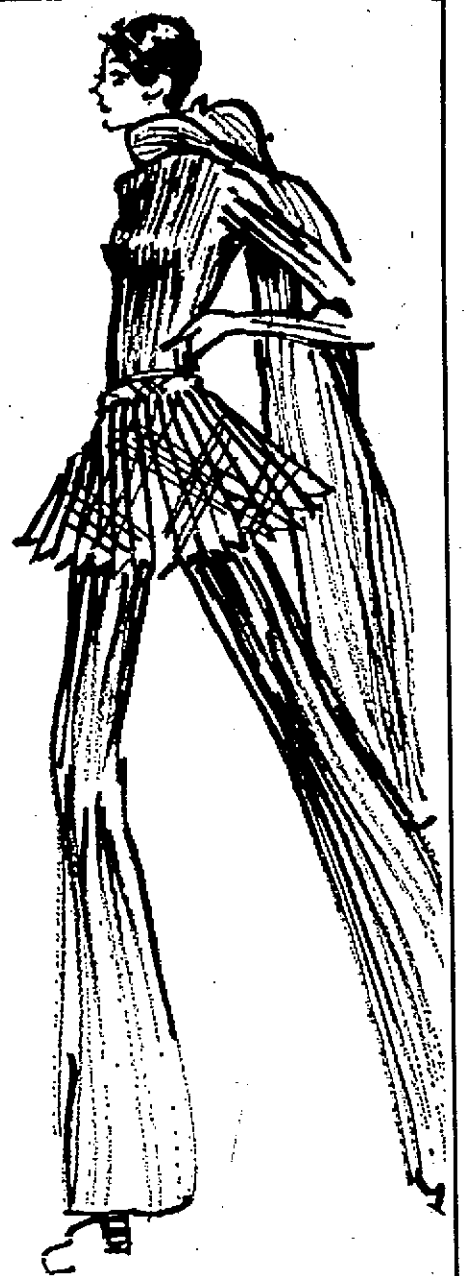

NEW YORK SIDELIGHTS: Central Park with its acres and acres of trees and shrubs, the most expensive greenery in the world — has got to be one of the wonders of the world. On a typical summer weekend Gothamites desert their monolithic cliff dwellings and pour into the park on their bikes, pushing strollers, carrying picnic baskets, bringing their miniature sail boats or toting the Sunday papers.

There are so many different ways of spending the day in Central Park — the zoo, the art museum, the concerts, the lakes, the trails, the outdoor restaurant at Bethesda Fountain.

The hippies are there in force ... but so are the Beautiful People in their fashionable casual attire. In fact, it seems all classes of New Yorkers have learned something from the hippies. They've learned it's great to be casual, but better yet to be clean.

You can learn a lot walking down Fifth or Madison or Lexington Avenues. Someone is always pushing a handbill in your direction ... like one advertising a new "ape drape" hairstyle being done at a salon on 57th Street. Another giving the day's bill of fare at Topkati, billed as New York's only authentic Turkish restaurant.

New York's Pace College has come up with an alternative for the grueling grind of working by day and trying to earn a degree by night. Starting in September, the college will hold special weekend classes for students who will be able to earn a bachelor of arts or associate degree in four years.

• New York is now living up to its "Naked City" billing on TV. The off-Broadway take-it-off revue, "Oh! Calcutta," which stars ten nude bodies, is apparently going to be permitted to stay on despite a flood of protests. Word is that the NYPD and DA's office are apparently going to let it continue indefinitely.

• The most-talked-about thing in New York these days is the cost of living. And no wonder. Prices are not to be believed. (For a hamburger and coffee I ordered through room service at the Pierre Hotel, my tab was $5.95). Even the 1,118 priests in the New York archdiocese are complaining they can't live on their monthly stipend.

More Monday.

DEAR ABBY

Always a guest, never a host

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: How do you tell someone (a relative) that it's time she and her husband gave a party? When this couple moved to town three years ago, they didn't know a soul. We introduced them to all of our friends, and now our friends are their friends, too.

The are attractive, charming people and well-liked by all who know them, so they are very popular, but if they don't hurry up and start inviting some of these people back, they won't be so popular much longer.

Since we did sponsor them, we feel somewhat responsible for their social sins of omission. What do we do? I can hardly hold my head up. NO TOWN, PLEASE

DEAR NO: It's not necessary to stick your neck out in order to hold your head up. If you "like" this couple and are seriously concerned about their threatened loss of popularity as well as the reflection on yourselves, tell the lady in a nice way that if she's planning to entertain, you'll be glad to help her. If she doesn't get the drift, well, you've done your part.

DEAR ABBY: In a few weeks I am going to become an American citizen. What is the correct thing to do on this occasion? Do you send out announcements or invitations to the ceremony? It is open to the public, but does this mean family only?

Should I have cards printed? It is such a big event for me I want to do something, but I don't know what. Can you help me? FUTURE CITIZEN

DEAR CITIZEN: Why not have a private party and invite those with whom you'd like to celebrate the occasion? Printed cards are not necessary. A telephone call or a little note will do. Congratulations.

DEAR ABBY: I am a girl of 17 who needs some advice badly. My boyfriend is a very nice guy, but he asks me questions which are none of his business.

He says if I don't tell him what he wants to know it means I don't love him or trust him. He also says that no matter what I tell him about myself, he won't hold it against me.

We've been going together for a year, and this is the only thing we ever fight about.

He insists that the past should be forgotten, yet he keeps nagging me to tell him everything about mine. I never ask him any questions about his.

What should I do, Abby? I really love him, and I don't want to lose him. IN A CRUNCH

DEAR IN: Tell your inquisitive boyfriend that he is absolutely right — the past should be forgotten, and if he persists in questioning you, it means he doesn't love or trust YOU.

Engineers, assemblers, secretaries — and representatives of almost all other work classifications at McDonnell Douglas Aircraft Company — turned artists for the company's sixth annual art exhibit.

Their work goes on display today at Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd., where it may be seen through July 20.

The oils, watercolors, acrylics, drawings, sculpture and mixed media were judged by three Southland educators: Dr. Howard Hitchcock, professor of art; Herman Graff, professor of art; and Mrs. Charlene Steen, art instructor. All are faculty members at California State College, Long Beach.

John H. Macki won best of show with his oil, "The Silent Night Is Shattered by the Thoughts Inside My Mind." First place winners were Ken Hanson, watercolor; Ralph Dockham acrylic-tempera; DuWayne Higgins, mixed media; Bob Prascunas, drawing; and Jack White, sculpture.

Friends of the Museum will host a public reception today from 2 to 4 p.m. to honor participating artists.

AS PART of the California Bicentennial celebration, Los Angeles Municipal Art Gallery, 4800 Hollywood Blvd., will exhibit "Colonial Art of Mexico" from Wednesday through Aug. 3. Admission will be free.

Tuesday from 7:30 to 10 p.m., the Gallery Associates will be hosts at an open-to-the-public preview. Regular hours are 1 to 5 p.m. daily except Friday when the gallery remains open until 10 p.m.

Organized by the Programa Nacional Fronterizo in cooperation with the University of New Mexico, the show consists of paintings which give an idea of the extensive growth of art in Mexico between 1521, when the Spanish conquest ended, and 1821, date of the National Independence in Mexico.

IN SPECIAL exhibits during the summer months, Long Beach Art Association is featuring work by new members, and young members studying for a degree in art.

One such exhibit is sculpture and jewelry by Dan Levin, now on display in the lobby of Villa Riviera, 800 E. Ocean Blvd.

Levin, whose grandfather was an ornamental iron worker and blacksmith and whose mother is a commercial artist, is largely self-taught. During his free time when he was a fireman with the Los Angeles Fire Department, he developed his skill in metal work. Now he works with a local jewelry manufacturer, designs and sculpts for a local studio and is a member of the Mercuryhead Workshop in Belmont Shore.

WICKED, WILD, INCISIVE
--is nothing sacrosanct?

By VIRGINIA LADDEY

"Migawd!" was all I could think upon viewing the 57 works of Charles Bragg at the Long Beach Museum of Art. These days, when prudence seems increasingly the better part of valor, it is a shock to come upon such an out and out iconoclast.

Bragg's wicked, wild, incisive brush, pencil or etching needle spares none: adamant patriots, The Church, The Jury, the National Rifle Association, or the Elders of Judaism — even kindly, gallant old Gen. Robert E. Lee.

Viewers, though offended, cannot help being intrigued and surely should secure for themselves one of the catalogues (50 cents). In it, Arthur Secunda focuses on Bragg who is a unique independent in the field of California artists. Ten of the works are reproduced.

SECUNDA RECITES a list in whose tradition he feels Bragg falls — all the way from Rembrandt to Strangelove. He missed Bosch, that early 16th century Dutchman whose nightmare world is painted with the same kind of detailed naturalism and who, like Bragg, was unique in his time.

How many viewers will realize, though, that Bragg is not pointing the finger at "them" but at the evil in all of us? Who is not guilty of making phony platitudes that add but one more layer to the dunghill with which we surround ourselves on our crashing trip to wherever it is we're heading?

Yet, while demanding rigorous self-appraisal, Bragg is palatable for three major reasons: his people are lovably human, his technique is fantastic, and his historical symbolism formidable.

NUMBER 15, "The Chaplain," is typical of the multiple levels of symbolism Bragg incorporates. The spreading, cloaked arms encompass kneeling field rank officers, skulls, a blind paraplegic in his chair. The costume of the figure combines military medals and an iron cross. The gold-haloed angels on either side are a faceless female and a Mr. McGoo.

There is magic realism, traditional iconography, incongruous humor, and a wrench at the heart for the plight of a race who can implore the Prince of Peace for Victory in War.

The show, at 2300 E. Ocean Blvd., will continue through July 12.

DEAR ABBY

Always a guest, never a host

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: How do you tell someone (a relative) that it's time she and her husband gave a party? When this couple moved to town three years ago, they didn't know a soul. We introduced them to all of our friends, and now our friends are their friends, too.

The are attractive, charming people and well-liked by all who know them, so they are very popular, but if they don't hurry up and start inviting some of these people back, they won't be so popular much longer.

Since we did sponsor them, we feel somewhat responsible for their social sins of omission. What do we do? I can hardly hold my head up, NO TOWN, PLEASE

DEAR NO: It's not necessary to stick your neck out in order to hold your head up. If you "like" this couple and are seriously concerned about their threatened loss of popularity as well as the reflection on yourselves, tell the lady in a nice way that if she's planning to entertain, you'll be glad to help her. If she doesn't get the drift, well, you've done your part.

DEAR ABBY: In a few weeks I am going to become an American citizen. What is the correct thing to do on this occasion? Do you send out announcements or invitations to the ceremony? It is open to the public, but does this mean family only?

Should I have cards printed? It is such a big event for me I want to do something, but I don't know what. Can you help me? FUTURE CITIZEN

DEAR CITIZEN: Why not have a private party and invite those with whom you'd like to celebrate the occasion? Printed cards are not necessary. A telephone call or a little note will do. Congratulations.

DEAR ABBY: I am a girl of 17 who needs some advice badly. My boyfriend is a very nice guy, but he asks me questions which are none of his business.

He says if I don't tell him what he wants to know it means I don't love him or trust him. He also says that no matter what I tell him about myself, he won't hold it against me.

We've been going together for a year, and this is the only thing we ever fight about.

He insists that the past should be forgotten, yet he keeps nagging me to tell him everything about mine. I never ask him any questions about his.

What should I do, Abby? I really love him,

and I don't want to lose him. IN A CRUNCH

DEAR IN: Tell your inquisitive boyfriend that he is absolutely right — the past should be forgotten, and if he persists in questioning you, it means he doesn't love or trust YOU.

Circle-Tahiti trip beautiful dream springing to life

EDITOR'S NOTE: UTA French Airlines inaugurated triangular service to Tahiti (Los Angeles-Honolulu-Tahiti-Los Angeles) early in June and Travel Editor Fred Kraft was aboard for the flight. This is his second report on the trip and his impressions of what he saw.)

By FRED TAYLOR KRAFT
Travel Editor

PAPEETE, TAHITI — No self-respecting globe-trotter would dare leave this lovely dot in the mid-Pacific without first circling its perimeter.

Before the advent of the jetliners, when life here was a little more primitive than now, an occasional visitor — his appetite for the island unsatiable — would hire a bike or a saddlehorse and make a leisurely two-day trip of it.

Now it takes only the short end of a day if you keep moving along in a tour bus or rental car; or on Le Truck, a truck-like bus on which Tahitians ride happily to the early morning market in Papeete with squealing pigs and clucking chickens in tow, or a basket of freshly-caught fish in their laps.

However you go, the sights and sounds and smells you experience will remain ineffaceable in your memory, probably if you were to live a thousand years.

FIRST, you encounter ample evidence that history caught up with Tahiti more than 200 years ago, and that these people had their own gods and worshiped them for centuries before they ever laid eyes on a white man.

There's Point Venus —

Princess Lines names Stiven sales manager

LOS ANGELES — Pat Stiven has been named district sales manager of Los Angeles for Princess Cruises, according to Bruce A. Beatty, general manager. Stiven was formerly district sales manager in San Francisco.

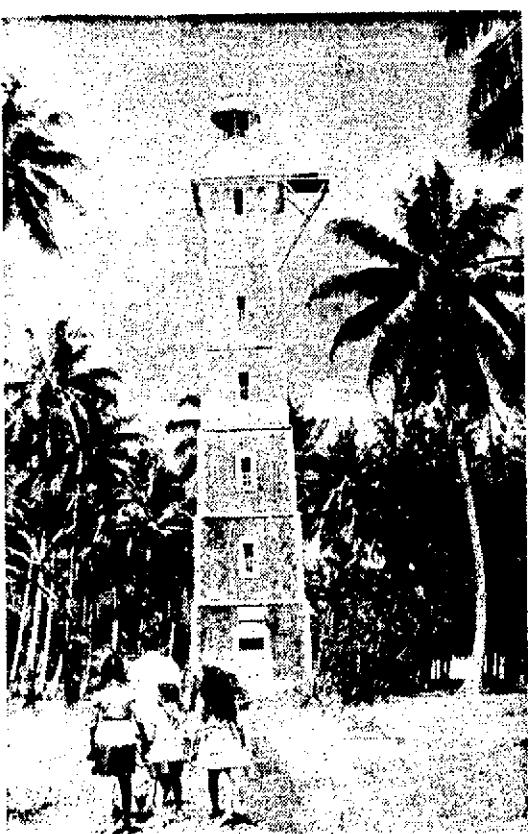

John Marino, formerly a sales representative for Princess in the Bay area, has been named to succeed Stiven as district sales manager in San Francisco. Stiven is located at the line's headquarters, 643 S. Flower St., Los Angeles, Calif. 90019.

Princess Cruises, a subsidiary of the Boise Cascade Corp., also has offices in Seattle, Chicago, Washington, Montreal and Toronto. The line operates the Princess Carla and Princess Italia on cruises to Mexico, Alaska, Canada, Caribbean, South America and South Pacific. A third ship will join the line's fleet in 1970, with six cruise liners expected to be in service by 1973.

a lighthouse in a fragrant garden marks the spot — where Captain Samuel Wallis landed when he "discovered" the island in 1767; and Matavai Bay, where Captain James Cook came two years later with his astronomers and scientists to witness the transit of the planet Venus across the surface of the sun.

At another stop, on a bridge crossing the Papeiha River which rushes out of the green mountains in a lush valley to greet the sea, is a small plaque honoring the first Frenchman to come this way, Captain de Bougainville, in 1768.

Moving ahead in time, there's a smart little museum commemorating Paul Gauguin, who brought the island and its copper-colored vahines to life on canvas. None of his original works is displayed for security reasons — one sold for a half-million dollars — but his genius and strange career are depicted in almost 900 documents and exhibits.

A botanical garden started by Harrison Smith, a retired Harvard professor, surrounds Musee Gauguin, but not every island circle is aware of its presence because the entire landscape is, itself, an immense forest of tropical trees and flowers, made almost ethereal by fern-covered hills, laughing waterfalls and graceful coconut palms.

Further on is the Marae of Arahurahu, the ruins of an open-air temple or worship used by untold generations of Tahitians before the missionaries arrived. These people still visit the

and the jagged, emerald mountains — the tallest of which, Mount Orohena, towers 7,300 feet into the clouds — on the other.

The Almighty really put His genius for beauty to work when He created the Tahitian landscape.

BUT EVEN more rewarding is the chance to observe Tahiti's rural life.

The homes are neat, pastel-colored cottages, often with thatched roofs, which are slowly but surely sealing the doom of the all-thatched-and-dirt-floor abodes built by earlier generations. Each has its own little clearing, profuse with garden posies.

Children in their birthday suits splash happily in streams by the roadside while their mothers scrub the family wash a few yards away. Less affluent, perhaps, than their city cousins, their means of transportation most often is the bike that pedals instead of chug-chugging.

Their food consists of a rich harvest of bananas, papaya, breadfruit, taro, oranges and other tropical delicacies, available simply for the taking. To balance their diets, they fish the streams and surf as their forefathers did, often with their hands for the fun and excitement of it. They find their life play, and they have their smiles and laughter to prove it.

On one wide, sandy, surf-swept beach an entire community of scantily clad men, women and children were engrossed in a group fishing project called tuu opea.

Two good-sized boats with outriggers stood several hundred yards out, anchoring one end of the long, weighted net. When half a hundred persons began hauling in the net, I imagined I could hear the strains of the hukilau, a song with gestures which tourists are taught on Hawaii-bound luxury liners and on the beach at Wai-kiki, for this is the REAL hukilau which inspired the song.

ON A SUNDAY morning, during a previous trip to Tahiti, I was impressed at the sight of these God-fearing people strolling along the roadside on their way to picture-pretty churches that bob up every few miles around the island's perimeter. Some were dressed in ankle-length grey costumes with matching bonnets. Faint strains of song echoed from some of the houses of worship, and I was moved that it was all so picturesque and divine — the Tahitians' way of giving thanks for their multitude of blessings.

It was a weekday when I made the tour this time but the churches, shut and silent, brought that Sunday scene back to me as vividly as if it were recurring before my very eyes.

We passed one church, which, like the others sat serenely in a manicured clearing within a few yards of the sea.

Gethsemane is its name. I made a promise to myself that I will attend services there on my next journey to Tahiti.

Now it takes only the short end of a day if you keep moving along in a tour bus or rental car, or on Le Truck, a truck-like bus on which Tahitians ride happily to the early morning market in Papeete with squealing pigs and clucking chickens in tow, or a basket of freshly-caught fish in their laps.

However you go, the sights and sounds and smells you experience will remain ineffaceable in your memory, probably if you were to live a thousand years.

FIRST, you encounter ample evidence that history caught up with Tahiti more than 200 years ago, and that these people had their own gods and worshiped them for centuries before they ever laid eyes on a white man.

LOS ANGELES — Pat Steven has been named district sales manager of Los Angeles for Princess Cruises, according to Bruce A. Beatty, general manager. Steven was formerly district sales manager in San Francisco.

John Marino, formerly a sales representative for Princess in the Bay area, has been named to succeed Steven as district sales manager in San Francisco. Steven is located at the line's headquarters, 643 S. Flower St., Los Angeles, Calif. 90018.

Princess Cruises, a subsidiary of the Boise Cascade Corp., also has offices in Seattle, Chicago, Washington, Montreal and Toronto. The line operates the Princess Carla and Princess Italia on cruises to Mexico, Alaska, Canada, Caribbean, South America and South Pacific. A third ship will join the line's fleet in 1970, with six cruise liners expected to be in service by 1973.

Farther on is the Marae of Arahurahu, the ruins of an open-air temple or worship used by untold generations of Tahitians before the missionaries arrived. These people still visit the

a lighthouse in a fragrant garden marks the spot — where Captain Samuel Wallis landed when he "discovered" the island in 1767; and Matavai Bay, where Captain James Cook came two years later with his astronomers and scientists to witness the transit of the planet Venus across the surface of the sun.

At another stop, on a bridge crossing the Papetia River which rushes out of the green mountains in a lush valley to greet the sea, is a small plaque honoring the first Frenchman to come this way, Captain de Bougainville, in 1768.

Moving ahead in time, there's a smart little museum commemorating Paul Gauguin, who brought the island and its copper-colored vahines to life on canvas. None of his original works is displayed for security reasons — one sold for a half-million dollars — but his genius and strange career are depicted in almost 900 documents and exhibits.

A botanical garden started by Harrison Smith, a retired Harvard professor, surrounds Musee Gauguin, but not every island circle is aware of its presence because the entire landscape is, itself, an immense forest of tropical trees and flowers, made almost ethereal by fern-covered hills, laughing waterfalls and graceful coconut palms.

and the jagged, emerald mountains — the tallest of which, Mount Orohena, towers 7,300 feet into the clouds — on the other.

The Almighty really put His genius for beauty to work when He created the Tahitian landscape.

BUT EVEN more rewarding is the chance to observe Tahiti's rural life.

The homes are neat, pastel-colored cottages, often with thatched roofs, which are slowly but surely sealing the doom of the all-thatched-and-dirt-floor abodes built by earlier generations. Each has its own little clearing, profuse with garden posies.

Children in their birthday suits splash happily in streams by the roadside while their mothers scrub the family wash a few yards away. Less affluent, perhaps, than their city cousins, their means of transportation most often is the bike that pedals instead of chug-chugging.

Their food consists of a rich harvest of bananas, papaya, breadfruit, taro, oranges and other tropical delicacies, available simply for the taking. To balance their diets, they fish the streams and surf as their forefathers did, often with their hands for the fun and excitement of it. They find their life play, and they have their smiles and laughter to prove it.

On one wide, sandy, surf-swept beach an entire community of scantily clad men, women and children were engrossed in a group fishing project called tau opea.

Two good-sized boats with outriggers stood several hundred yards out, anchoring one end of the long, weighted net. When half a hundred persons began hauling in the net, I imagined I could hear the strains of the hukilau, a song with gestures which tourists are taught on Hawaii-bound luxury liners and on the beach at Wai-kiki, for this is the REAL hukilau which inspired the song.

ON A SUNDAY morning, during a previous trip to Tahiti, I was impressed at the sight of these God-fearing people strolling along the roadside on their way to picture-pretty churches that bob up every few miles around the island's perimeter.

Some were dressed in ankle-length grey costumes with matching bonnets. Faint strains of song echoed from some of the houses of worship, and I was moved that it was all so picturesque and divine — the Tahitians' way of giving thanks for their multitude of blessings.

It was a weekday when I made the tour this time but the churches, shut and silent, brought that Sunday scene back to me as vividly as if it were recurring before my very eyes.

We passed one church, which, like the others sat serenely in a manicured clearing within a few yards of the sea.

Gethsemane is its name.

I made a promise to myself that I will attend services there on my next journey to Tahiti.

Greeks prohibit smashing glasses

By STAN DELAPLANE
ATHENS, Greece — The bouzoukia tavernas still play that haunting "Zorba the Greek" music. But the glass-smashing thing is out — remember the movie "Never on Sunday?"

The customer, overcome with the sadness of music and life, paid for and smashed glass after glass. (The sad rich hired a sad waiter to smash glasses for them.)

Never on Sunday. Or any other day.

"Cut it out," said the new Greek government. "It makes the Greeks look like barbarians."

It's sunny summer now in Greece. The hideaway island is Lemnos, famed for figs and wine. A DC-3 flies daily from Athens. Only one hotel, the luxury Akti Myrina Bungalows. About $22 a day for two with all meals.

Prospector first to see million in hard cash

LAS VEGAS — Can you imagine what's going through Fred "Whiskers" Bernhart's mind when he examined $1 million in cash? Bernhart is a 72-year-old Nevada prospector who has yet to strike it rich, but he was the first to see the cool million dollars when it was display at Binion's Horseshoe Club in downtown Las Vegas. The unique display, (the only one of its kind in the world), was put together in Las Vegas bank vault then carried through the streets of Las Vegas in an armored car surrounded by a squad of motorcycle policemen. The one hundred $10,000 bills are incased in glass, and hang inside an eight-foot, 2,000-pound golden horseshoe.

All Southlanders invited to exhibit at Hemet fair

HEMET — Southland residents are invited to exhibit their talents, wares and produce at the 23rd annual Farmers Fair of Riverside County which runs here Aug. 20-24.

Rules for submitting an entry and lists of prizes offered winners are all included in the premium book, available free from the Farmers Fair, Box 398, Hemet 92343.

Counties, communities and organizations from throughout Southern California are invited to enter feature exhibits and booths. Entry deadline is Aug. 8.

Agriculture and horticulture divisions are open to any resident of Riverside County. Entries close Aug. 12.

FLORICULTURE is open to any resident of the Southland, as long as flowers exhibited were grown in the amateur's own area. The commercial flower show is open to any commercial nurseryman or grower in the United States. Floriculture entries close Aug. 8.

Home economics, which includes preserved foods, baked goods, confections, clothing and textiles, is open to any resident of Riverside County. Entries close Aug. 8.

"We've been told to go to the island of Mykonos and how do you get there?"

BEEN DISCOVERED by the jet set. (I saw Jackie Kennedy there before she married Onassis.) Now, I don't mean it's luxurious — it's just popular. Not a hideaway place like Lemnos. Fishing village town. Every waterfront cafe jammed with students on the cheap. One luxury hotel on a fine sand beach; $20 a day for two with all meals.

Students make it in private homes for a dollar a day. You go over by ship, five hours from Athens. Or, Onassis runs a helicopter service. I took the ship. A breezy, blue sea ride. (Students get an incredibly low rate. The Greek government caters to student travelers.)

"Anything we should know before going to Greece...?"

CIGARETTES will cost you $1 a package. Bring in two cartons. If you run out, try the local Papas-tratos. No free matches —

it's a government monopoly. Carry a lighter.

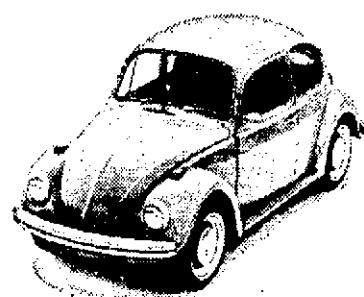

Greek food just so-so. Runs heavily to lamb. Sea food very good. Steaks frightful. Wine is fair. White, St. Helena. Red, Chevalier de Rhodes. Beer is good — I prefer the Amstel. Don't buy the wine that's been spiked with turpentine "retsina." The Greeks adore it. But you'll be sorry.

Greeks don't tip taxi drivers. Tourists usually do. A service charge tip is added to your restaurant bill. Custom is to leave five per cent more. On the plate! That's for waiter. Now, leave a little — one per cent on the table cloth! That's for the bus boy. The poor kid gets nothing else.

But — don't let your sympathy get away with you. The bus boy tip MUST be smaller than the waiter's. Or you've insulted the waiter by putting him on a bus boy level. He'll hate you forever.

criteria internationally required and accepted.

Golf buffs looking for a vacation where they can play their favorite pastime will be interested in what Matson Lines has come up with for September.

During all of the SS Lurline's new "Super Cruises" through the Hawaiian Islands the emphasis will be on golf, and to really kick it off, Matson has a special cruise scheduled from Sept. 7 to Sept. 17 that should delight divot-diggers all over the country.

Middlecoff, a former winner of the Hawaiian Open Golf Championship, and one of the game's all-time greats, will conduct

Greeks prohibit smashing glasses

By STAN DELAPLANE

ATHENS, Greece — The bouzoukia tavernas still play that haunting "Zorba the Greek" music. But the glass-smashing thing is out — remember the movie "Never on Sunday?"

The customer, overcome with the sadness of music and life, paid for and smashed glass after glass. (The sad rich hired a sad waiter to smash glasses for them.)

Never on Sunday. Or any other day.

"Cut it out," said the new Greek government. "It makes the Greeks look like barbarians."

It's sunny summer now in Greece. The hideaway island is Lemnos, famed for figs and wine. A DC-3 flies daily from Athens. Only one hotel, the luxury Akti Myrina Bungalows. About $22 a day for two with all meals.

Prospector first to see million in hard cash

LAS VEGAS — Can you imagine what's going through Fred "Whiskers" Bernhart's mind when he examined $1 million in cash? Bernhart is a 72-year-old Nevada prospector who has yet to strike it rich, but he was the first to see the cool million dollars when it was displayed at Binion's Horseshoe Club in downtown Las Vegas. The unique display, (the only one of its kind in the world), was put together in Las Vegas bank vault then carried through the streets of Las Vegas in an armored car surrounded by a squad of motorcycle policemen. The one hundred $10,000 bills are incased in glass, and hang inside an eight-foot, 2,000-pound golden horseshoe.

All Southlanders invited to exhibit at Hemet fair

HEMET — Southland residents are invited to exhibit their talents, wares and produce at the 23rd annual Farmers Fair of Riverside County which runs here Aug. 20-24.

Rules for submitting an entry and lists of prizes offered winners are all included in the premium book, available free from the Farmers Fair, Box 398, Hemet 92343.

Counties, communities and organizations from throughout Southern California are invited to enter feature exhibits and booths. Entry deadline is Aug. 8.

Agriculture and horticulture divisions are open to any resident of Riverside County. Entries close Aug. 12.

FLORICULTURE is open to any resident of the Southland, as long as flowers exhibited were grown in the amateur's own area. The commercial flower show is open to any commercial nurseryman or grower in the United States. Floriculture entries close Aug. 8.

Home economics, which includes preserved foods, baked goods, confections, clothing and textiles, is open to any resident of Riverside County. Entries close Aug. 8.

Floriculture is open to any resident of the Southland

It's a government monopoly. Carry a lighter.

Greek food just so-so. Runs heavily to lamb. Sea food very good. Steaks frightful. Wine is fair. White, St. Helena. Red, Chevalier de Rhodes. Beer is good — I prefer the Amstel. Don't buy the wine that's been spiked with turpentine "retsina." The Greeks adore it. But you'll be sorry.

Greeks don't tip taxi drivers. Tourists usually do. A service charge tip is added to your restaurant bill. Custom is to leave five per cent more. On the plate that's for waiter. Now, leave a little — one per cent on the table cloth. That's for the bus boy. The poor kid gets nothing else.

But — don't let your sympathy get away with you. The bus boy tip MUST be smaller than the waiter's. Or you've insulted the waiter by putting him on a bus boy level. He'll hate you forever.

PASSPORT POINTERS

Age of applicant

By GENE BURKE
Agent in Charge
L.A. Passport Agency

QUESTION: Why, oh why must I have my age shown in my passport? If my husband learns my true age he will surely divorce me. Help, please!! RC

ANSWER: A person's name, date and place of birth, and physical description must be a part of the identifying data in a United States passport. A passport is a document of identity as well as nationality and as such must include certain identifying criteria internationally required and accepted.

QUESTION: My wife and I have a joint passport issued in 1964. Can we apply for a new passport by mail? I was told by a Clerk of a County Court that we must appear in person if we want a passport together. Why?

Our passport is less than the required 8 years since it was issued. GR

ANSWER: Mail-in applications are accepted only from the bearer of a passport not more than 8 years old, issued since the bearer's 18th birthday. If a spouse is to be included in the new passport, then the application must be made in person by both husband and wife before a Clerk of an authorized Court or a Passport Agent of the Department of State. While the bearer of a passport is identified through the physical description and signature in his previous passport, the identifying data for the person included is not shown in the passport hence the necessity of a personal appearance for proper identification.

Golf buffs looking for a vacation where they can play their favorite pastime will be interested in what Matson Lines has come up with for September.

During all of the SS Lurline's new "Super Cruises" through the Hawaiian Islands the emphasis will be on golf, and to really kick it off, Matson has a special cruise scheduled from Sept. 7 to Sept. 17 that should delight divot diggers all over the country.

Karpin on bridge

by Fred L. Karpin

The story is told of the novice who was playing in her first tournament. On the second deal, she picked up a good hand, containing three aces and one king.

Her partner held three kings and one ace. The young lady, arrived at a three notrump contract, and won the opening lead with an ace.

With lengthy trick-by-trick deliberation, she went back and forth from her hand to the dummy, taking the first eight tricks with her aces and kings.

Then after a long pause, she commented: "Partner, now the trouble commences."

And so it goes with many non-expert bridge players. They play perfunctorily, without any planning, and perceive belatedly that victory has escaped them. Here is an example, taken from a rubber-bridge game.

Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

After the opening lead had been captured by South's king, declarer promptly led a heart to dummy's ace.

When he then cashed the king of hearts, he received the discouraging news that the adversely held hearts were divided badly; and that all he could make in this suit were the three tricks with which he had started.

When play had ended, he had gone down two tricks.

ACTUALLY, declarer was unlucky in not finding the five outstanding hearts divided 3-2. Had they been so divided, he would have made six heart tricks.

Nevertheless, declarer was guilty of "no planning," since all he needed were five heart tricks to bring home his contract.

At trick two, when declarer led a low heart and West played the eight-spot, declarer should have allowed the eight-spot to capture the trick.

When the defenders got through taking their spade tricks (two in this case, although if the East-West spade holding had been reversed, they could have made three spade tricks), declarer would have had a fulfilled contract.

By allowing West to win the first heart lead, declarer would have overcome the "bad" 4-1 heart division. But, probably, he gave it no thought.

INTERNATIONAL FLAVOR

I, P-T Cook Book doing 'big switch'

By MILDRED K. FLANARY
Food Editor

The Independent Press-Telegram's 15th Annual Cook Book is doing "the big switch." It's going international!

But before we give you the rules for this year's contest, we want to thank each member of the clubs whose judging in the past has played such an important part in this annual venture. This year's entries will be judged by a panel of the city's restaurateurs.

There are 36 categories from foreign countries. However, there will be a change in the number of entries—just one recipe per person, per category. The deadline is Sunday midnight, July 13. Use only one side of the page and include your category, name, address and phone number. (The phone number will not be printed—just used in case we need to clarify your recipe.)

Send recipes to Mildred Flanary, Independent Press-Telegram, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach 90801.

Who knows? Long Beach just might become the International Gourmet Capital of the world. Shall we try?

Betty Vee dance students featured on program

Glad You Asked That!

By Hy Gardner

Q. WASN'T Jerry Lewis once a husboy in a Catskill Mountains boarding house? — Lenore Oken, New Haven, Conn.

A. Yes. At the now famous Brown's. His pay was $12 a week — less the cost of dishes he smashed. He returns once a year, dons his old uniform, and drops a trayful of crockery to prove he's still as graceful as ever.

Q. Is it true that actor Cesar Romero is related to Jose Marti, often called "the George Washington of Cuba"? And has Romero open-sesame to Castroland? — C.D., Cocoa, Fla.

A. Cesar is actually the grandson of Marti. He hasn't visited the country his mother's father freed (and died for) since Fidel took over. He's heard, through the exile grapevine, that the Marti Museum is retained as a shrine.

Q. What put Georgie Jessel into the hospital? I heard it was a fight about a 19-year-old chorus girl. — Candy Leigh, St. Paul, Minn.

A. Georgie wishes that was the reason. What happened was that after receiving a medal from the USO for services rendered in Vietnam, he saluted a general too hard. Clicked his heels, fell and broke his hip.

Q. Ed Ames, Daniel Boone's Indian scout on TV, became successful on his own after leaving the Ames Brothers. What are the other three doing? — Linnie Attab, New York.

A. Joe Ames is seeking an opera career in Italy. Vic is a real estate agent in New Jersey, and brother Gene is an interior decorator.

Q. I heard on TV that Bobbie Gentry is a grandmother. Is she? — Linda Robling, Indianapolis.

A. She'd have to be a disciple of Houdini to have performed that trick. Bobbie Lee, born in Chickasaw County, Miss., was still a teen-ager only six years ago!

Jerry Lewis . . . still breaking dishes.

Q. Whatever happened to Jack Lescoulie, a fixture on the "Today" show for so many years? — W.A., Earle, Ark.

A. In answer to dozens of similar queries, I finally tracked Lescoulie down. He lives in Riverside, Conn., with his new bride, former NBC secretary Mary Bolger 3rd. Jack may switch horses in mid-channels and pop up as star of a TV western series, a role he played in films before his TV prominence. His crony, Burt Lancaster, also promised Jack he'd do cameo roles in his future pictures.

Q. Wasn't General de Gaulle once sentenced to death? If so, why and by whom? — Irma L., Troy, N.Y.

A. Yes. During WW II by Marshal Petain, pussy-footing head of the puppet Vichy government. For refusing to collaborate during the Nazi occupation of France.

Q. What is the REAL reason Dean Martin doesn't have his beautiful wife, Jeanne, on his show? — Francis Smith and "A Group of Office Girls," Toronto.

A. You can cool it. Dino personally explains: "I have been trying to get Jeanne to appear on my show — just even to walk through the closet door only to say hello. But she has turned me down every time I have asked her. I will try again this coming year. Love always, Dean."

Outside House Painting Eliminated for 15 Years

LONG BEACH, CALIF. (CT)—Painting is a thing of the past. Let us show you how Fiberglas TEX-COTE insulates, waterproofs and beautifies and is factory guaranteed for a full 15 years.

BEST IN NATION

Homeowners are requested not to spend a single penny on painting their residences until they hear the TEX-COTE story. This remarkable material insulates, waterproofs and beautifies, and every fiberglas TEX-COTE job is factory guaranteed for 15 full years against chipping, flaking or peeling.

Fiberglas, a product of Owens-Corning, brings to TEX-COTE its great strength, its wonderful insulating properties, its resistance to time, weather and chemical attack.

PROVEN OVER THE YEARS

TEX-COTE is one of the oldest coatings now marketed and has been applied on thousands of homes and commercial buildings since 1946. These buildings have remained in perfect condition after more than 15 years exposure in all types of weather.

SHOT FROM A GUN

TEX-COTE is applied with heavy duty spray equipment and is actually "shot from a gun" without muss, fuss or odor. TEX-COTE fuses itself to the walls and fills holes, cracks and covers building defects. TEX-COTE may be applied over stucco, wood, brick, block or shingles.

THE WELLS REPORT

Declasse of '69

By Bob Wells

MR. PRESIDENT, members of the faculty, alumni, students, ladies and gentlemen:

First, let me apologize for the lateness of this graduation address. Actually I've had it ready since early May, just waiting for some college or university to invite me to be the commencement speaker.

To date, none of the more than 2,000 institutions of higher education in this country have seen fit to invite me. Since this is the penultimate day of June, I have premonition there is to be no invitation. I am left with the option of waiting until next year, or of delivering it in an institution of lower education.

Well, OK. I guess this space qualifies as lower education—along with astrology newsletters, real estate brochures and vegetarian tracts distributed by health food stores.

Indeed, it gives me great pleasure not to be talking to the Class of '69. Or the classes of 1965 through 1975. I happen to hold an administrative position at one of California's larger colleges. For four years I've been talking to students.

None of them heard me, of course. While I was talking, they were shouting, screaming, singing, chanting and marching. The din on campus these days is terrific.

You walk into the college library and a loud-speaker blares at you. "Sssshhhhh. This is a recording."

TO TELL THE TRUTH, I would have preferred to skip the graduation exercises altogether this year. What I really wanted to do was to embrace the student body funds and fly to Tahiti with a white Russian princess who was a fourth-grade dropout.

Alas, that wasn't possible. I mean, if there were any student body or travel funds available, both the college president and the dean of students would have been in Tahiti long ago.

One of these days, some student is going to yell "Pigs off campus" just once too often and all we administrators are going to interpret it as approval for sabbatical leave.

Some college presidents are being criticized for allowing students to sit-in in administration buildings. But you have to look at the presidents' side of it. From their point of view it was logical.

After all, college presidents and their staffs have been sitting-in in administration buildings for years and Congress, the various legislatures and the taxpayers have never paid any attention to them.

Of course, the politicians have also been misunderstood and misinterpreted. For instance, back in 1968 when Governor Reagan went to Miami and announced he was a serious candidate for president, a lot of us thought he meant president of the United States instead of the University of California.

THE THING THAT saddens me most about the student militants on my campus is their lack of originality. They never come up with a demonstration or a demand that hasn't been devised on some other campus. If some other campus has a sit-in, then they'll try a sit-in. If students on some other campus demand the flag be lowered to protest police actions, then we eventually get a demand to fly the flag at half-mast. But they never originate a thing.

The day after our last demonstration of the year, I asked a faculty member if he had witnessed it.

"Naw," he said. "I saw it at Berkeley with the original cast."

THERE IS NO DOUBT that the public is concerned and upset by campus demonstrations. The street in front of my house gets a lot of kid traffic on the way to and from school. Recently, I planted the parking strip in front of the house and put a lathe-and-twine makeshift fence around it to warn the kids away. In about two days the lathe and twine were pulled down and the plants trampled. I replanted the parking strip and this time put a stake-and-wire fence around it. A day or two later, I looked out the window and saw a 10-year-old boy busily trying to pull down the fence.

I recognized him. His mother had told me a few days earlier that she had written a strong letter to the governor demanding that college administrators and faculty teach students respect for other people's property.

I dashed out of the house, took the boy by the ear and marched him home to his mother.

"I've come to negotiate," I told her, "about the people's park your son wants to establish on my parking strip."

I suppose one of the things that upsets college administrators is that people seem to demand stricter performance from them than they do other public officials. Every now and then, some exhibitionist militant succeeds in raising a Viet Cong flag on a college campus. It is swiftly taken down, but that does not stop the outcry. The public expects that the college administration and its 7- to 20-man police force should have kept it from being put up in the first place.

There are a great many Viet Cong flags being raised in South Vietnam. The U.S. defense establishment has half a million men there, but they haven't been able to prevent it. No one has yet suggested the Pentagon is soft on demonstrators.

ACTUALLY, I'M NOT so sure martial law on the campus might not be a good thing. I mean if we gave the military full responsibility for running the college and gave them full latitude to run it the way they do the military. Especially in funding.

My college, for instance, for the past four years has had the lowest per student cost of any public four-year institution in California. We have received no acknowledgment of this economy. On the contrary, we have had to limit enrollment to keep within our already sparse budget.

But if we had a colonel running the college under Pentagon budgetary policies, things might be different. He could go to the Department of Finance and explain:

"Well, we have this college budgeted at about 25 million dollars, see. But a few things came up. First, of course, there's inflation, then the cost of research and development on curricula ran a little more than expected. Our Educational Opportunities Program expanded beyond our expectations, too. The cost of books has gone up, too, you know. Then the cost of the new officers'—I mean, faculty club, was way over estimate. It's well worth it, of course. You can't keep up morale and maintain a professional officer—I mean, faculty corps if you don't have a proper officers'—you gentlemen must pardon me, I'm new to this terminology—if you don't have a proper faculty club.

"Well, to make a long budget short, the cost of operating this particular college rose from our budget estimate of 25 million dollars to $67,500,000,000.

"I realize that is a rather large sum, but let's look at it this way. That is an increase of only 2700 per cent. And while that may be a unique increase for education, there is precedent for it in the military and this is now a military operation."

THE WELLS REPORT

Declasse of '69

By Bob Wells

MR. PRESIDENT, members of the faculty, alumni, students, ladies and gentlemen:

First, let me apologize for the lateness of this graduation address. Actually I've had it ready since early May, just waiting for some college or university to invite me to be the commencement speaker.

To date, none of the more than 2,000 institutions of higher education in this country have seen fit to invite me. Since this is the penultimate day of June, I have premonition there is to be no invitation. I am left with the option of waiting until next year, or of delivering it in an institution of lower education.

Well, OK. I guess this space qualifies as lower education—along with astrology newsletters, real estate brochures and vegetarian tracts distributed by health food stores.

Indeed, it gives me great pleasure not to be talking to the Class of '69. Or the classes of 1965 through 1975. I happen to hold an administrative position at one of California's larger colleges. For four years I've been talking to students.

None of them heard me, of course. While I was talking, they were shouting, screaming, singing, chanting and marching. The din on campus these days is terrific.

You walk into the college library and a loud-speaker blares at you. "Sssshhhhh. This is a recording."

TO TELL THE TRUTH, I would have preferred to skip the graduation exercises altogether this year. What I really wanted to do was to embezzle the student body funds and fly to Tahiti with a white Russian princess who was a fourth-grade dropout.

Alas, that wasn't possible. I mean, if there were any student body or travel funds available, both the college president and the dean of students would have been in Tahiti long ago.

One of these days, some student is going to yell "Pigs off campus" just once too often and all we administrators are going to interpret it as approval for sabbatical leave.

Some college presidents are being criticized for allowing students to sit-in in administration buildings. But you have to look at the presidents' side of it. From their point of view it was logical.

After all, college presidents and their staffs have been sitting-in in administration buildings for years and Congress, the various legislatures and the taxpayers have never paid any attention to them.

Of course, the politicians have also been misunderstood and misinterpreted. For instance, back in 1968 when Governor Reagan went to Miami and announced he was a serious candidate for president, a lot of us thought he meant president of the United States instead of the University of California.

THE THING THAT saddens me most about the student militants on my campus is their lack of originality. They never come up with a demonstration or a demand that hasn't been devised on some other campus. If some other campus has a sit-in, then they'll try a sit-in. If students on some other campus demand the flag be lowered to protest police actions, then we eventually get a demand to fly the flag at half-mast. But they never originate a thing.

The day after our last demonstration of the year, I asked a faculty member if he had witnessed it.

"Naw," he said. "I saw it at Berkeley with the original cast."

THERE IS NO DOUBT that the public is concerned and upset by campus demonstrations. The street in front of my house gets a lot of kid traffic on the way to and from school. Recently, I planted the parking strip in front of the house and put a lathe-and-twine makeshift fence around it to warn the kids away. In about two days the lathe and twine were pulled down and the plants trampled. I replanted the parking strip and this time put a stake-and-wire fence around it. A day or two later, I looked out the window and saw a 10-year-old boy busily trying to pull down the fence.

I recognized him. His mother had told me a few days earlier that she had written a strong letter to the governor demanding that college administrators and faculty teach students respect for other people's property.

I dashed out of the house, took the boy by the ear and marched him home to his mother.

"I've come to negotiate," I told her, "about the people's park your son wants to establish on my parking strip."

I suppose one of the things that upsets college administrators is that people seem to demand stricter performance from them than they do other public officials. Every now and then, some exhibitionist militant succeeds in raising a Viet Cong flag on a college campus. It is swiftly taken down, but that does not stop the outcry. The public expects that the college administration and its 7- to 20-man police force should have kept it from being put up in the first place.

There are a great many Viet Cong flags being raised in South Vietnam. The U.S. defense establishment has half a million men there, but they haven't been able to prevent it. No one has yet suggested the Pentagon is soft on demonstrators.

ACTUALLY, I'M NOT so sure martial law on the campus might not be a good thing. I mean if we gave the military full responsibility for running the college and gave them full latitude to run it the way they do the military. Especially in funding.

My college, for instance, for the past four years has had the lowest per student cost of any public four-year institution in California. We have received no acknowledgment of this economy. On the contrary, we have had to limit enrollment to keep within our already sparse budget.

But if we had a colonel running the college under Pentagon budgetary policies, things might be different. He could go to the Department of Finance and explain:

"Well, we have this college budgeted at about 25 million dollars, see. But a few things came up. First, of course, there's inflation, then the cost of research and development on curricula ran a little more than expected. Our Educational Opportunities Program expanded beyond our expectations, too. The cost of books has gone up, too, you know. Then the cost of the new officers—I mean, faculty club, was way over estimate. It's well worth it, of course. You can't keep up morale and maintain a professional officer—I mean, faculty corps if you don't have a proper officers'—you gentlemen must pardon me, I'm new to this terminology—if you don't have a proper faculty club.

"Well, to make a long budget short, the cost of operating this particular college rose from our budget estimate of 25 million dollars to $67,500,000,000.

"I realize that is a rather large sum, but let's look at it this way. That is an increase of only 2700 per cent. And while that may be a unique increase for education, there is precedent for it in the military and this is now a military operation."

SAFE BOATING IS GOAL OF U.S. L.B. SQUADRONS

More Power to Them

By Jack O. Baldwin

Marine Editor, Independent Press-Telegram

WHEN ROBERT FULTON first successfully navigated his steam-driven Clermont up the Hudson River in 1807 he unknowingly fired the first shot in what eventually developed into the longest American maritime civil war of all time — a war between motorboats and sailboats.

It was during this war between the salty captains of sailing yachts and the "rowdy, ill-mannered maniacs who drive motorboats" that a group of Boston yachtsmen conceived the idea which eventually led to the creation of the United States Power Squadrons.

At one time the sailing skippers of the yawls, ketches, schooners and sloops had the waters all to themselves. They had pretty much agreed upon a set of manners, largely dictated by custom, as to a sailing skipper's proper behavior in the handling and maneuvering of his boat.

Then along came the "stinkpots," motor-driven boats — many of them with funnels as big as a stack on a locomotive belching plumes of black, half-burned fuel and smoke.

Unhindered by the whim of the wind which powered the fashionable sailing yachts and displaying "exceedingly bad manners," the "stinkpots" gave the sailing yachtsmen fits. The power boats darted in and about the tacking sailboats, creating mountainous waves and giving no heed to right of way.

It became obvious that these mannerless madmen and their stinky, smoke-belching, noisy motorboats had to be taught a lesson!

During the early spring of 1912, as the lingering snowdrifts rested against the weathered sides of boathouses and the teak decks of the yachts lay hidden beneath a winter garb of scantlings and tarpaulins, an idea came to Roger Upton of the Boston Yacht Club.

Upton dreamed of a club within a club. A club for motorboat men only.

In May of 1912 Upton became the first commodore of the Power Boat Division of the Boston Yacht Club.

It was Upton's hope that the motorboat men would develop new forms, and new manners, of cruising and racing that would be more adaptable to motorboating.

But more than that, he fathered the idea to provide power boaters with "such nautical education as would remove forever the stigma of ignorance and plain fool-headedness which professional shipmasters had put on them."

Later that year the name was changed to Power Squadron of the Boston Yacht Club — and the Power Squadron name was adopted when the national organization was formed on Feb. 2, 1914, at a meeting held in New York Yacht Club with clubs and squadrons from Maine to Maryland attending.

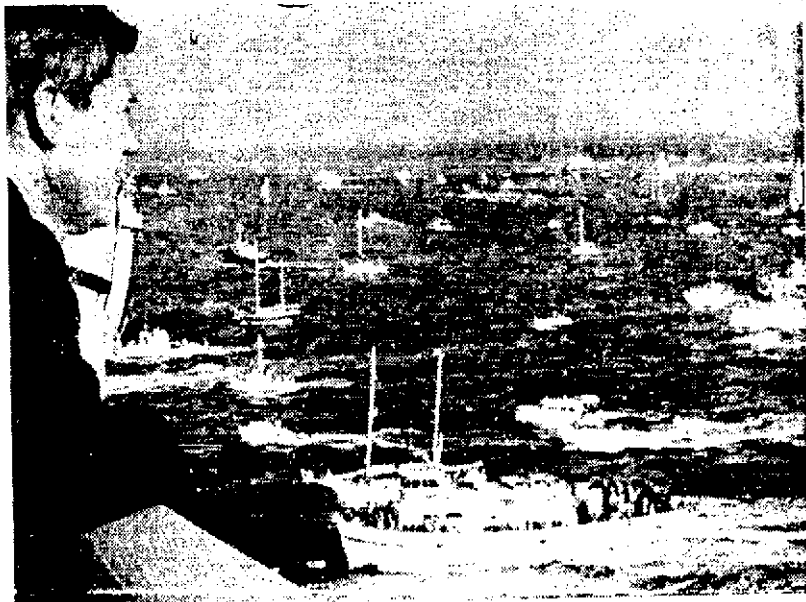

AS THE United States Power Squadrons (USPS) grew both in number and membership, more and more emphasis was placed on education. The program was continually being revised and updated to keep pace with technical improvements of motorboats.

One of the early ideas was that the motorboat cruises should be modeled on the maneuvers of a naval fleet with an elaborate system of flag signals.

This linked the power squadrons to the U.S. Navy.

On land, the educational officers were training men about to enter the Navy in navigation and boat handling.

With the start of World War I the USPS offered the services of the entire organization. More than 5,000 men who attended classes taught by the volunteer, unpaid instructors of the USPS entered the armed forces — many of them receiving a commission because of the knowledge they had obtained from the USPS.

With the end of hostilities and the return to civilian life, many members who had a bellyful of military discipline launched a movement to abolish military maneuvers and boat drills.

By 1919 enthusiasm within the USPS ebbed to an all-time low. The treasury was broke. There was $450 in unpaid bills, and communications between national headquarters and local squadrons was practically nonexistent.

The chief commander at that time suggested the members of the governing board chip in, pay the bills and disband.

Vice Commander A. B. Bennett was against disbanding. He offered certain suggestions. Among them were: eliminate boat drills, open membership to "any worthy man and not just to yacht club members," "... to make men members of the national organization first and members of local squadrons second," and, "... that the USPS should stress education and nothing else!"

Bennett's ideas must have been sound ones, for today the USPS has 376 squadrons in 41 states plus Puerto Rico, the Canal Zone, Okinawa and Japan, with a national membership of 70,389 members whose objectives include "... to encourage the study of the science of navigation and small boat handling."

To further this end every squadron must conduct at least once each year a free public course in Elementary Piloting for anyone 16 years of age or above who desires to enroll.

Forbidden under the by-laws of the USPS is a charge for attending, taking an examination, or the issuance of a certificate of completion.

While all squadrons are required to conduct only one course in safe small boat handling each year, most squadrons conduct at least two — one in the fall and another in the spring.

The course, usually given one evening a week, is open to boat owners, ex-boat owners and, especially, to future boat owners.

THE LONG BEACH squadron conducts two such courses each spring and fall with an average enrollment of more than 150 students per class. The squadron recently conducted the first class ever held in the City of Avalon on Catalina Island. Forty of the city's 1,100 residents took the course.

Noting the steadily increasing number of pleasure boats in the Southland, Dr. Frank Blair, commander of the Long Beach Squadron, decided the squadron should give an accelerated, twice-a-week course in Elementary Piloting this summer. The class chairman prepared for an enrollment of 50 students. Registering for the beginning of classes on June 2 at the Sea Explorer Base were 146 boating enthusiasts—nearly three times the anticipated enrollment!

The USPS acknowledges the word "power" in its name has deterred some sailboat skippers from enrolling.

"Oh, I wouldn't be interested in a Power Squadron course because I'm a 'rag-man,'" is the frequent comment of sailboat enthusiasts.

On that ill-conceived notion Commander William Grant, commander of the 16 squadrons in District 13, which extends from Santa Barbara to Balboa, has this to say:

"It is just as vital for a sailboat skipper to know rules of the road, right of way, government regulations, or when a sailboat is not a sailboat, as it is for the operator of a power boat who may be on a collision course with the sailboat."

While it was the intent of the founding fathers of USPS to educate errant power boat operators, a recent census in Southern California of enrollees in Elementary Piloting courses revealed that 56 per cent are owners or future owners of sailboats.

The free course in Elementary Piloting recognizes that many boat owners trailer their boats — in fact, in California, most boat owners do. Trailer boat owners can enjoy greater variety in where to go and what to do with their boat than owners confined to keeping

Beautiful Downtown Burbank -- It Really Exists

By Michael Anthony

YES, VIRGINIA, there is a "Beautiful Downtown Burbank." Planned and designed as part of Burbank's Capital Improvement Program under the direction of Eisner-Stewart and Associates, the new Burbank Golden Mall perhaps inspired the phrase which was coined by NBC's pseudo-psychedelic Rowan and Martin show.

The NBC studios, from which the show originates, are located no more than three miles from downtown Burbank. The popularity with which the show was nationally received is typified by the bumper-sticker and tourist souvenir campaigns suggesting that you "Vacation in Beautiful Downtown Burbank." But, despite this sardonic humor, beautiful downtown Burbank does exist.

Construction of the Golden Mall began on May 8, 1967, after an official ground-breaking ceremony. It was completed by the third week in November, and dedication ceremonies were held on Nov. 25, 1967.

The philosophy of the Golden Mall is different from that of perhaps any other mall project so far undertaken. The idea is that the downtown area should be more than just a shopping district; it should be the social and civic focal point of the entire community. No matter what brings people to the downtown area, once there, they will shop. The major attraction on the mall is a pavilion which seats 175 people and may be used for cooking demonstrations, fashion shows or a variety of activities.

Since the mall's inception, the merchants have experienced a business increase of 30 per cent and a pedestrian traffic increase of more than 40 per cent. During the next 10 years, with new zoning ordinances and the completion of the Capital Improvement Program of the entire city, of which the mall is a large part, it is possible that Burbank will experience the most exciting activity in its history.

Research for the project was thorough and the suburban pattern was considered. As a Burbank resident and businessman for over 15 years, the author has been actively involved in the civic development.

In the Golden Mall, but in no other mall project thus far, a visitor can be educated in a variety of topics by the voices of civic leaders, enjoy music piped through the street-light standards and be entertained by in-person hands.

Shoppers, strollers and sight-seers in downtown Burbank are frequently treated to shows and demonstrations in the mall center pavilion. There are colorful fountains, children's play areas and numerous rest areas surrounded by lawns and exotic plants and trees.

Burbank is the home of a number of movie and television studios, including NBC, Warner-Seven Arts, Columbia and the Walt Disney Studios; diverse business and industry; and large areas of parks and residences. Burbank is a magnetic city to which many new residents are being attracted.

And, in appreciation, the people of Burbank wish to say, "Goodnight, Rowan and Martin, wherever you may be."

YES, VIRGINIA, there is a "Beautiful Downtown Burbank." Planned and designed as part of Burbank's Capital Improvement Program under the direction of Eisner-Stewart and Associates, the new Burbank Golden Mall perhaps inspired the phrase which was coined by NBC's pseudo-psychedelic Rowan and Martin show.

The NBC studios, from which the show originates, are located no more than three miles from downtown Burbank. The popularity with which the show was nationally received is typified by the bumper-sticker and tourist souvenir campaigns suggesting that you "Vacation in Beautiful Downtown Burbank." But, despite this sardonic humor, beautiful downtown Burbank does exist.

Construction of the Golden Mall began on May 8, 1967, after an official ground-breaking ceremony. It was completed by the third week in November, and dedication ceremonies were held on Nov. 25, 1967.

The philosophy of the Golden Mall is different from that of perhaps any other mall project so far undertaken. The idea is that the downtown area should be more than just a shopping district; it should be the social and civic focal point of the entire community. No matter what brings people to the downtown area, once there, they will shop. The major attraction on the mall is a pavilion which seats 175 people and may be used for cooking demonstrations, fashion shows or a variety of activities.

Since the mall's inception, the merchants have experienced a business increase of 30 per cent and a pedestrian traffic increase of more than 40 per cent. During the next 10 years, with new zoning ordinances and the completion of the Capital Improvement Program of the entire city, of which the mall is a large part, it is possible that Burbank will experience the most exciting activity in its history.

Research for the project was thorough and the total urban pattern was considered. As a Burbank resident and businessman for over 15 years, the author has been actively involved in the civic development.

In the Golden Mall, but in no other mall project thus far, a visitor can be educated in a variety of topics by the voices of civic leaders, enjoy music piped through the street-light standards and be entertained by in-person bands.

Shoppers, strollers and sight-seers in downtown Burbank are frequently treated to shows and demonstrations in the mall center pavilion. There are colorful fountains, children's play areas and numerous rest areas surrounded by lawns and exotic plants and trees.

Burbank is the home of a number of movie and television studios, including NBC, Warner-Sevens Arts, Columbia and the Walt Disney Studios; diverse business and industry; and large areas of parks and residences. Burbank is a magnetic city to which many new residents are being attracted.

And, in appreciation, the people of Burbank wish to say, "Goodnight, Rowan and Martin, wherever you may be."

Walk Tall

By Mark Clutter

PATRIOTISM is a bit out of style these days. Many consider love of America as comical, perhaps even obscene.

It is true that the old-fashioned expressions of patriotism have become clichés. Just words, bombastic words signifying nothing.

But the rejection of Americanism results from ignorance. To love America, you must know something about America. You must think about America. You must get in tune with the vibrant warmth and richness of this nation.

As in the love of man and woman, as in all other human loves, you must be strong when the loved one fails, tolerant of foibles, forgiving of outright wrongs. A nation is a living creature, not an abstract ideal of the perfect society.

Our America is a human society — some would say all too human. To understand our nation, to understand ourselves, we should remember the kind of men who came to these shores to create a new nation.

They were an unlikely, often an unsavory, lot. A big corporation today would reject most of them for employment because of illiteracy, criminal records, emotional instability, lack of training.

It is estimated that 30 per cent of those who came in colonial times were slaves. Most of the Europeans had bound themselves to serve masters for a period of years. This taste of the whip created the passion for freedom.

All the immigrants were "on the lam" from something — hunger, religious oppression, military conscription, the police, personal failure, boredom. No man leaves home and fatherland without desperate motives.

Among our forefathers were religious bigots, pirates, gamblers, unsuccessful revolutionists, utopian dreamers, jailbirds and outright lunatics.

The land was savage. The wilderness began at the beach. They had no background and few tools for establishing a foothold on a hostile continent. But they did it, not without terror, bloodshed and tears.

The children of men on the lam tend to go on the lam. Always outside the little towns was the green hell of the forest where a man could be free at a harsh cost. Did a man disagree with his Calvinist preacher — was he in love with his neighbor's wife — was he in danger of being hanged? He could always flee to the wilderness. Americans are still on the lam, always fleeing from something unpleasant, always searching for the Big Rock Candy Mountain. Or the City of God!

The achievements of this nation of runaways and rebels stagger the imagination. The energy of the westering people is unsurpassed in all history. In brief centuries we have built history's greatest civilization. We have given all mankind new concepts of human worth.

The Americans have a neurotic problem that dates back to the beginning. It is the conflicting passion for freedom and the need for slaves. In addition to the horror of chattel slavery there was insatiable demand for cheap labor. The slums and often the jails of Europe supplied the factories, the mines, the railroad-building gangs. The history of labor in the 19th century is not a pretty one.

But the passion for freedom is contagious, and the sons of the oppressed learned to walk as free men. The process continues. The black militants did not learn rebellion from strangers.

Sometimes the American neurosis becomes psychotic. Looking back, the Civil War appears as lunacy. Only by studying those times can one arrive at a measure of understanding of the brothers who fought with such tragic gallantry for freedom as they understood it.

The Americans function most magnificently when freedom is threatened. The armed forces in the 1930s numbered a tiny cadre of officers and enlisted men. In 1941, when Japan almost destroyed the Pacific fleet, the recruits were drilling with wooden guns. America was a poor nation, just coming out of the depression.

In 1945 we broke the Japanese Empire and played our large role in breaking Germany. We had more than 12 million men under arms, had contributed massively to the needs of our allies and had built a tremendous war machine. No nation ever did more in so short a time. The war effort was total; all Americans knew that the freedom-hating Axis must be destroyed.

Once the guns were silent we returned to our individualistic, pluralistic, rebellious ways. We had earned the right to those ways.

In the years since World War II we have much to be proud of. The opportunity — the right! — to education has been vastly enlarged with education for all as the goal. The culture has been transformed to mostly urban. Scientific advances have been greater than in any century of the past, and Americans are reaching out to the worlds beyond this world.

America is in revolution. The revolution is more serious than most people realize. One of the reasons for anger is that the achievements since 1941 have opened eyes to goals that are not being achieved or are being achieved too slowly. There are many dangers, but also bright hopes in the years ahead. America has always been a land of revolutions. The important thing is to keep our revolutions American, to fight as we have fought passionately for freedom and against our dark need for slavery.

Americans have a right to walk tall when they see Old Glory. We and our

They See With Their Ears

By Donald Desfor

A MAGIC listening center is the modern computer-age Pied Piper that's helping to lead blind children out of darkness into a brightened world of discovery and adventure.

Allan is 4. He is an emotionally disturbed child who has been blind since birth. His response to people, a short time ago, was as void as his visual darkness. He neither reached out nor withdrew; he just didn't respond in any manner.

Then a teacher at the Blind Children's Center in Los Angeles caressed Allan's ears with a soft listening device that felt good. The one long, soft, snarl-free sound line from the headset to the sound distributor allowed Allan freedom to move. All distracting noise was eliminated.

From records and tapes Allan heard music, stories, animals, train whistles and the flow of water. Allan became attentive. The voices talked to Allan, gave him directions, asked him questions. Allan began to respond.

Now, every morning Allan runs to the corner where the headphones are kept and participates, sometimes for an hour or more.

Allan listens intently with his hands to his ears, shakes his head up and down, grimaces, stands, yelps, gazes up, then listens in motionless, rapt attention. He laughs, sits, works his hands. He shakes his head sideways, then firmly up and down.

"Such a dramatic change," Allan's teacher sighs with a tear, while observing him from the middle of the room. Allan is still timid with people but his sociability has improved.

"The children need to develop skills with their fingers," explains Carol Parten, the Blind Center's educational director. Use of the listening unit has increased Allan's skills of hands, fingers and body. Allan is able to find his own headphones, snuggle them to his ears, under his chin, and plug the soft plastic, non-electric line into the center unit on a table where from one to 12 children listen and respond to comfortable, intimate voices and sounds.

Jim, a teacher at the center, leads Danny, a smiling 5-year-old, to the table. Danny suffered blindness and spinal damage two years ago and has difficulty walking and coordinating his physical movements. But he is warm and intelligent.

Danny feels for Allan. He takes Allan's hands and holds them over his own earpiece so Allan can share the acoustic vibration.

While Danny listens, he feels the pliant, plastic sound chamber and runs his fingers down the rubber-like tube. When the record concludes, Danny takes his headphones off. Allan keeps his on and waits.

Another record starts. Allan sings "nya-nya-nya" while bouncing in his chair in rhythm. "Children need a rocking rhythm. The intellectual comes later," says Mrs. Parten.

Danny's pleasant expression broadens to a bright smile. He folds his arms. Later Danny reaches for Allan and tries to hug him. But Allan stares ahead, all business and concentration, on what he is hearing and moves from Danny.

Blind youngsters Allan (left), 4, and Danny, 5, respond to earphone sounds.

Mark, 4, enters the group. He takes a headset. "What's this?" then, searching for Don, his teacher, calls, "Don, where are you?"

"I'm over here, Mark. That's a new headphone for listening you are holding. Put it under your chin and over your ears, and put the end of the tube into the hole on the round box on the table."

Mark accurately and efficiently does as he is instructed but asks, "Don, will you sit with me?"

Don is building blocks with a 3-year-old blind girl at another table 10 feet away and answers, "I'm busy, Mark, but I'll join you in a little while."

Mark has been blind six months. Presently, Don, a strong, gentle young man in his early 20's, moves over to Mark.

"We are using blue and white earphones," Don explains as Mark climbs on Don's knees.

Mark feels, "Where's the white? — is this the blue?" pulling the soft, removable earpad out while he fingers the inside of the simple plastic shell of the sound chamber.

"Mark is good for our children because he is visually oriented," whispers Mrs. Parten. Shortly Don moves on to another child on the other side of the room.

The children also can record their own tapes. They enjoy the playback of their own names and giggles; they enjoy recognizing their playmates' voices and becoming familiar with their own. In the evening the house mothers use the units, called Acoustifones, to play stories and songs for the children's amusement and enrichment.

"Children need one-to-one relationships. When a teacher for each child is not available, there is nothing better than the Acoustifone to provide this and occupy the children constructively while we are meeting the individual needs of others," explains Karen, a young Oriental teacher, as she helps a little girl brush her hair.

Clinton, 6, pulls the pliable, self-adjusting headset off, puts the sound line to his mouth, whispers to himself through the acoustic line, fondles the set, then replaces it on his head, while his small friend next to him, Pierre, 4, stares up and holds his bunny rabbit in his lap.

Mark replaces his headphones in the box. His voice calling for Don does not disturb the other children listening on their individual phones, because they cannot hear him.

"I'm over here Mark, what do you want?"

Mark feels his way toward Don and replies, "I want to see what you are doing."

And, in the corner, Alvin listens, responds and sparkles with his headset, as he transforms from a shy little boy in a dark world to a bright young man with vision — vision which enters his mind through his ears.

A story holds interest of Mark, 4.

Eve of Adams Move

By Ellen Krec

The general's lady gets ready for formal dinner.

THE thought of moving from a sumptuous 10-room-plus home to quarters totaling 25 feet by 45 feet might give the average family qualms, but Maj. Gen. Arthur H. Adams (USMC) and Mrs. Adams pause only to reflect on the storage problems.

Marine Corps Air Station, El Toro, has been home for the past 10 months and, in the ways of the military wife, Mrs. Adams has performed decorating miracles in that space of time.

"Twenty-four hours at a new base tells the story," according to Mrs. Adams. "The home must be in some semblance of order, because a drop-in for cocktails might mean 100 persons."

"One good thing about the service," she says. "Everyone understands if you serve a drink in a jelly glass the first few hours!"

No drinks are served today in jelly glasses; they're served in beautiful antique tumblers, part of the travel hobby of collecting "anything as long as it's beautiful and preferably French."

"Katie's Fly-Inn" flashes the neon sign, a gift from the pilots at Glenview Naval Air Station three years ago. The gift was a tribute to the Adamses' hospitality and good humor.

Melissa, 19, a freshman at the University of Denver, and Judy, 10, will join their parents in the new home in Seoul, Korea.

A married son, Rick, a lieutenant in the nuclear submarine service, and a daughter, Kathy, married to a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps, complete the total-service family.

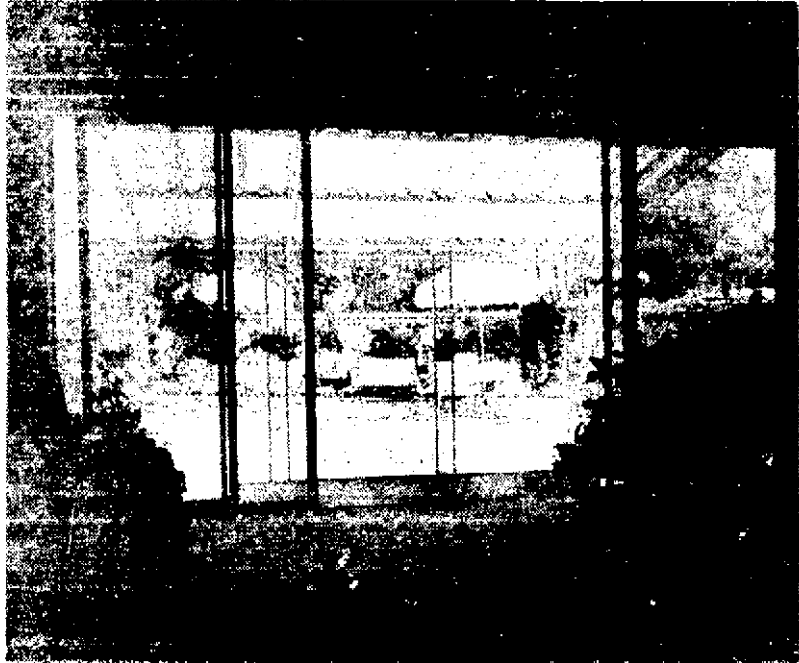

Sixteen-year-old Bean, a Labrador retriever, must be the best traveled pet in the world, but this time will remain in California during the Seoul stint with his companion Labrador, Little Bean.

Surrounding the rambling, white painted quarters are beautifully tended gardens where Mrs. Adams plies her second hobby skill — gardening. While the gardens curve with shrubs to shield the fixed barbecue and the sweeping old trees give shelter from the sun, Mrs. Adams is responsible for the hundreds of blooming annuals in the patio perimeter.

meaning of O'DELL?—B.C., Garden Grove.

O'DELL, Irish, was originally O'Dalaigh, descendants of Dalac, a chieftain whose name meant "fre-quenter of assemblies. The clan O'Dalaigh were natives of Westmeath, Ireland. Odell used as one word originated in England from the phrase

"wode-hull" describing "forested hill." The Odell shield is silver, emblazoned with three red crescent moons.

MISS RULE: Would appreciate data on WARWICK, WARRICK. — W.W., R.W., L.W., Long Beach.

WARWICK and WARRICK, the phonetic spelling, English, originated as the ancestor's estate name, Waring-wic, meaning "fortress of the true man's son." This estate was in Cumberland, north England, not connected with the English county of Warwick. The surname developed from Waring-wic to Waringwick, then Warwick and Warrick. The ancient Warwick shield is blue, emblazoned with three rampant silver lions.

MISS RULE: What is the origin of SCHLEIMANN? — A.S., Long Beach.

SCHLEIMANN, German, originated as "Schleie-mann," meaning "tench-fish man." The forefather was named for his fishing occupation, as a catcher of tench, a freshwater fish.

MISS RULE: Kindly inform us on MOON. — I.M., Seal Beach.

MOON, English, began as the Norman French "De Mohun" meaning "estate in the middle of the valley." The primary ancestor, the Sire William de Mohun, was a leader under William the Conqueror in the Norman subjugation of England, 1066. Moon also evolved from a trademark shop-sign picturing a moon as the owner's emblem. The Moon or Mohun shield from Devonshire, granted in the 11th century, is red, emblazoned with an arm in an ermine cloak sleeve, the hand holding a silver fleur-de-lis.

MISS RULE: Would like the source of OWEN. — M.J., Sun City.

OWEN, Welsh, evolved for "Owein," designating "well-born one." The lineage began with Rhodri Mor, a 9th century Welsh king. The Owen shield is silver, emblazoned with a black rampant lion.

COYNE, Irish, traces to the Gaelic clan name O'Cadhain which had the

THE SOUTHLAND AT HOME

Mrs. F. A. Adams and Melissa share music appreciation.

snugly at the side of the concrete deck where colorful umbrella-topped tables provide outdoor dining comfort.

Depending on where the inhabitants are from, the paneled study may be called a solarium because of the windows lining the walls or a sun porch because it opens to the deck. The Adamses find it a place to relax and entertain surrounded by fine abstract paintings by Jean Armstead, antiques from the markets of Paris and family heirlooms.

"We love our home and we always hurry to enjoy it," says Mrs. Adams.

"This particular home," she admits, "we could happily retire in — it is so right and comfortable."

The basic home was complete with white walls, shuttered windows and off-white carpeting.

The sun room combines the look of yesterday and today's eclectic sophistication. Citron velvet chairs border a family library table, a Thailand porcelain elephant table is topped with an irreplaceable glass flower arrangement and an old wood and brass hibachi which serves as a lamp table and flower container.

"We usually have preferred French with some early American in our home furnishings, but with a tour of duty in Seoul, Korean shops might contribute an interesting addition to our next home," says Mrs. Adams.

Normally the search for the unusual depends on personal taste, but this time Mrs. Adams plans a professional approach and has been investigating the quality of Korean accessories to make the search less hazardous and more productive.

Three years in Paris, admits Mrs. Adams, stopped all complaints about the Marine Corps. The children attended schools where several languages were not only an asset but a career. Melissa plans to major in French.

Each of the Adams children boasts a different place of birth and an increasing number of schools, but the Adamses find that travels tend to produce youngsters who make better adjustments to the world's challenges.

Living in a foreign country, not just sightseeing, produces the best understanding of people, according to the Adamses, and although the children occasionally resented a move, they have grown to feel fortunate for the opportunity.

Emerald green with peacock blue are the glistening colors used to heighten the white living room. The old French marquise, a product of the Flea Market in Paris, has four matching side chairs to form a conversational group around the English tilt-top table.

A blue and green print sofa faces a pair of velvet wing chairs between an unusual inlaid slate coffee table.

Drop leaf end tables and the old corner cabinet were part of the former Early American collection.

Choice pieces of French antiques such as the slender gueridon used as a corner plant stand, the marquetry lady's writing desk, and the plant table are the accents supplying the decorator touch to the Adams home.

The window-rimmed dining room looks out over fitted pots of begonias to the lush gardens.

San Francisco furnished the extension oval dining table so perfect with the cane back chairs.

Selected to add interest to the room were a Molly Pitcher table, spool chest and teacart while the elegance of the family silver vases with glass accessories for table-top accents.

The walls throughout the home reflect the appreciation of family, home, travels and friends. Mrs. Adams' mother is the accomplished artist responsible for many of the paintings hanging proudly throughout the home. She is an active, talented woman and a retrospective selection of her work reveals continuing development of style and technique.

Gen. and Mrs. Adams are graduates of the University of Minnesota.

"I may complain occasionally, but I never have been bored," says Mrs. Adams. "As a general's wife I am expected only to be a good wife, mother, hostess and occasionally quiet!"

The kitchen serves numerous functions, including bar service and informal dining along with the cooking. Newly renovated to separate the functions, the U-shaped cook center is a self-contained area where the stewards may perform their duties comfortably.

A small guest room and bath near the utility area can be a blessing when house guests arrive in quantities.

Sleeping rooms complete a wing of the luxurious quarters with the master bedroom and companion study spacious and comfortable.

A rare Victorian settee sits at the base of the poster bed. Etchings used for traditional Adams Christmas cards line the bedroom walls. Paris is well represented by Berne paintings of that lovely city.

Framing the study window seat are display shelves for books and collections of rarities such as the carved madonna from the Passion Play at Oberammergau. The generous size desk attests to the many at-home working hours demanded by the general's profession.

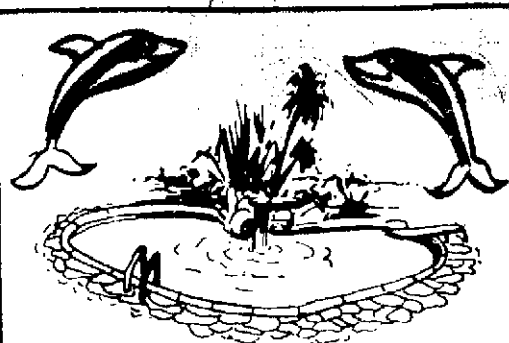

"We learn to innovate," says Mrs. Adams, "and the second guest room proved to be a test. With floral dust ruffles and a single drape to match from a previous home, the twin beds were easily utilized, but we were left in this particular room with two more windows."

The answer was to use the simple white cafe curtains on two windows and the colorful print drape on the bed wall.

Judy's favorite pink travels with her and bright pink curtains and bedspreads usually form the base for her private room where her collection of dolls and toys create the little-girl atmosphere.

The combination of French elegance and comfortable American interior design will be stored for the next six months while Gen. Adams will serve as military adviser at the Panmunjom peace talks.

After 33 years of sharing Marine Corps life, the Adamses will pack the necessary suitcases, the two girls will join their parents, and further adventures in education, collection and homemaking will be the female counterpart of the high-level military tour of duty.

The Green Thumb vs. the Green Giant

I KNEW this gray but happy editor in the smoky brick-and-asphalt jungle called St. Louis. He was gray because he was getting old, and he was happy because he was a farmer!

This gentleman, the most scholarly newspaperman I have known, lived in an ancient brick house in the slums. It had a small back yard with a brick wall. From March to October he never tarried after work for a friendly beer; he rushed home to save every minute of sunlight for his farm work.

In his little space he grew every edible vegetable—and grew it well. He knew all about his farm. The soil had been completely tested. The precisely right fertilizers were used. He studied the publications of the Department of Agriculture and of the agricultural colleges. He was quite a botanist, and he knew both the history and the natural history of his crops. He eventually wrote a respected book based on his experiences.

But he was, above all, a painstaking grower of food. He worked ground inch by inch, plant by plant. He made optimum use of his small land.

His reward was good health, a sun tan, a merry heart, a measure of wisdom—and the epicurean delight of garden-fresh food on the table.

Did he profit financially by doing this? Of course not. There is no way to justify growing your own when you consider the prices at the supermarket. Anyone who needs to moonlight should get a second job for wages.

Time was when the vegetable garden was an essential part of the American economy. Wages were low and produce was high. Refrigeration was costly and undependable. Lettuce in January and oranges in the Middle West were for the well-heeled when they could get them. Most peo-

The window-rimmed dining room looks out over fitted pots of begonias to the lush gardens.

San Francisco furnished the extension oval dining table so perfect with the cane back chairs.

Selected to add interest to the room were a Molly Pitcher table, spool chest and teacart while the elegance of the family silver vies with glass accessories for table-top accents.

The walls throughout the home reflect the appreciation of family, home, travels and friends. Mrs. Adams' mother is the accomplished artist responsible for many of the paintings hanging proudly throughout the home. She is an active, talented woman and a retrospective selection of her work reveals continuing development of style and technique.

Gen. and Mrs. Adams are graduates of the University of Minnesota.

"I may complain occasionally, but I never have been bored," says Mrs. Adams. "As a general's wife I am expected only to be a good wife, mother, hostess and occasionally quiet!"

The kitchen serves numerous functions, including bar service and informal dining along with the cooking. Newly renovated to separate the functions, the U-shaped cook center is a self-contained area where the stewards may perform their duties comfortably.

A small guest room and bath near the utility area can be a blessing when house guests arrive in quantities.

Sleeping rooms complete a wing of the luxurious quarters with the master bedroom and companion study spacious and comfortable.

A rare Victorian settee sits at the base of the poster bed. Etchings used for traditional Adams Christmas cards line the bedroom walls. Paris is well represented by Berea paintings of that lovely city.

Framing the study window seat are display shelves for books and collections of rarities such as the carved madonna from the Passion Play at Oberammergau. The generous size desk attests to the many at-home working hours demanded by the general's profession.

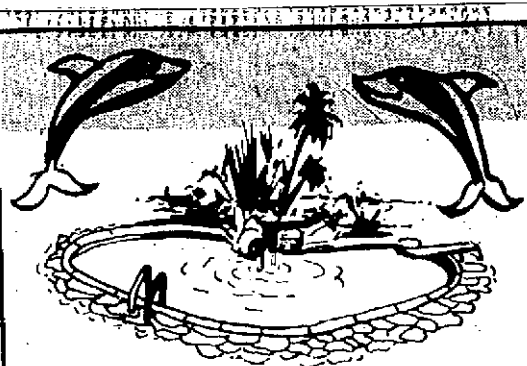

"We learn to innovate," says Mrs. Adams, "and the second guest room proved to be a test. With floral dust ruffles and a single drape to match from a previous home, the twin beds were easily utilized, but we were left in this particular room with two more windows."

The answer was to use the simple white cafe curtains on two windows and the colorful print drape on the bed wall.

Judy's favorite pink travels with her and bright pink curtains and bedspreads usually form the base for her private room where her collection of dolls and toys create the little-girl atmosphere.

The combination of French elegance and comfortable American interior design will be stored for the next six months while Gen. Adams will serve as military adviser at the Panmunjom peace talks.

After 33 years of sharing Marine Corps life, the Adamses will pack the necessary suitcases, the two girls will join their parents, and further adventures in education, collection and homemaking will be the female counterpart of the high-level military tour of duty.

The Green Thumb vs. the Green Giant

I KNEW this gray but happy editor in the smoky brick-and-asphalt jungle called St. Louis. He was gray because he was getting old, and he was happy because he was a farmer!

This gentleman, the most scholarly newspaperman I have known, lived in an ancient brick house in the slums. It had a small back yard with a brick wall. From March to October, he never tarried after work for a friendly beer; he rushed home to save every minute of sunlight for his farm work.

In his little space he grew every edible vegetable—and grew it well. He knew all about his farm. The soil had been completely tested. The precisely right fertilizers were used. He studied the publications of the Department of Agriculture and of the agricultural colleges. He was quite a botanist, and he knew both the history and the natural history of his crops. He eventually wrote a respected book based on his experiences.

But he was, above all, a painstaking grower of food. He worked ground inch by inch, plant by plant. He made optimum use of his small land.

His reward was good health, a sun-tan, a merry heart, a measure of wisdom—and the epicurean delight of garden-fresh food on the table.

Did he profit financially by doing this? Of course not. There is no way to justify growing your own when you consider the prices at the supermarket. Anyone who needs to moonlight should get a second job for wages.

Time was when the vegetable garden was an essential part of the American economy. Wages were low and produce was high. Refrigeration was costly and undependable. Lettuce in January and oranges in the Middle West were for the well-heeled when they could get them. Most peo-

Elegance for the Beach Party

Barbecue Duckling

By Mildred Flanary

Southland Magazine Home Economics Editor

THERE'S A shortcut to a picnic or beach party: Barbecue Duckling in Foil.

Served with corn on the cob (also roasted in foil on the grill) and a tomato, cucumber and lettuce salad, barbecued duckling quarters provide a touch of elegance for your picnic, beach party or outdoor event.

Frozen ducklings are available in the freezer cases of most supermarkets, and the butcher will quarter your ducklings in the store. Let them defrost overnight. Then you can prepare them in a jiffy, wrap in foil, ready for barbecuing. What's more, there are virtually no dripings remaining when you open the foil package.

THE BARBECUE

- 1 frozen duck (4½ to 5 lbs.) defrosted and quartered
- 1 tblspn. poultry seasoning
- 1 tblspn. paprika
- 1 tsp. salt

Wash, drain and dry duckling quarters. Mix poultry seasoning, paprika and salt thoroughly and sprinkle on duckling quarters.

Place each duckling quarter on an 18-inch sheet of heavy duty aluminum foil. Fold the aluminum foil over the duckling quarter and fold in the sides and the end to form a seal.

Place wrapped duckling quarters on grill over moderate to hot coals about 6 inches above the fire. Turn with heavy gloves or barbecue tongs every 20 minutes for 2 hours and 20 minutes.

Remove wrapped duckling quarters from grill and allow to cool for 10 minutes. This method prevents the duckling quarters from sticking to the foil and also allows the aluminum foil to cool sufficiently so that the quarters can be unwrapped easily.

For extra crispness, remove the foil and put the duckling quarters on the grill for an additional 20 minutes. Yield: 4 pieces, 2 to 4 servings.

Make a meringue of egg whites, cream of tartar and sugar. Spread on custard and sprinkle with remainder of peanut butter mixture. Bake in 350 degree preheated oven for a few minutes or until meringue is browned.

"SOMETHING LIVING" takes the static house and makes it a warm and welcoming home. People account for a portion of the living touch, but other moving accents could be animals or plants.

One day I intend to research the animal accessory with the idea of selecting a pet . . . not to suit the fashion . . . but your home and your personality.

But this day I devote my study to the flowering abode.

Fresh flowers have no competition when it comes to that final touch, and they, too, should suit your home and personality, which always brings a pointed comment about plastic flowers and plastic personalities.

For ideas, expert advice and some musings on care and feeding of flowers, I sought Long Beach flower femme Claire Conway.

Twenty-five years surrounded by flowers and their problem owners has given Miss Conway a fine background in the unusual but never unreal approach to flowers as decorative accents.

Miss Conway gives her brother, Greg, a well known author of books on flower arranging, the credit for her success.

According to Miss Conway, he developed the simplicity of line so welcome in the "bunch-of-flowers-with-net-and-bows" days. The emphasis is always on simplicity, and it is too bad the professionally arranged flowers occasionally make a house look like a shop, so says Miss Conway.

Her advice includes:

Flowers should look as though the hostess did the arranging.

Color is more important than profusion.

Oriental arrangements with mass foliage are best in simple, contemporary surroundings.

Brilliant colors, with the flowers loosely arranged, never styled, are fine for the Mediterranean home.

Flower care is a must. Don't just assume the florist takes care of them forever. The care should include daily water change and slight stem clipping.

A few tablespoons of Purex or Clorox in the water will help keep it pure.

Stocks do not make good house flowers. As the saying goes: "Like fish, they begin to smell after a day."

About vases or lack of them:

You should bring your own vases since they usually are part of the home.

If you are purchasing flowers for a friend, select the vase as carefully as the flowers since it accounts for half of the effect.

Containers should be collected for space, place and purpose.

Stoneware is an ideal container since its texture provides a natural foil for flowers and is suitable for most decors.

Crystal isn't the best choice since it is limited to more formal homes and arrangements and also the stems show in an unattractive manner.

Silver falls in the same formal category.

Baskets are inexpensive and fine containers. A papier-mache filler will hold water and flowers so they won't show stems and, as you know, the selection is endless and inexpensive. Baskets are especially natural for look-like-home appearance.

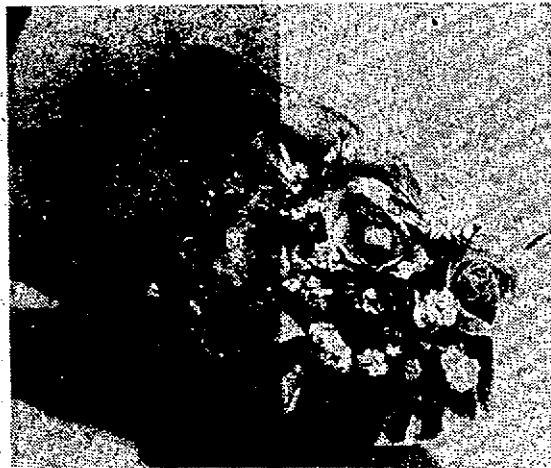

The vase should be pretty when it's empty—that's the clue.

Bedside arrangements should be smaller than small and at Claire Conway's Flowers, Limoges pill-size boxes frequently are filled with miniature roses or forget-me-nots.

Single flowers in sake bottles are next in the preference line. The point of

Tiny flower arrangement is right for big occasion.

A basket full of annuals is a perennial favorite in the casual home.

Flower-filled compote is exactly the right height for a buffet.

Touch

this is consideration for the sick-room staff as well as the prevention of a gangster's funeral appearance.

This same idea may be extended to the home. Those little tables may be enhanced by goblets of flowers rather than bowls.

For a sit down dinner, the low arrangement of flowers that blend with the dishes as well as decor is best. But the buffet demands a tall, more slender arrangement or it may look like the salad course.

Value-wise, mums or the daisy family would be the best, long-lasting flowers. Roses, with the exception of garnets, last the shortest period, so they can only be called romantic rather than reasonable.

On the subject of roses ... you may bleed a little ... but Miss Conway suggests you cut the long stems to give an irregular appearance rather than stuffing them straight up into a milk bottle which usually is the only container we who only get long-stemmed roses once a year have.

Miss Conway compares too set, untouchable arrangements to backcombing hair. It looks great when the professional does it, but the next day ... don't try to change it.

It is possible and attractive to mix the natural fakes, paper and straw, with real flowers to gain an excellent effect.

Your eye is the best guide to proportion. The flowers should be loosely massed with some foliage for texture change. The old rule: flowers should be one and a half times the container size, isn't exactly true today. Sometimes taller arrangements in shallow bowls can give a graceful, airy expression.

The answer appears to be: "If the arrangement looks good to you, it is right!"

The innards of the flower container ... like underwear ... never should show. Foliage can be used to cover the holder if it is showing.

Flowers can catch cold, too, so keep them out of drafts. They should be cared for with love ... they deserve it.

Shoot Fireworks With Camera

"AND THE ROCKETS" red glare, the bombs bursting in air ...

You may not be able to sing "The Star-Spangled Banner" on key, but can capture — on film — the fireworks that traditionally symbolize the patriotism of Americans on the Fourth of July.

And, as most fireworks displays are now held in conjunction with other activities, you may be able to pick up some night baseball pictures or shots of glittering amusement park lights, too.

An easily accomplished time exposure, without flash, will record fireworks on film for you. You will need a camera with a "T," "B," or "T" setting and a tripod or other firm support to keep your camera steady throughout a long time exposure. To prevent the possibility of camera movement when you close the shutter, an inexpensive cable release can be attached which will allow you to push the button without touching the camera.

As the first flashes appear, squeeze the shutter or cable release to open the shutter. It might be wise to check the viewfinder of your camera to make sure that your camera is aimed accurately. After two or three bursts, close the shutter and advance your film for the next shot.

After you have captured several interesting fireworks displays, try photographing ground area where the fireworks are being lit. For this shot, set camera at f 8 and 1/30 second. The bright fireworks will silhouette people and equipment for an interesting ground picture.

Daughters WERE Revolutionary

THE DAR. By Margaret Gibbs. Holt, Rinehart and Winston, $5.95.

It comes under the heading of "Believe It or Not," but can you imagine that the Daughters of the Revolution once was a progressive organization. It's true—at the turn of the century, the DAR was fervently pacifistic, and even came up with a program of antiwar education for the elementary schools. As recently as 1916, it considered such matters as regulated women's working hours, universal marriage and divorce laws, federal control of child labor, among other liberal stands.

Adlai Stevenson's mother became the DAR's second president general in 1893. In 1962, Adlai's sister quit the DAR, because the organization's policies had become so out of tune with the national policies. True to latter-day form, the DAR in 1963 condemned the U.N.

Margaret Gibbs writes a sprightly history of the organization which regressed from condemning social injustices to barring Marian Anderson and Hazel Scott from its hall in Washington, attacking John Hersey's "Hiroshima" as "pacifist indoctrination for world government," and committing other such foolish actions.

And Try Not to Miss...

THE SEARCH FOR THE PERFECT SWING. By Alastair Cochran and John Stobbs. Lippincott, $10.

This is a unique book on golfing -- a scientific study and an instructional handbook at the same time. The Golf Society of Great Britain commissioned a British scientific team to analyze golf scientifically and apply the findings to the golfer's practical problems. Alastair Cochran, chairman of the scientific party, and British golf writer John Stobbs report on their study and answer many questions that have to do with the perfect swing.

FACES OF THE LAND. Text by F. Thomas Heehey. The Farm Quarterly.

Here is farming, in page after page of stunning photographs, as it has been and is in our time, as it is seen in the faces of the people of the land -- the men, and the women, and kids.

"The farmer's face reflects the nature of his enterprise and also the change that is taking place in agriculture," says Grant G. Cannon in the introduction to this beautiful volume. "The new farmer looks like a man who believes that farming is a business. But there's something else in his face that reminds you of his grandfather -- farming is a business all right, but he chose farming of all other businesses because he loved the land and working with living things."

Here then, are the farming folk, and the living things they love.

AMERICAN COOKING. By Dale Brown and the Editors of Time-Life Books. Time-Life Books, $6.95.

Another beautifully made -- and mouth-watering -- volume in the "Foods of the World" Library. This panoramic view of American cooking (cookery, as the authors say, on the way to becoming a cuisine) takes us back to the Indians and the English settlers, through all the immigrant influences on American cooking -- German, Italian, Czech and others -- to today's sophisticated cooking in this country.

Some of the recipes that go with the book had never existed in writing. The recipes reflect the wide diversity of American food. The book is beautifully illustrated (95 pages of it color).

MY ENEMY, MY BROTHER. By James Forman. Meredith, $4.95.

When the gates of a Nazi concentration camp swing open at war's end for a Polish Jew whose family perished in the sewers of Warsaw, three young people urge him to join their trek across Europe to a Palestine kibbutz, and change his life.

Heartland News

WEEKLY ON THE WABASH. Roy Wheeler McMillen. Southern Illinois University Press, $5.95.

Despite the ever mounting urbanization of the United States, most of our legislators in Federal and State law-creating establishment are from what are often euphemistically called "cow counties."

The weekly newspapers in these counties wield a far greater influence than their circulation figures would suggest. This is because they attain a reader-loyalty and involvement large city dailies can't hope to match. The ownership of these weeklies is generally of longer sustained periods than is the record of American daily newspapers. There hasn't been anywhere near the turnover or consolidations in the weekly field as we have seen in the daily field.

THE DEATH COMMITTEE. By Noah Gordon. McGraw-Hill, $6.95.

Step aside, Ben Casey, for three free-wheeling, but believable, young doctors on the house staff of a big Boston hospital where transplant surgery is the specialty. It's also the catalyst of the death committee -- surgeons who meet weekly to review fatalities, decide which were preventable, fix responsibility and pass judgment.

Under the wing of Harland Longwood, aging chief of surgery who hopes to complete, before dying, his book on surgical techniques, are:

Spurgeon Robinson, Negro intern who assumes a strong obligation to the ghetto; Adam Silverstone, up from poverty to the chief residency by way of a morgue job and despite an alcoholic father; and Rafael Meomartino, fellow in surgery whose wealthy family fled Castro Cuba and whose career is almost compromised by his promiscuous wife, niece of Dr. Longwood.

It's a colorful, spicy yarn, with hectic infighting for position and advancement, within the bounds of hospital protocol; with romance and sex, starring the virile Silverstone; and some tense, losing battles to save the lives of transplant recipients.

Author Gordon, whose first novel, "The Rabbi," was a best seller, did his medical homework well and the technical sequences are impressive and readable.

You wonder how, with all the distractions in and out of the hospital, the young docs can concentrate on saving lives, but in this novel they do their best.—Morry Rabin.

Bizarre Thriller

THE CAMELOT CAPER. By Elizabeth Peters. Meredith, $4.95.

Mystery stars the archeologist in the face each time the excavators' tools open up another remnant of the distant past. Often the archeologist presides at the birth of weird legend -- as was the case with King Tut's tomb and its supposed curse, in the 1920s.

In "The Camelot Capar" an archeologist -- and a lady one at that -- uses the knowledge born of her profession's confrontation with the bizarre to write a rare thriller. Elizabeth Peters' novel concerns an American girl in England eluding a menacing pursuer and winning the help of an English writer of suspense novels.

As befits a true archeologist, author Peters takes pursuer and pursued in and out of strange Stonehenge, and ancient castles, ageless cathedrals -- and pubs. —N.H.

Shoot Fireworks With Camera

this is consideration for the sick-room staff as well as the prevention of a gangster's funeral appearance.

This same idea may be extended to the home. Those little tables may be enhanced by goblets of flowers rather than bowls.

For a sit-down dinner, the low arrangement of flowers that blend with the dishes as well as decor is best. But the buffet demands a tall, more slender arrangement or it may look like the salad course.

Value-wise, mums or the daisy family would be the best, long-lasting flowers. Roses, with the exception of garnets, last the shortest period, so they can only be called romantic rather than reasonable.

On the subject of roses... you may bleed a little... but Miss Conway suggests you cut the long stems to give an irregular appearance rather than stuffing them straight up into a milk bottle which usually is the only container we—who-only-get-long-stemmed-roses-once-a-year have.

Miss Conway compares too set, untouchable arrangements to backcombing hair. It looks great when the professional does it, but the next day... don't try to change it.

It is possible and attractive to mix the natural fakes, paper and straw, with real flowers to gain an exciting effect.

Your eye is the best guide to proportion. The flowers should be loosely massed with some foliage for texture change. The old rule: flowers should be one and a half times the container size, isn't exactly true today. Sometimes taller arrangements in shallow bowls can give a graceful, airy expression.

The answer appears to be: "If the arrangement looks good to you, it is right!"

The innards of the flower container... like underwear... never should show. Foliage can be used to cover the holder if it is showing.

Flowers can catch cold, too, so keep them out of drafts. They should be cared for with love... they deserve it.

"AND THE ROCKETS" red glare, the bombs bursting in air...

You may not be able to sing "The Star-Spangled Banner" on key, but can capture — on film — the fireworks that traditionally symbolize the patriotism of Americans on the Fourth of July.

And, as most fireworks displays are now held in conjunction with other activities, you may be able to pick up some night baseball pictures or shots of glittering amusement parks, too.

An easily accomplished time exposure, without flash, will record fireworks on film for you. You will need a camera with a "T," "B," or "L" setting and a tripod or other firm support to keep your camera steady throughout a long time exposure. To prevent the possibility of camera movement when you close the shutter, an inexpensive cable release can be attached which will allow you to push the button without touching the camera.

As the first flashes appear, squeeze the shutter or cable release to open the shutter. It might be wise to check the viewfinder of your camera to make sure that your camera is aimed accurately. After two or three bursts, close the shutter and advance your film for the next shot.

After you have captured several interesting fireworks displays, try photographing ground area where the fireworks are being lit. For this shot, set camera at f/8 and 1/30 second. The bright fireworks will silhouette people and equipment for an interesting ground picture.

If the display is at an

Daughters WERE Revolutionary

THE DAR. By Margaret Gibbs. Holt, Rinehart and Winston, $5.95.

It comes under the heading of "Believe It or Not," but can you imagine that the Daughters of the Revolution once was a progressive organization. It's true—at the turn of the century, the DAR was fervidly pacifistic, and even came up with a program of antiwar education for the elementary schools. As recently as 1916, it considered such matters as regulated women's working hours, universal marriage and divorce laws, federal control of child labor, among other liberal stands.

Adlai Stevenson's mother became the DAR's second president general in 1893. In 1962, Adlai's sister quit the DAR, because the organization's policies had become so out of tune with the national policies. True to latter-day form, the DAR in 1963 condemned the U.N.

Margaret Gibbs writes a sprightly history of the organization which regressed from condemning social injustices to barring Marian Anderson and Hazel Scott from its hall in Washington, attacking John Hersey's "Hiroshima" as "pacifist indoctrination for world government" and committing other such foolish actions.

Heartland News

WEEKLY ON THE WABASH. Roy Wheeler McMillen. Southern Illinois University Press, $5.95.

Despite the ever mounting urbanization of the United States, most of our legislators in Federal and State law-creating establishment are from what are often euphemistically called "cow counties."

The weekly newspapers in these counties wield a far greater influence than their circulation figures would suggest. This is because they attain a reader-loyalty and involvement large city dailies can't hope to match. The ownership of these weeklies is generally of longer sustained periods than is the record of American daily newspapers. There hasn't been anywhere near the turnover or consolidations in the weekly field as we have seen in the daily field.

"Weekly on the Wabash" is such a county publication. It is a journalistic reflection of Main Street America, up-to-date from where Sinclair Lewis left off. It is a down-to-earth portrayal of the heartland citizens of this country, who develop solid opinions slowly and don't come by change easily. Even now, generation gaps are not chasm-like there where the offspring stayed home.

For those who were born, and bred in the larger United States cities, "Weekly on the Wabash" will show you an America you may have vaguely suspected, but which you may not have had in sharp focus.—Samuel Whitman.

THE SEARCH FOR THE PERFECT SWING. By Alastair Cochran and John Stobbs. Lippincott, $10.

This is a unique book on golfing — a scientific study and an instructional handbook at the same time. The Golf Society of Great Britain commissioned a British scientific team to analyze golf scientifically and apply the findings to the golfer's practical problems. Alastair Cochran, chairman of the scientific party, and British golf writer John Stobbs report on their study and answer many questions that have to do with the perfect swing.

FACES OF THE LAND. Text by F. Thomas Huey. The Farm Quarterly.

Here is farming, in page after page of stunning photographs, as it has been and is in our time, as it is seen in the faces of the people of the land — the men, and the women, and kids.

"The farmer's face reflects the nature of his enterprise and also the change that is taking place in agriculture," says Grant G. Cannon in the introduction to this beautiful volume. "The new farmer looks like a man who believes that farming is a business. But there's something else in his face that reminds you of his grandfather — farming is a business all right, but he chose farming of all other businesses because he loved the land and working with living things."

Here then, are the farming folk, and the living things they love.

AMERICAN COOKING. By Dale Brown and the Editors of Time-Life Books. Time-Life Books, $6.95.

Another beautifully made — and mouth-watering — volume in the "Foods of the World" Library. This panoramic view of American cooking (cookery, as the authors say, on the way to becoming a cuisine) takes us back to the Indians and the English settlers, through all the immigrant influences on American cooking — German, Italian, Czech and others — to today's sophisticated cooking in this country.

Some of the recipes that go with the book had never existed in writing. The recipes reflect the wide diversity of American food. The book is beautifully illustrated (95 pages of it color).

MY ENEMY, MY BROTHER. By James Forman. Meredith, $4.95.

When the gates of a Nazi concentration camp swing open at war's end for a Polish Jew whose family perished in the sewers of Warsaw, three young people urge him to join their trek across Europe to a Palestine kibbutz, and change his life.

Sportsman's Display Rack

By Steve Ellingson

WHEN you talk about tools of a man's trade or the equipment of his favorite sport, you're talking about something that's pretty close to his heart. Consequently, most men not only want to take good care of these items, but they also want to take good care of them stylishly.

The wall display cabinet shown here with Carl Reindel of MGM's new movie "Gypsy Moth" is the kind of an item that makes a room look more hospitable. The reason ... it exhibits evidence of one's personal interests and energies.

As you can see, the shelf makes an ideal display for your guns as well as rods and reels. If you have more guns or rods than are pictured it's an easy matter to extend the racks to accommodate as many as you need. If your sport is archery, here's just the place to keep your bows and arrows. You may also use the cabinet for cameras, ammunition, gun cleaning gear, skates, boots, helmets, baseballs and gloves, hunting knives and fishing tackle of all kinds. It's a functional and decorative design that may be adapted to almost anything that keeps your interest, with space left over for your wife to use too.

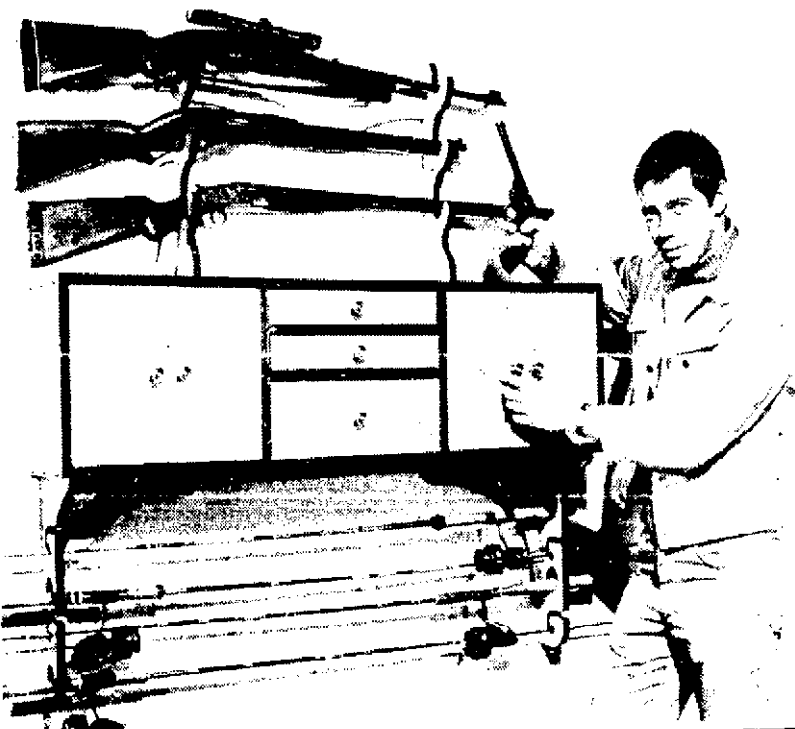

Any amateur can build this sportsman's wall center when he uses the full-size pattern. You need only trace the pattern parts on wood, then saw them out and finally put the parts together. The pattern lists the needed materials along with easy-to-understand directions and illustrations showing the various stages of construction.

To obtain the full-size sportsman's wall center pattern number 467, send $1 (add 25 cents per pattern for airmail delivery) by currency, check or money order to:

A Boy, a Falcon and a Film

By Lorraine Gauguin

IT WAS KIND of weird sitting in the publicity office at Paramount Studio doing an interview with a child star, 13-year-old Ted Eccles, and his co-star in "My Side of the Mountain,"

Young Eccles with Venus, his co-star in movie.

a 3-year-old falcon named Venus. Ted did his own talking, with occasional asides from his grandfather J. K. Ridgeway. The falcon's trainer, Morley Nelson, did the talking for the bird, which sat quietly on his arm wearing a leather hood over its eyes.

I had just seen the film, produced by Robert Radnitz, a man who has won many honors for making children's films ("A Dog of Flanders," "Misty," "Island of the Blue Dolphins" and "And Now Miguel"), and had been dazzled by the scenery of the Canadian wilderness and the fascinating story based on the prize-winning novel by Jean George. This is a film that will captivate adults as well as children. It is amazing how nauseating some of Disney's films can be, although I know it is heresy to say so. The night before, I had previewed "Rascal" and absolutely detested the raccoon in the picture — yet, the following night I was entranced by the raccoon in "My Side of the Mountain," only proving that even animal actors must have a good story, plus expert direction. There's also an arctic owl, which is so stunning it will make the White Owl Girl on TV give up nicotine.

Ted is a handsome young boy who has appeared in more than 50 television shows and 10 major motion pictures. Since completing this film he starred in a "Lassie" show and Nelson says he has a natural ability to work with wild things. It isn't easy working with a falcon and it usually takes three years to train the falconer and only three weeks to train the bird. Ted was given a crash course and Nelson's 14-year-old son, Tyler, taught Ted in a week.

"I felt that since they were the same age it would be easier for one kid to teach the other," explained Nelson. "The first thing you have to do is slow down all of your movements. This is called 'manning the falcon' and builds up the trust between the man and the bird. My son Tyler has been working with wild birds all of his life. He's flown golden eagles in a Walt Disney film."

Over half the world's eagles, according to one angry estimation, are destroyed every year. The peregrine falcon, which Venus portrays in the film, is already extinct in the East and is found in only certain sections of the country today. They have been destroyed by DDT and other poisons. It is illegal now to capture eagles — they have been protected by an act of Congress. This still does not prevent eagles from being shot by careless hunters.

"I own some eagles only because they were brought to me wounded," said Nelson. "They were found wandering in the woods and would have died if I had not saved them. They would have starved to death. They are still so fragile that I cannot turn them loose and they will remain at my ranch in Boise, Idaho."

Morley Nelson suddenly awoke to the magnificence and scarcity of falcons, eagles and hawks when he was working as an irrigation and snow surveyor for the State of Idaho. He began a worldwide hunt for specimens to breed and train back home in Boise. After some hazardous expeditions to Africa and the Arctic, he took the job of "banding" eagles for the Federal Fish and Wild Bird Service. Nelson's stud of falcons and eagles — 13 at the moment — have appeared in such notable nature films as Disney's "The Vanishing Prairie" and "The Living Desert."

Nelson believes it is ignorance more than anything that is causing the extinction of our birds of prey. "We don't consider them dangerous," he said, removing Venus' hood and allowing her to spread her golden wings and flap about the room. "They are extremely intelligent and obey commands. We just returned from a 15-day personal appearance tour through Omaha, Denver, St. Louis and Dallas. When I'm alone in the hotel room with Venus she climbs on the bed and walks all over the furniture. She is a pet."

Nelson captured Venus by special permit in the Idaho Mountains, near the Snake River. The falcon is now a rare bird and was called by the uninitiated a "chicken hawk" and usually shot on sight. The early settlers, moving West, did a pretty good job of destroying the noble bird, and now pesticides are finishing the job.

"I feel deeply about this," said Nelson. "I hope this picture teaches people it's not sport just going out and shooting something. That's our major message. They are killed by the poison in our environment. Say a field mouse eats some grain with DDT in it — it's not enough to kill the mouse. But say the falcon eats 15 mice — he dies."

"Few people realize that falcons are indicators of our environment that is becoming saturated with chemicals detrimonial to everyone's well being. The concentrated poison in the dead animals' bodies, that they have picked up from pesticides and other chemicals, kills the falcon."

In addition to falcons being poisoned by the prey they eat, many are killed by hunters. It has presented a problem for falconers, because today there are not enough birds to go around.

"There are laws preventing their capture and we cannot supply the falcons with birds bred in captivity, although we are now breeding them and it is proving successful. The public must realize that falcons have a very special place in nature. They are rare birds and for them to survive it's going to take a lot of appreciation and understanding on the part of the public," Nelson said.

I asked if Venus was a peregrine falcon and he shook his head. "That's the only thing I think we did wrong in the picture. Venus is a hawk. A falcon is technically a rare species of hawk. They are diurnal birds of prey."

Evidently they were unable to obtain a peregrine falcon, and Venus played the role of "Frightful," the falcon Ted raises from a baby in the film. The story is about a 13-year-old boy who runs away from his city home to a forest wilderness and in the course of his adventures trains the falcon to hunt for him.

Ted became so fascinated by his true-life adventures while making the picture in the province of Quebec it is possible that he will go into some kind of conservation work when he finishes college. He now attends John Burroughs Junior High School in Los Angeles, and so far has been able to keep up with his class.

Sportsman's Display Rack

By Steve Ellingson

WHEN you talk about tools of a man's trade or the equipment of his favorite sport, you're talking about something that's pretty close to his heart. Consequently, most men not only want to take good care of these items, but they also want to take good care of them stylishly.

The wall display cabinet shown here with Carl Reindel of MGM's new movie "Gypsy Moth" is the kind of an item that makes a room look more hospitable. The reason... It exhibits evidence of one's personal interests and energies.

As you can see, the shelf makes an ideal display for your guns as well as rods and reels. If you have more guns or rods than are pictured it's an easy matter to extend the racks to accommodate as many as you need. If your sport is archery, here's just the place to keep your bows and arrows. You may also use the cabinet for cameras, ammunition, gun cleaning gear, skates, boots, helmets, baseballs and gloves, hunting knives and fishing tackle of all kinds. It's a functional and decorative design that may be adapted to almost anything that keeps your interest, with space left over for your wife to use too.

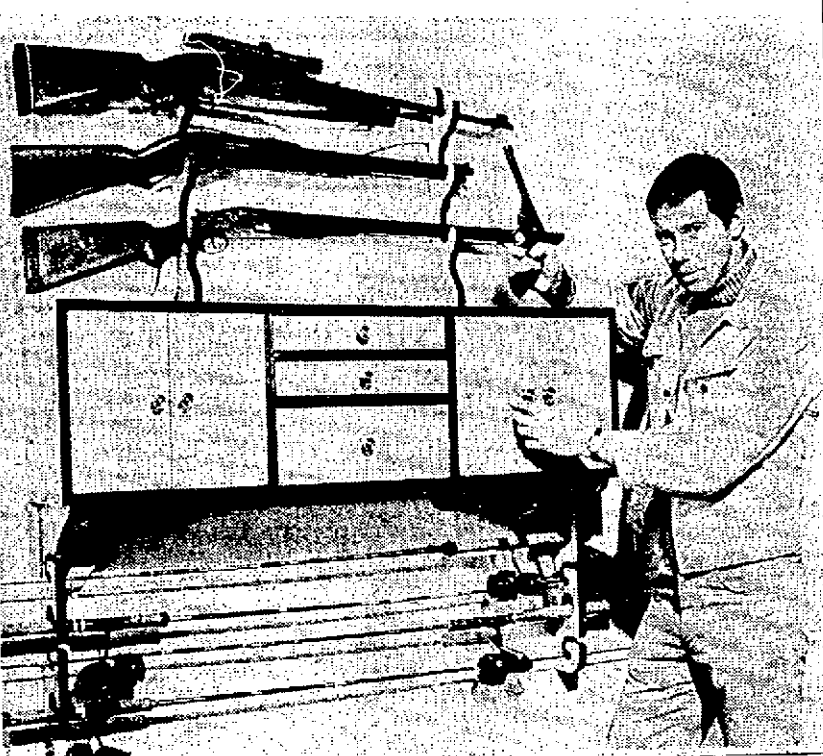

Any amateur can build this sportsman's wall center when he uses the full-size pattern. You need only trace the pattern parts on wood, then saw them out and finally put the parts together. The pattern lists the needed materials along with easy-to-understand directions and illustrations showing the various stages of construction.

To obtain the full-size sportsman's wall center pattern number 467, send $1 (add 25 cents per pattern for airmail delivery) by currency, check or money order to:

A Boy, a Falcon and a Film

By Lorraine Gauguin

IT WAS KIND of weird sitting in the publicity office at Paramount Studio doing an interview with a child star, 13-year-old Ted Eccles, and his co-star in "My Side of the Mountain,"

Young Eccles with Venus, his co-star in movie.

a 3-year-old falcon named Venus. Ted did his own talking, with occasional asides from his grandfather, J. K. Ridgeway. The falcon's trainer, Morley Nelson, did the talking for the bird, which sat quietly on his arm wearing a leather hood over its eyes.

I had just seen the film, produced by Robert Radnitz, a man who has won many honors for making children's films ("A Dog of Flanders," "Misty," "Island of the Blue Dolphins" and "And Now Miguel"), and had been dazzled by the scenery of the Canadian wilderness and the fascinating story based on the prize-winning novel by Jean George. This is a film that will captivate adults as well as children. It is amazing how nauseating some of Disney's films can be, although I know it is heresy to say so. The night before, I had previewed "Rascal" and absolutely detested the raccoon in the picture — yet, the following night I was entranced by the raccoon in "My Side of the Mountain," only proving that even animal actors must have a good story, plus expert direction. There's also an arctic owl, which is so stunning it will make the White Owl Girl on TV give up nicotine.

Ted is a handsome young boy who has appeared in more than 50 television shows and 10 major motion pictures. Since completing this film he starred in a "Lassie" show and Nelson says he has a natural ability to work with wild things. It isn't easy working with a falcon and it usually takes three years to train the falconer and only three weeks to train the bird. Ted was given a crash course and Nelson's 14-year-old son, Tyler, taught Ted in a week.

"I felt that since they were the same age it would be easier for one kid to teach the other," explained Nelson. "The first thing you have to do is slow down all of your movements. This is called 'manning the falcon' and builds up the trust between the man and the bird. My son Tyler has been working with wild birds all of his life. He's flown golden eagles in a Walt Disney film."

Over half the world's eagles, according to one angry estimation, are destroyed every year. The peregrine falcon, which Venus portrays in the film, is already extinct in the East and is found in only certain sections of the country today. They have been destroyed by DDT and other poisons. It is illegal now to capture eagles — they have been protected by an act of Congress. This still does not prevent eagles from being shot by careless hunters.

"I own some eagles only because they were brought to me wounded," said Nelson. "They were found wandering in the woods and would have died if I had not saved them. They would have starved to death. They are still so fragile that I cannot turn them loose and they will remain at my ranch in Boise, Idaho."

Morley Nelson suddenly awoke to the magnificence and scarcity of falcons, eagles and hawks when he was working as an irrigation and snow surveyor for the State of Idaho. He began a worldwide hunt for specimens to breed and train back home in Boise. After some hazardous expeditions to Africa and the Arctic, he took the job of "banding" eagles for the Federal Fish and Wild Bird Service. Nelson's stud of falcons and eagles — 13 at the moment — have appeared in such notable nature films as Disney's "The Vanishing Prairie" and "The Living Desert."

Nelson believes it is ignorance more than anything that is causing the extinction of our birds of prey. "We don't consider them dangerous," he said, removing Venus' hood and allowing her to spread her golden wings and flap about the room. "They are extremely intelligent and obey commands. We just returned from a 15-day personal appearance tour through Omaha, Davenport, St. Louis and Dallas. When I'm alone in the hotel room with Venus she climbs on the bed and walks all over the furniture. She is a pet."

Nelson captured Venus by special permit in the Idaho Mountains, near the Snake River. The falcon is now a rare bird and was called by the uninitiated a "chicken hawk" and usually shot on sight. The early settlers, moving West, did a pretty good job of destroying the noble bird, and now pesticides are finishing the job.

"I feel deeply about this," said Nelson. "I hope this picture teaches people it's not sport just going out and shooting something. That's our major message. They are killed by the poison in our environment. Say a field mouse eats some grain with DDT in it — it's not enough to kill the mouse. But say the falcon eats 15 mice — he dies."

"Few people realize that falcons are indicators of our environment that is becoming saturated with chemicals detrimonial to everyone's well-being. The concentrated poison in the dead animals' bodies, that they have picked up from pesticides and other chemicals, kills the falcon."

In addition to falcons being poisoned by the prey they eat, many are killed by hunters. It has presented a problem for falconers, because today there are not enough birds to go around.

"There are laws preventing their capture and we cannot supply the falconers with birds bred in captivity, although we are now breeding them and it is proving successful. The public must realize that falcons have a very special place in nature. They are rare birds and for them to survive it's going to take a lot of appreciation and understanding on the part of the public," Nelson said.

I asked if Venus was a peregrine falcon and he shook his head. "That's the only thing I think we did wrong in the picture. Venus is a hawk. A falcon is technically a rare species of hawk. They are diurnal birds of prey."

Evidently they were unable to obtain a peregrine falcon, and Venus played the role of "Frightful," the falcon Ted raises from a baby in the film. The story is about a 13-year-old boy who runs away from his city home to a forest wilderness and in the course of his adventures trains the falcon to hunt for him.

Ted became so fascinated by his true-life adventures while making the picture in the province of Quebec it is possible that he will go into some kind of conservation work when he finishes college. He now attends John Burroughs Junior High School in Los Angeles, and so far has been able to keep up with his class.

His father just opened The Miracle Steak House, a restaurant on Wilshire Boulevard. His older sister and younger brother are also actors; they all began at age 2 when their mother registered them with an agent.

"I don't think I will continue acting," said Ted. "I enjoy it now but it's an awful rat race when you are older. I don't know if I could act like that — If I didn't work I wouldn't eat. I want to go to college and that takes four years. I'm interested in law and I'm interested in nature and becoming a naturalist. It's been a refreshing experience for me." # Cats Lose Their Cool

By Eleanor Avery Price

IN WARM weather your cat may grow languid, become fussy about his food, seem a bit uncertain in temperament; in other words, just not seem comfortable.

The kitty needs a cool place in which to sleep. This does not mean a spot with an air conditioner blowing directly on him.

Don't worry too much if his appetite slacks off. And don't force food down him. You can tempt him with suitable aromatic additives such as a bit of bacon grease, butter, fish, or whatever.

Keep plenty of fresh water available for him to drink, but not iced water, iced foods, iced drinks.

Keep the kitty's ears clean. You can wipe them out now and then with a soft cloth dipped in sweet oil such as mineral oil. If his ears bother him a great deal, he may have cankers which seem to thrive in warm weather, especially if there is dirt present. A veterinarian can clear it up much easier if caught at the onset than if you wait hoping the condition will take care of itself.

A pussy accustomed to being carried in a purse can be taken on excursions, not left in a car.

If you plan a vacation, your activity will arouse the cat's suspicion. He may hide and spoil things for you. Try to keep the hustle and bustle to a minimum. If you plan to take him with you, and many cats travel very well, get him accustomed to a container, for the cage will be his home for a good part of the time. It might be a good idea to get him to stay also in a bag of some sort, too, so you can carry him around on excursions rather than leave him in a broiling car under the sun.

On vacations, the cat should wear identification, the best being the address of your veterinarian unless someone is occupying your home while you are away. Numerous dogs are being tattooed, but I can't say the same for felines.

The cat that will suffer the most this summer is the unwanted stray, a pitiful animal guilty only of being born, possibly not many weeks ago. About 90 per cent of all cats are dropped at the side of a road to panic and be tortured by thirst and hunger, are passed over to animal experimental laboratories, or are "put to sleep."

The adorable kitten grows fast and can reproduce when it is age five or six months. Please don't procrastinate about having the pet neutered. It will then be cleaner in habit, sweeter, quieter, and much more satisfactory as a pet. (There will be a rare male now and then who, if not altered when young, will continue to be aggressive, but this is the exception, not the rule.)

Pet Harbor Humane Education League can be reached by calling DA 4-2325. Or phone Irene Donald, TO 7-0235. These two, plus a few others, will try to assist you in the cost of having the cat find a place that was completely desolate. He had scouted Canada for three months before discovering the village of Knowlton, about 200 miles from Montreal. "It was ideal for the setting of the film and I knew immediately I had found the right place."

Also in the cast is talented actor-singer Theodore Bikel who plays Bando, an itinerant folk singer who becomes friends with the runaway boy. He teaches Sam (Ted Eccles) how to make clay pots from river mud and syrup from the bark of the birch tree. It is when fall approaches and Bando leaves Sam that the boy struggles against the terrible loneliness of the mountain wilderness. A passing hunter shoots Sam's peregrine falcon and it is by Frightful's death that the youngster's solidarity primeval utopia has turned into a melancholy snow-covered world and he knows he must return home.

It was a warm day and Ted was tired, but Venus, the hawk, was wide awake. She flapped her wings and reminded me of a parrot I once had. I asked Nelson how long the bird would live.

"She should live to be about 20 or 30 years old — if she doesn't get shot. These birds have a long life expectancy. However, Los Angeles isn't such a great place for her to be in, either. They catch pigeons' disease, get fungus in their air sacs, and avian T.B. The smog is terrible. Falcons have trouble with their birds in Los Angeles. It's full of catching diseases." He put Venus' hood on again over her eyes and walked out into the polluted air. I was tempted to ask if he had an extra hood. I envied Venus, bound for the clean fresh air of Boise.

A BOY, A FALCON AND A FILM

had been giving too many interviews, and I said: "As soon as you said 'It's been a refreshing experience' I knew you heard that somewhere. It just doesn't sound like a 13-year-old."

Ted laughed, "I guess I've been 'on' too long."

"That's what I mean," said his grandfather. "I wouldn't encourage the boy to make a career of acting. I think he can find something more helpful to humanity. I like the message that the picture teaches. It reminds me of the days when I was growing up. People lived off the land then. We learned to make all kinds of things — we went hunting for food, but we didn't just go out and shoot things for fun."

Making the film gave Ted and his grandfather an opportunity to travel and see much of the world. "We made the picture in Toronto and Montreal, then we went to London to do the sound. But I love Canada. I've never been in a place that I've liked as much," Ted said.

Producer Radnitz, director James B. Clark and cast and crew of both English and Canadian technicians arrived in the fall and worked for three months in the mountains in the village of Knowlton.

The final sequence of the book, as well as the film, occurs in winter, so Radnitz planned a shooting schedule to include a hiatus for two months. Then, they all returned for another four-week period in January to film the final snow scenes. Radnitz explained that he chose Canada because there is little wilderness left in the United States. "Most of the areas here have telephone poles and hot dog stands. I needed to

It needs financial assistance, so if interested, contact the founder-president C. Richard Calore. I don't think anyone cares more for cats than Mr. Calore.

ple ate what they grew or was grown in the immediate vicinity when it was in season.

Diet followed the seasons. The first radishes and green onions announced aromatically that winter was past. The other crops followed in profusion—potatoes the size of ping pong balls, new peas, string beans, strawberries, roasting ears, summer squash, etc., ending up with pumpkin. In winter we ate smoked meat, potatoes, apples until they rotted, popcorn, preserves of all kinds and lots of stuff cooked in lard. Meals became rather dull in February.

Gardening in those days before Social Security was important to old people. It helped Grandpa and Grandma to feel they were pulling their weight in the family. And indeed they were. Every dollar saved from wages would be used for other necessities.

All that is gone with the wind. The Green Giant and his competitors have seen to that.

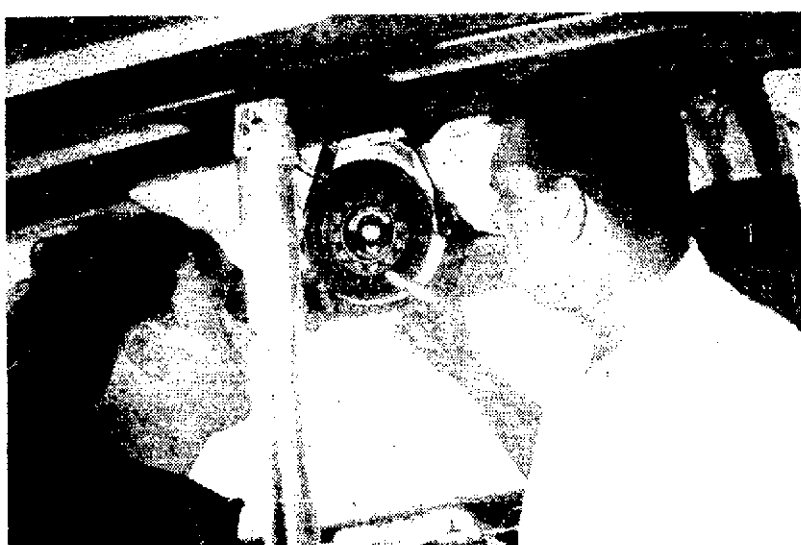

The last time that gardening was important to individuals in the United States was in World War II. Starvation is always a possible result of war, and Americans were propagandized to raise Victory Gardens. They sprang up everywhere, even in flower planters in penthouses. As it turned out, it was more of an exercise in patriotism than in economy. But in other countries the home gardens did mean health and survival for families.

What use is a vegetable garden in a metropolis? Well, what use is a rose garden? Both exist for the joy of the person who plants them. A vine-ripened tomato is no less beautiful than a rose. But you only smell a rose; you can taste a tomato.

It takes only a little land to raise vegetables. A lot now devoted to inedible flowers and grasses will do quite nicely—and can be just as beautiful. But you have to have love for the work.

If you are a vegetable gardener by nature you can have the fun of shouting to the Green Giant: "What's new, Green Giant, besides 'Ho, Ho, Ho!' I'll show you!"

SQUADRONS STRESS SAFETY

their boats in wet storage in a marina slip.

Instructors of the Elementary Piloting class attempt to provide operators of boats of all kinds and sizes with the minimum knowledge they should have before venturing forth in their boat whether it be on a lake, stream, river, or the open ocean.

AMONG THE SUBJECTS covered are safe fueling techniques, proper engine and fuel storage compartment ventilation, learning the meaning of buoys and markers, and how to read a compass — knowledge needed for a boater to get from Point A to Point B and back safely and enjoyably.

While the elementary course is open to men, women and youngsters 16 and over, membership in the USPS is available only to men. However, the lure of learning more about boating has prompted many "first mates" to enroll in one or more of the advanced courses in small boat handling offered by the USPS.

Those who complete the Elementary Piloting class may enroll in Seamanship. A few of the topics covered include anchors and how to anchor, maneuvering in close quarters, man-overboard procedure, getting under way in a sailboat or power boat, and how to tie the most useful of all knots — the bowline!

After Seamanship comes Advanced Piloting, a course for the really serious devotee of pleasure boating.

For many skippers who have been lulled into thinking they know all about boats, the Advanced Piloting course provides a rude and jarring awakening.

Next come the year-long courses in Junior Navigation and Navigation.

The members of the USPS who wear the navigator's insignia on their uniforms signifying they have completed the course in Celestial Navigation have received more classroom instruction on the subject than do the midshipmen of the U.S. Naval Academy or the Merchant Marine Academy.

WITH THE AID of the sun, moon, stars, and a mariner's sextant, and the knowledge they have learned in the Navigation course, graduates have the ability and knowledge to guide any vessel of any tonnage from a transpacific racing sloop to the largest passenger liner from one port to the next across any of the seven seas.

But for those skippers not interested in making ocean crossings, the curriculum of elective courses offered by the USPS includes one in Engine Maintenance. It covers the care and feeding of outboards, inboards and the hybrids, the outboard-inboard.

Discussed are fuel adjustment, lubrication, spark plug and ignition care, how to prevent engine problems and, if they do develop, how to solve them.

One of the most popular courses is the Sailing class.

During this 15-week course the serious "rag-man" is taught the theory of sail, points of sailing, stability and balance, managing a sailboat and practical rigging.

In the Weather course the student learns all about — weather!

In the Marine Electronics class taught by the volunteer but knowledgeable instructors, the pleasure boat skippers learn about depthometers, radio direction finders (RDF), ship-to-shore radio and other electronic gear which might be carried aboard an offshore cruiser.

And, finally, there is a course to teach teachers how to teach!

A RECENT COUNT showed there were more than four million pleasure boats registered in the United States. Multiply this figure by the number of persons in each family, plus those who crew on boats, plus those employed in the boating industry and allied industries, and the statistics indicate that an amazingly huge number of Americans — 40 million of them — are involved in recreational boating.

A recent survey conducted by the Long Beach squadron showed that in Long Beach every fifth household includes someone who either owns a boat, is related to someone who does, or who frequently goes aboard as a guest or crew member on a boat owned by a friend, fellow worker, or relative.

During the past 55 years the USPS has given its free small boat handling class to more than 1.5 million boaters. A large number! Yet, the total is less than 4 per cent of the estimated number of pleasure boat enthusiasts in the United States today.

Which indicates there is a lot of educating yet to be done.

If you plan to take him with you, and many cats travel very well, get him accustomed to a container, for the cage will be his home for a good part of the time. It might be a good idea to get him to stay also in a bag of some sort, too, so you can carry him around on excursions rather than leave him in a broiling car under the sun.

On vacations, the cat should wear identification, the best being the address of your veterinarian unless someone is occupying your home while you are away. Numerous dogs are being tattooed, but I can't say the same for felines.

The cat that will suffer the most this summer is the unwanted stray, a pitiful animal guilty only of being born, possibly not many weeks ago. About 90 per cent of all cats are dropped at the side of a road to panic and be tortured by thirst and hunger, are passed over to animal experimental laboratories, or are "put to sleep."

The adorable kitten grows fast and can reproduce when it is age five or six months. Please don't procrastinate about having the pet neutered. It will then be cleaner in habit, sweeter, quieter, and much more satisfactory as a pet. (There will be a rare male now and then, who, if not altered when young, will continue to be aggressive, but this is the exception, not the rule.)

Pet Harbor Humane Education League can be reached by calling DA 4-2325. Or phone Irene Donald, TO 7-0235. These two, plus a few others, will try to assist you in the cost of having the cat find a place that was completely desolate." He had scouted Canada for three months before discovering the village of Knowlton, about 200 miles from Montreal. "It was ideal for the setting of the film and I knew immediately I had found the right place."

Also in the cast is talented actor-singer Theodore Bikel who plays Bando, an itinerant folk singer who becomes friends with the runaway boy. He teaches Sam (Ted Eccles) how to make clay pots from river mud and syrup from the bark of the birch tree. It is when fall approaches and Bando leaves Sam that the boy struggles against the terrible loneliness of the mountain wilderness. A passing hunter shoots Sam's peregrine falcon and it is by Frightful's death that the youngster's solidarity primeval utopia has turned into a melancholy snow-covered world and he knows he must return home.

It was a warm day and Ted was tired, but Venus, the hawk, was wide awake. She flapped her wings and reminded me of a parrot I once had. I asked Nelson how long the bird would live.

"She should live to be about 20 or 30 years old — if she doesn't get shot. These birds have a long life expectancy. However, Los Angeles isn't such a great place for her to be in, either. They catch pigeons' disease, get fungus in their air sacks, and avian T.B. The smog is terrible. Falconers have trouble with their birds in Los Angeles. It's full of catching diseases." He put Venus' hood on again over her eyes and walked out into the polluted air. I was tempted to ask if he had an extra hood. I envied Venus, bound for the clean fresh air of Boise.

altered. The National Cat Protection Society located at 2330 Maine Ave., Long Beach 90806, although still in its infancy, hopes to one day maintain a neuter-spay clinic. It needs financial assistance, so if interested, contact the founder-president C. Richard Calore. I don't think anyone cares more for cats than Mr. Calore.

had been giving too many interviews, and I said: "As soon as you said 'It's been a refreshing experience' I knew you heard that somewhere. It just doesn't sound like a 13-year-old."

Ted laughed, "I guess I've been 'on' too long."

"That's what I mean," said his grandfather. "I wouldn't encourage the boy to make a career of acting. I think he can find something more helpful to humanity. I like the message that the picture teaches. It reminds me of the days when I was growing up. People lived off the land then. We learned to make all kinds of things — we went hunting for food, but we didn't just go out and shoot things for fun."

Making the film gave Ted and his grandfather an opportunity to travel and see much of the world. "We made the picture in Toronto and Montreal, then we went to London to do the sound. But I love Canada. I've never been in a place that I've liked as much," Ted said.

Producer Radnitz, director James B. Clark and cast and crew of both English and Canadian technicians arrived in the fall and worked for three months in the mountains in the village of Knowlton.

The final sequence of the book, as well as the film, occurs in winter, so Radnitz planned a shooting schedule to include a hiatus for two months. Then, they all returned for another four-week period in January to film the final snow scenes. Radnitz explained that he chose Canada because there is little wilderness left in the United States. "Most of the areas here have telephone poles and hot dog stands, I needed to

Listen to Youth!

CHANDRA TOOSEN of Long Beach is one of some 40 teen-agers offering the adult community a chance to put up or shut up.

The 17-year-old Poly High School graduate is chairman of the Long Beach Mayor's Youth Council, which was formed in April to seek community change through peaceful dialogue with adults rather than violent protest.

Most of the participants in the MYC were selected for their involvement in school or local activities. Chandra, a commencement speaker at Poly, had participated in Girl's League, student government, drill team and the Black History and Culture Club. Last summer, she helped teach sewing and modeling to elementary and junior high school girls in the central area of Long Beach. She plans to commute to California State College at Long Beach from her home at 2074 Adriatic Ave. and major in education.

Her views:

—Young people today are rebelling against established society's ideas. They are smarter than teen-agers were 50 years ago and more aware of the world and the changes that need to take place. I think they usually try a rational and intelligent way to work out problems, but often the adults don't listen, so they try other methods.

—To some degree, adults are afraid of young people and their ideas. Adults are used to things being done in a certain way. They are afraid of the changes young people are trying to bring about, because they would be forced to adapt. Parents and teachers also try to keep the kids living in a fantasy world, a candy store. This is wrong, because as they grow older the kids learn not to trust what adults say and society is moving too fast for the kids not to learn about reality from childhood. There is too much to be done.

—The Mayor's Youth Council, composed of young people between 15 and 21, provides a way for youth to voice its opinion through legal and peaceful channels.

—We want to really represent youth, so we are organizing youth task forces in the different areas of Long Beach to gather ideas from a lot of teen-agers. It is useless for the 40 or so of us to give just our personal points of view.

—The council has had about 10 meetings and set up standing committees in such areas as jobs, recreation, arts and culture and education, but we need adult advisers familiar with these areas who can warn us if we start to duplicate some existing community activity.

—We have drawn up a proposal for summer and hope we can get some federal funds to implement it.

In it, we outline a program for helping high school students and graduates get jobs other than mowing lawns. They need jobs which will be meaningful to their career goals.

—We are trying to work out a recreational program whereby hardcore youths can go camping and see places they ordinarily don't see. We also want to set up a youth clearinghouse, one place where teen-agers can call in and find out about local community resources, and to devise a teen-ager master calendar.

—There is a danger that adults are using MYC to water down our desire to make changes. But if we are strong and determined and develop a workable program, I don't see how they can help but accept it.

—Many people want to know what the council is going to do about the racial tension at Poly. But the problems should be worked out by the students, parents, faculty and administration at Poly. If we are asked for advice, we may give it, but we are basically concerned with general youth problems.

—As a former Poly student, I think the administration, faculty and students should have been meeting to solve problems ahead of time, rather than just reacting to a crisis. The police should not have been brought onto the campus. It was like a prison. Who can study in that kind of tension? If there were to be any searches of students and patrolling of the campus, the administration and faculty should have handled it. If they couldn't, then the parents should have. No student is going to say or do too much if his folks are around.

—All teen-agers need dignity and respect. It is true that a child must learn to crawl before it walks and a teen-ager must experience certain things before becoming an adult. But teen-agers are maturing earlier, and they know what's going on. They should be listened to. — Arline Sherer.

amusement park, try photographing the lights on the moving rides. They will come out as solid lines of color against a black night sky. Simply center a Ferris wheel, for example, in your viewfinder and open the shutter for about a minute.

And, if you go to a night baseball game on the Fourth of July, your camera-tripod setup can be adapted to the action with some fast film. A fast film such as Kodak High Speed Ektachrome will enable you to obtain the desired depth of field and to use a fast shutter speed. For a really sharp picture, pick a relatively quiet moment in the game — the point at which the ball leaves the pitcher's hand, for example, to snap the shutter.

Fireworks make exciting movies, too. Again, a tripod is a good idea. Open the lens as wide as you can and start shooting as the rocket trail starts upwards. Follow it until the final burst disappears and you will have it all to watch again, whenever you wish.

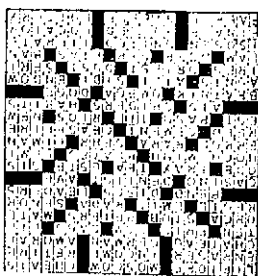

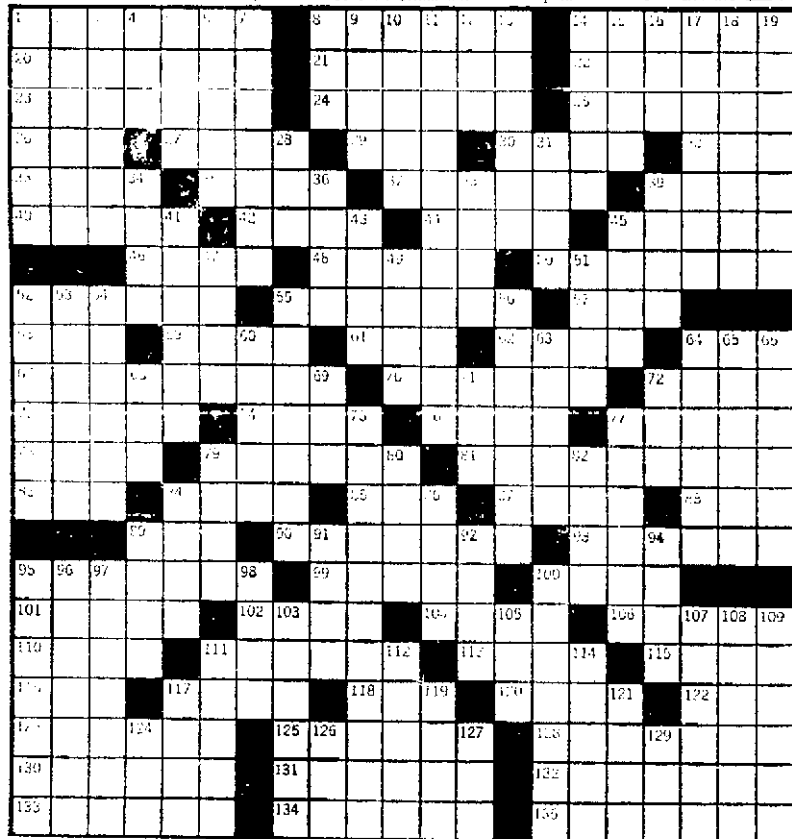

When the sky lights up this Fourth of July, brighten your picture collection — still or movies — through night photography.

And, if you go to a night baseball game on the Fourth of July, your camera-tripod setup can be adapted to the action with some fast film. A fast film such as Kodak High Speed Ektachrome will enable you to obtain the desired depth of field and to use a fast shutter speed. For a really sharp picture, pick a relatively quiet moment in the game—the point at which the ball leaves the pitcher's hand, for example, to snap the shutter.

Fireworks make exciting movies, too. Again, a tripod is a good idea. Open the lens as wide as you can and start shooting as the rocket trail starts upwards. Follow it until the final burst disappears and you will have it all to watch again, whenever you wish.

When the sky lights up this Fourth of July, brighten your picture collection—still or movies—through night photography.

"YOU'VE GOT to be kidding. He can't possibly be old enough to have a youngster 21 years old!"

People constantly make comments like that about youthful-looking Ray Johnson who took over as owner last February at Arnold's Family Restaurant, 3925 Atlantic Ave., in the Bixby Knolls section of Long Beach. Ray, who is slim, trim and bespectacled, resembles a mature college student or perhaps a young professor. He is the father of six children, four of whom work part-time at the restaurant. His home is in Garden Grove.

Formerly a high school teacher in Manson, Iowa, Ray received his restaurant training from Miles Arnold, owner of several Southland dining establishments. Associated with Arnold for 13 years, he rose to general manager before resigning last winter in order to purchase Arnold's Long Beach establishment. Luxuriously furnished, the restaurant has 26 employees, seating for 180 guests and is extremely popular because it offers the finest quality, fresh foods at modest prices.

Since Ray took over, the restaurant — which serves buffet-style — has enjoyed a sharp increase in business. Two weeks ago it set a new record for the number of dinners served. Featured Sunday and nightly are superb dinners from $1.65 to $2.50, including three salads (chosen from 15); potato, vegetable, entree, roll, butter and beverage. Among the entrees: fried chicken, roast turkey, round of roast beef, roast leg of lamb, baked ham with pineapple sauce, and northern halibut.

Ray's new luncheons have also caught on with the public. Included, for $1.35 to $1.90, are such entrees as chicken and dumplings, baked ham, roast beef or halibut, also with three salads, potato, vegetable, roll and beverage. Other features are salad-sandwich combinations for 99 cents and a hot plate luncheon for $1.14. The latter includes entree (such as stuffed bell pepper or haddock), potato, vegetable, roll and beverage.

Arnold's serves dinners Sunday from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. Luncheons are Tuesday through Saturday from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. The restaurant is closed Mondays.

FCC vs. WPIX: Who Goofed?

By JACK GOULD
N.Y. Times News Service

With the home screen dominated this summer by reruns and replacements of dubious distinction, save for Dick Cavett's literate hours of conversation on the ABC network, the Washington scene continues to be the focal point of interest in television. The goings-on in the capital are anything but reassuring.

New York's independent television station, WPIX-TV, has had renewal of its license withdrawn pending an inquiry into charges by former members of its news staff that the Daily News outlet allegedly distorted its news reports by use of mislabeled and outdated film. The Daily News has denied the allegations, furnished the Federal Communications Commission its records and voiced confidence that its license renewal will be reinstated.

Here is one instance where the circumstances should be the subject of an open hearing by an FCC examiner so that all the facts can be made known for the viewer's benefit, and the inquiry should be televised live by WPIX-TV. If the allegations had enough apparent substance to warrant suspension of the renewal, a grave step in itself, then the viewer should have full opportunity to learn at first hand whether the FCC staff acted capriciously and whether the complaints about the conduct of WPIX-TV are warranted.

No issue could be of greater moment than the charge that what is shown on TV may not be trusted. The Daily News and the Chicago Tribune, which have an interlocking ownership of WPIX, should be the first to insist that its audience have access to the facts. The FCC should be no less insistent that its peculiar conduct in the case should be ventilated for all to hear and see.

The charges against WPIX-TV were preferred by Nancy McCarthy, a former member of the station's news staff, and corroborated by three colleagues presently protected by a veil of anonymity, which should be lifted as promptly as possible.

Central to the inquiry that the public interest must be forthcoming is the role of the FCC itself: it is now in the dock fully as much as the Daily News. The existence of the charges was a matter of common knowledge since last January, when the allegations were reported by Variety, the trade publication. But the charges were ignored by the FCC Broadcast Bureau — and all the commissioners of the agency as well — when the renewal of WPIX-TV was hurriedly authorized on May 22, nine days before the expiration date of the station's permit on June 1.

George S. Smith, chief of the Broadcast Bureau, exercised his authority to issue the renewal within hours of a challenge to such action by Forum Communications, Inc., a group of New Yorkers, who questioned the performance record of WPIX-TV and asserted they could do a better job with Channel 11.

Only after the demand for reconsideration by the Forum group did the Broadcast Bureau belatedly entertain the complaint of Miss McCarthy and other former WPIX employees about the alleged tampering with the integrity of the station's news, including the use of a crowd scene in Rumania and labeling it "Prague" during the Russian invasion of Czechoslovakia.

Commissioner Nicholas Johnson of the FCC this week inferred that concern over the journalistic conduct of WPIX was a (Continued Page 19, Col. 1)

Cable TV May Bring College Into Homes

A cable TV system using space satellite relays could bring a college education into the living room for about $61 a year per subscriber, the National Cable Television Association says.

The system recommended last week at the group's annual convention in San Francisco—would have six channels that would bring in weather news around the clock, medical and health instruction, 16 hours of cultural programs, educational courses leading to a college degree, congressional hearings and other documentary programs.

"We are proposing that the cable television industry become one of the prime users of the satellite capability in order to bring more program options and a diversity of service to the television homes of the United States," said Frederick W. Ford, NCTA president.

The satellites would relay programs among 36 ground stations across the country, reaching an estimated 60 million viewers.

Robert D. Brishman, Communications Satellite Comsat project manager, estimated the system would cost each subscriber $1 a year more than present price for cable TV. Cable TV costs about $5 a month in most sections of the country.

Brishman said leasing satellites and other costs would total $25.8 annually, to be covered by an assumed sales to half the 60 million potential subscribers to cable TV. He said cable TV now goes into about four million homes.

Before the cable TV expansion via satellite can take place, he said, the Federal Communications Commission must lift the freeze it has put on CATV.

Bob Dornan: He's Never Satisfied

Bob Dornan, already one of the most articulate, widely traveled young men in television's interviewer-commentator ranks, isn't satisfied with the way he is.

He wants to be more articulate, better traveled. "You can't just stand still in this business," Dornan explains, "you have to keep getting better."

"Otherwise," he smiled, "some guy like me is going to come along and you'll be out of a job."

Bob has been that way for most of his 36 years — anxious, eager, questioning for more savvy about things he was interested in and for new savvy about things he didn't know. Born in New York but educated largely in California, Dornan used his five years active duty in the Air Force to create an avid avocation — flying. Then he turned down an opportunity to do it for profit by deciding to become an actor.

Bob got his ego back intact when he landed the job of co-pilot to Paul Burke's starring role in 20th Century-Fox's "12 O'Clock High" video series. Before the series ran out of gas, Bob counted 37 missions in his B-17.

But that's yesteryear's Bob Dornan and while he says he relished every moment, he maintains he is much happier doing what he's doing, being "where the action is." For a while it was as a substitute for Louis Lomax or filling in for Joe Pyne. Then KHJ-TV spotted the verbal

Bob has been that way for most of his 36 years — anxious, eager, questioning for more savvy about things he was interested in and for new savvy about things he didn't know. Born in New York but educated largely in California, Dornan used his five years active duty in the Air Force to create an avid avocation — flying. Then he turned down an opportunity to do it for profit by deciding to become an actor.

Bob got his ego back in tact when he landed the job of co-pilot to Paul Burke's starring role in 20th Century-Fox's "12 O'Clock High" video series. Before the series ran out of gas, Bob counted 37 missions in his B-17.

But that's yesteryear's Bob Dornan and while he says he relished every moment, he maintains he is much happier doing what he's doing, being "where the action is." For a while it was as a substitute for Louis Lomax or filling in for Joe Pyne. Then KHJ-TV spotted the verbal

PAN AND FAN MAIL

Never before — in 15 years of subscribing to the Independent, Press-Telegram — have I seen you devote so much space and use such flowery adjectives in praise of a new and unseen series as you did with "Hee-Haw" on June 15.

With such song hits as "Who's Gonna Mow Your Grass" and "Your Squaw is on the Warpath," please, oh please, tell us you're kidding.

My husband and I would like to think that your article was a piece of comedy material, and if so, we thank you for an hilarious bit of humor.

If not, we send you our sympathy and best wishes for a speedy recovery.

Mrs. G. Freeman
Long Beach

(We're doing well again — and thanks for the concern.)

In a root beer commercial that's currently being shown, isn't that grand lady (in the car, with the feathered hat) Gladys Cooper?

Also, I recently saw a news report that showed a seal hunt. I've never seen anything so cruel as the clubbing of those poor animals.

The women who wear seal-fur coats must be as cold-hearted as the hunters themselves.

C. Shallcross,
Long Beach

(Only if they've seen a seal hunt.)

Why do you praise Johnny Cash's show to the skies? We have a lot of shows on TV that stink, but that one really smells.

I think we're getting too much country music these days — all except "Melody Ranch". It's really not country music in every sense.

NBC CHILDREN'S THEATRE

NBC-TV, June 23, 8-9 p.m.

Shows of goodness can be good like goodness shows should, for goodness sake. We know that now because NBC had the impeccable taste to serve up in prime time, and Procter & Gamble had the uncommon sense to pick up the tab for "As I See It," an unpretentious delight that came to us for an hour of living color and warm pleasure, the 13th offering in the network's award-winning "NBC Children's Theatre."

Any lesser presentation of "Laughlin" might have been unpardonable. Even Rowan and Martin, both of whom have children and one of whom, the former, still has a going marriage, would doubtless forgive, and even applaud, the beguiling hour of usurpation emceed by a droll, dark-skinned man in silver-rimmed glasses, name of Bill Cosby.

If anyone can talk better to kids, listen more intelligently, and communicate more emphatically with small fry than the marvelously self-effacing, beautifully enabling and wondrously patient Mr. Cosby, I don't know where in hell he may be hiding. Cosby doesn't compete with the tykes, never dreams of trying to top them, coolly enjoys them, never brinks on patronizing them, doesn't allow himself one fatuous remark or reaction—and is just the perfect catalyst.

The kids themselves are something else. Innocence uncontrived. Not a precious or precocious one in the litter. Natural and revealing—all responding with warmth and comfort to Cosby's easy, good-humored guidance. Given the same kids and another Pied Piper I question that the same utterly beguiling results would have been possible.

Premise, like execution, was marvelously simple—and marvelously productive. Executive producer George A. Heinemann and associate producer-director-writer June Reigg (who, whatever else she did, and did well, certainly did not do Cosby's thinking or ad-libbing) toured the country setting up the show. Their efforts could not have been better spent. They interviewed preteens from five to 12, handed a half-hundred of the youngsters a Super 8 movie camera and turned them loose to film their world as they saw it.

There was, of course, screenings of the entries, and 17 of the 50 were picked out for showing on Monday night's special, with the kids engaged by Cosby in conversational narration while their movies flashed on the screen and their often touching, often amusing insights inhabited the voiceover.

No gimmicks. No punchlines. Just multi-racial proof of the universality of the human species, the innate charm and the comforting hope. There wasn't a spot that slacked, or a kid who disappointed. It's entirely possible that if W.C. Fields had lived long enough to bring this in on the tube, he might have felt just a twinge of guilt for having said in one of many moments of searing honesty, "nobody can be all bad who hates dogs and children."

Kids can be all right—at least if they're in the charge of Bill Cosby. And let us not end this extravagant—paen of praise without a chorus of deep appreciation for the music composed and conducted by Robert Maxwell.

—William Tusher.

NBC CHILDREN'S THEATRE

Monday, June 23, 8-9 p.m.

I have to admit to you up front that I have just about had it with reviewing television cartoons, or programs about children or wildlife. My mother didn't raise her boy to review cartoons and children's programs.

The fact is, I don't remember the last time I reviewed a video cartoon no matter how highly touted, and only extreme duress would force me to write about one again at any time in the future. As for programs about wildlife, they are getting to be a crashing bore, especially as they more and more take up the good prime time space that might well be devoted to meatier adult matters. The trouble, of course, is that such matters aren't as safe to put on.

As for children's programs, I have always been on the belief that out of the mouths of babes, just as often as not, comes dull nonsense that no self-respecting adult should have to put up with. I have absolutely no reverence for the myth of the wisdom of children, any more than I prefer the company of amateurs to professionals. So far as I am concerned, I would much rather be in the company of a charming rascal than an honest bore.

I did, however—and I must admit it—watch a children's television program Monday night. It was part of the "NBC Children's Theatre." It was called "As I See It," and it involved Bill Cosby as host, with a group of youngsters from around the country explaining little movies they shot themselves, as their films were being shown. More specifically, they explained their work to Cosby, and chatted with him about it, and that was very smart of the producers.

I mean, there's nobody in show business better than Cosby with children. I believe him with kids the way I believe John Wayne in a movie fight, which is to say a lot. I won't try to con you that "As I See It" was an hour's worth of pure Academy Award film, because it wasn't, but it did have its moments of charm, poignancy and humor—like the little boy who wanted to go to an island so he could get away from taxes. The boy was from Los Angeles. Kids think about money very early here.

Anyway, the youngsters talked about the world through their own eyes, and there was an awful lot of just home movie kind of stuff, and there was all that brotherhood stuff—white kids, black kids, Indian kids, Oriental kids—but Cosby was pretty wonderful with all of them because he doesn't talk in colors. You could just have him show up any where and build a show around him impromptu, which looked pretty much like what NBC-TV did with Monday night's hours.

Cosby wore glasses, by the way, which I like because it shows a fine naturalness and self-confidence and a sort of nuts-to-sow-business-rules attitude. He kept things going nicely throughout, and if you're going to have a program about kids, better Cosby than Art Linkletter. Oh boy, is it better.

—Rick DuBrow.

EARL WARREN

Warren Court Gets TV Review

Former Supreme Court Justice Arthur Goldberg assesses "The Warren Years" and their impact on American society in a special 90-minute NET Journal at 9 p.m., Monday on Channel 28.

The program marks the retirement of Earl Warren, Chief Justice of the United States for the past 16 years. Goldberg, an associate justice in the Warren Court from 1962 to 1965, will be among many distinguished legal analysts, political allies and critics reviewing the life and influence of Warren.

They include Senator Everett Dirksen (R., Ill.), leading opponent of the "one man, one vote" decision; Earl Warren, Jr., a municipal court judge in Sacramento, California; Robert Carter, counsel in the Brown vs. Topeka Board of Education case, which led to the initial Supreme Court ruling on school desegregation; Alexander Bickel of the Yale Law School; Jack Greenberg of the NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund; and eight of Warren's former law clerks, who provide an intimate view of the Chief Justice and his Court.

The program will contain portions of Warren's rare public appearances, including a speech before the Federal Judiciary Conference and two commencement addresses in early June — one at Lincoln University, an all-black school in Lincoln Park, Pa., and the other at Norwich University in Northfield, Vt.

'Miss Wool' on Video

Twenty lovely college coeds vie for the opportunity to represent the American Wool Industry as Miss Wool of 1969, in the 12th annual Miss Wool of America Pageant being televised at 9 p.m., Tuesday, on Channel 5.

EARL WARREN

Warren Court Gets TV Review

Former Supreme Court Justice Arthur Goldberg assesses "The Warren Years" and their impact on American society in a special 90-minute NET Journal at 9 p.m., Monday on Channel 28.

The program marks the retirement of Earl Warren, Chief Justice of the United States for the past 16 years. Goldberg, an associate justice in the Warren Court from 1962 to 1965, will be among many distinguished legal analysts, political allies and critics reviewing the life and influence of Warren.

They include Senator Everett Dirksen (R., Ill.), leading opponent of the "one man, one vote" decision; Earl Warren, Jr., a municipal court judge in Sacramento, California; Robert Carter, counsel in the Brown vs. Topeka Board of Education case, which led to the initial Supreme Court ruling on school desegregation; Alexander Bickel of the Yale Law School; Jack Greenberg of the NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund; and eight of Warren's former law clerks, who provide an intimate view of the Chief Justice and his Court.

The program will contain portions of Warren's rare public appearances, including a speech before the Federal Judiciary Conference and two commencement addresses in early June — one at Lincoln University, an all-black school in Lincoln Park, Pa., and the other at Norwich University in Northfield, Vt.

'Miss Wool' on Video

S. I. HAYAKAWA

Hayakawa Slated for TV Special

S. I. Hayakawa, acting California State College, San Francisco, is the premiere guest when KHH-TV debuts a new, live series, "Let Me Talk to . . .", at 10 p.m., tonight, on Channel 9.

Hosted by veteran radio personality Keith Walker, "Let Me Talk To . . ." opens the Channel 9 "hotlines" to a viewing audience desirous of putting questions to the controversial semanticist, much in the public eye since last December when he took over the administration of the San Francisco college from former president Robert R. Smith.

Hayakawa plans to comment on: educational opportunities for minorities in the junior college system; the role of that system in American education; re-organization of education for greater student-faculty communication; community involvement in the junior college; and his future political plans.

The acting president of CSCSF has been a frequent critic of the television and radio medias, complaining that "No one ever lets me finish (a statement)." Since typical media coverage is usually — and of necessity — brief, Hayakawa feels that many of his statements have been distorted, a situation he plans to remedy in his hour-long "Let Me Talk To . . ." appearance.

'Perspective' Expands

Channel 28's weekly half-hour program, "Black Perspective," will be expanded to a full hour Wednesday night to explore extensively problems encountered by Negroes attempting to find decent housing in Southern California.

Instead of the usual time of 7 p.m., the program will begin at 6:30 p.m.

BROADCASTERS WILL FETE 50TH YEAR

The Public Relations Committee of the National Association of Broadcasters has approved a comprehensive program for celebrating the broadcasting industry's golden anniversary next year.

The 50th anniversary program, to be submitted to NAB's board of Directors at its June 16-20 meeting at NAB headquarters here, would be conducted on national, state and local levels.

Features would include on-air presentations by radio and television stations on the industry's past and future which emphasize its unmatched service to the public. Other highlights include participation by community and public service organizations.

The committee also decided to canvass the NAB membership for additional ideas. Chairman Don C. Dailey, vice president of KGBX, Springfield, Mo., said the committee is anxious to see that widespread industry participation is reflected.

'Racism' Eyed by NBC

"Racism: Prime Obstacle to World Community," the second of the annual programs which will be produced by the Television Religious Unit of NBC News in cooperation with the World Council of Churches, will be broadcast at 10:30 a.m., today on Channel 4.

S. I. HAYAKAWA

Hayakawa Slated for TV Special

S.I. Hayakawa, acting California State College, San Francisco, is the premiere guest when KHJ-TV debuts a new, live series, "Let Me Talk to . . .", at 10 p.m., tonight, on Channel 9.

Hosted by veteran radio personality Keith Walker, "Let Me Talk To . . ." opens the Channel 9 "hot-lines" to a viewing audience desirous of putting questions to the controversial semanticist, much in the public eye since last December when he took over the administration of the San Francisco college from former president Robert R. Smith.

Hayakawa plans to comment on: educational opportunities for minorities in the junior college system; the role of that system in American education; re-organization of education for greater student-faculty communication; community involvement in the junior college; and his future political plans.

The acting president of CSCSF has been a frequent critic of the television and radio medias, complaining that "No one ever lets me finish (a statement)." Since typical media coverage is usually — and of necessity — brief, Hayakawa feels that many of his statements have been distorted, a situation he plans to remedy in his hour-long "Let Me Talk To . . ." appearance.

'Perspective' Expands

Channel 28's weekly half-hour program, "Black Perspective," will be expanded to a full hour Wednesday night to explore extensively problems encountered by Negroes attempting to find decent housing in Southern California.

Instead of the usual time of 7 p.m., the program will begin at 6:30 p.m.

BROADCASTERS WILL FETE 50TH YEAR

The Public Relations Committee of the National Association of Broadcasters has approved a comprehensive program for celebrating the broadcasting industry's golden anniversary next year.

The 50th anniversary program, to be submitted to NAB's board of Directors at its June 16-20 meeting at NAB headquarters here, would be conducted on national, state and local levels.

Features would include on-air presentations by radio and television stations on the industry's past and future which emphasize its unmatched service to the public. Other highlights include participation by community and public service organizations.

The committee also decided to canvass the NAB membership for additional ideas. Chairman Don C. Dailey, vice president of KGBX, Springfield, Mo., said the committee is anxious to see that widespread industry participation is reflected.

'Racism' Eyed by NBC

"Racism: Prime Obstacle to World Community," the second of the annual programs which will be produced by the Television Religious Unit of NBC News in cooperation with the World Council of Churches, will be broadcast at 10:30 a.m., today on Channel 4.

New 'Star' Dick Cavett Playing It by Ear

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Television-Radio Writer

Dick Cavett, loved by the critics but with the Nielsen jury still out, is doing the sensible thing.

He is pretty certain that, come mid-September, "The Dick Cavett Show" will be over, at least until after the first part of 1970 when ABC is likely to have some drop-outs.

"I just don't think about it," he says. "We tape the show three days in a row — that keeps me from having that Monday feeling more than once a week. The hour goes so fast, but except for that, it is like having the old daytime show."

DICK, A SLIGHT, blond fellow whose off-camera manners are as meticulous as his on-stage deportment, enjoys — he insists — his thrice weekly prime-time programs and really doesn't expect them to go on forever.

"We're expecting to get back in midseason," he said. "So when the summer is over, I'd like to take a long trip someplace. I'd never been abroad until I went to England to do a Tom Jones show and I'd like to do some traveling over there."

From Sunday through Wednesday Cavett is in New York. He and his wife, actress Carrie Nye, live in mid-Manhattan. As soon as the last tape is in the can, they cut out for their beach-front place on Long Island for a few days of sun, surf and snorkeling.

Cavett, on working days, gets to bed around 2 a.m., sleeps until mid-morning, then goes for a walk. The rest of the day is spent in his office, a small but elegantly furnished suite in a building off Broadway, or at the studio.

Mostly he works on material about upcoming guests. He leaves the booking of guests to his staff — "I'd never pick the right ones."

A FEW PEOPLE, mostly those he has encountered on his daytime show, reassure him.

"You do get favorites," he said. "The are the ones who, the minute they come out, you know they have things under control and you won't have trouble."

These include British actors Nicol Williamson and James Mason, Mort Sahl and his old friend and idol Groucho Marx.

"The thing that amazes me is that the hour seems to go twice as fast as the 90 minutes did," Cavett said, "and I constantly feel I ought to be applying brakes. As for my future, I honestly don't think about it. Something will happen. I'm interested in other kinds of performing — motion pictures, of course, and I'd like to direct a comedy. For now, all I'm thinking about is this show and this summer.

The program is pulling a lot of mail, most of it glowing. He has been a little jittery about some of his off-beat guests but the outrageous ones have done nothing but help the show.

"I suppose I'm enjoying it," he said. "Actually it doesn't feel too much different from the daytime show, but of course I'm conscious that many more people are seeing it."

"You do get favorites," he said. "The are the ones who, the minute they come out, you know they have things under control and you won't have trouble."

These include British actors Nicol Williamson and James Mason, Mort Sahl and his old friend and idol Groucho Marx.

"The thing that amazes me is that the hour seems to go twice as fast as the 90 minutes did," Cavett said, "and I constantly feel I ought to be applying brakes. As for my future, I honestly don't think about it. Something will happen. I'm interested in other kinds of performing — motion pictures, of course, and I'd like to direct a comedy. For now, all I'm thinking about is this show and this summer.

The program is pulling a lot of mail, most of it glowing. He has been a little jittery about some of his off-beat guests but the outrageous ones have done nothing but help the show.

"I suppose I'm enjoying it," he said. "Actually it doesn't feel too much different from the daytime show, but of course I'm conscious that many more people are seeing it."

World to View Investiture of Prince

PRINCE CHARLES

"The investiture will be like a childhood fantasy come to life," says Paul Greenberg, producer of CBS News' coverage of "The Investiture of Prince Charles," to be broadcast live via satellite from Caernarvon, Wales at 8 a.m. Tuesday on Channel 2.

"It's got a queen, a prince, yeoman of the guard, druids, archdeacons, noblemen, heraldic banners, carriages and a medieval castle.

"Everything is set up for television, so you'll be able to see the ceremonies well," continues Greenberg, who just returned from Wales. "In the 1911 investiture, the last one, there was a canopy over the principals for the actual investiture ceremony, and you couldn't see anything. This time, everyone is very camera-conscious."

CBS News Correspondent Winston Burdett will report from Caernarvon with Correspondent Morley Safer on the day of the investiture. Correspondent Harry Reasoner will anchor the broadcast in New York.

For the broadcast, Burdett and cameraman John Peters filmed a history of Wales, with readings of Dylan Thomas' poetry to set the mood; a history of the Prince of Wales. Including film of the 1911 investiture and of Prince Charles growing up; a segment on the town of Caernarvon showing the effect the investiture is having and a report of resurgent

Welsh nationalism, including an interview with one of the leaders of the movement, who is now in his 80's.

"Welsh nationalism is still relatively low-scale and polite," Greenberg says. "They do things like covering the English part of the bilingual road signs with spray paint and then turning themselves in to the police."

Might the nationalists try to disrupt the ceremony with protest demonstrations?

"It's possible, but not likely," says Greenberg. "Really, they don't do things like that. Their main interest is in trying to retain their Welsh heritage, the language for example, which they feel is slipping away."

(There's a simple remedy called turning the dial.)

I have a gripe about one of the many horrible commercials that are on the air. I am getting sick of Eddie Albert — and Arthur Godfrey — demonstrating their laundry products.

Do they take ten paces, then turn and throw food at one another? A person cannot possibly get so much food spread on one shirt front, as those commercials show.

Maybe if they knew what fools they are making of themselves they might try to get put into a higher bracket.

PAN AND FAN MAIL

— still do — but don't like it to take over completely.

I'm getting sick of so many guitars. Can't people learn to play piano or some other instruments?

D. Cooper,
Long Beach
(There's a simple remedy called turning the dial.)

I have a gripe about one of the many horrible commercials that are on the air. I am getting sick of Eddie Albert — and Arthur Godfrey — demonstrating their laundry products.

Do they take ten paces, then turn and throw food at one another? A person cannot possible get so much food spread on one shirt front, as those commercials show.

Maybe if they knew what fools they are making of themselves they might try to get put into a higher bracket.

A. M. Smith
Long Beach

(You'd be surprised how well those horrible commercials pay.)

World to View Investiture of Prince

PRINCE CHARLES

"The investiture will be like a childhood fantasy come to life," says Paul Greenberg, producer of CBS News' coverage of "The Investiture of Prince Charles," to be broadcast live via satellite from Caernarvon, Wales at 8 a.m. Tuesday on Channel 2.

"It's got a queen, a prince, yeoman of the guard, druids, archdeacons, noblemen, heraldic banners, carriages and a medieval castle.

"Everything is set up for television, so you'll be able to see the ceremonies well," continues Greenberg, who just returned from Wales. "In the 1911 investiture, the last one, there was a canopy over the principals for the actual investiture ceremony, and you couldn't see anything. This time, everyone is very camera-conscious."

CBS News Correspondent Winston Burdett will report from Caernarvon with Correspondent Morley Safer on the day of the investiture. Correspondent Harry Reasoner will anchor the broadcast in New York.

For the broadcast, Burdett and cameraman John Peters filmed a history of Wales, with readings of Dylan Thomas' poetry to set the mood; a history of the Prince of Wales, including film of the 1911 investiture and of Prince Charles growing up; a segment on the town of Caernarvon showing the effect the investiture is having and a report of resurgent

Welsh nationalism, including an interview with one of the leaders of the movement, who is now in his 80's.

"Welsh nationalism is still relatively low-scale and polite," Greenberg says. "They do things like covering the English part of the bilingual road signs with spray paint and then turning themselves in to the police."

Might the nationalists try to disrupt the ceremony with protest demonstrations?

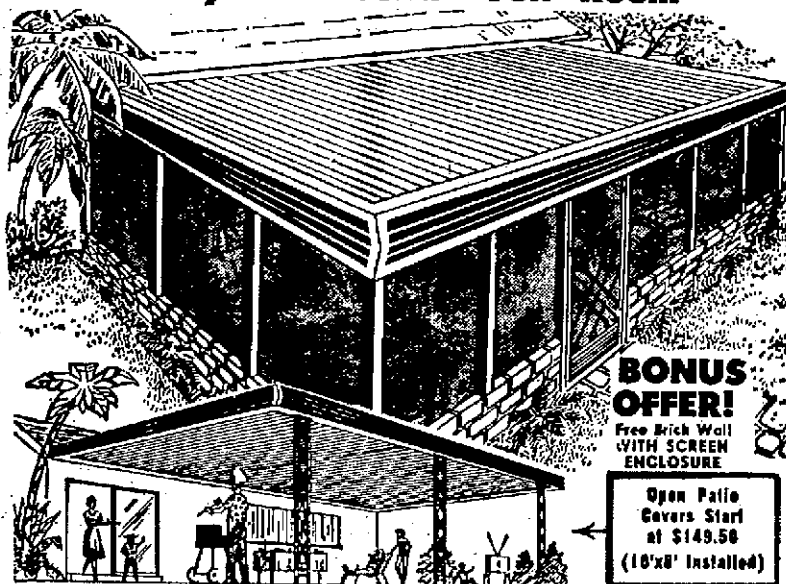

"It's possible, but not likely," says Greenberg. "Really, they don't do things like that. Their main interest is in trying to retain their Welsh heritage, the language for example, which they feel is slipping away."

DR. CHRISTIAAN BARNARD AND WIFE.

Q. A South African court has ordered Dr. Christiaan Barnard, the heart transplant surgeon, to restore conjugal rights to his wife. What does that mean?—Helen Beggs, Oakland, Calif.

A. It means Dr. Barnard has the choice of returning to his wife's bed or facing a divorce.

Q. Ho Chi Minh has been portrayed as a kind, shrewd, patriotic old man, "Uncle Ho" type of image. Is this a true image of Ho?—Jeff Ranson, Durham, N.C.

A. Ho Chi Minh is a murderous old cutthroat, a dedicated Communist who will stop at nothing to achieve his objectives.

Q. Who said: "All women become like their mothers?"—Selma Kay, Newark, N.J.

A. Oscar Wilde.

Q. Is it true that in Sweden, more than 50 percent of all brides are pregnant?—Janine Elliere, Muncie, Ind.

A. Approximately 36 percent are pregnant at their weddings, but 98 percent of those married confess to intercourse before marriage. In Sweden today, one in every seven children is born out of wedlock.

Q. What's happened to Cheryl Crane, Lana Turner's daughter, who stabbed Lana's lover, Johnny Stompanato?—Ed Walters, Sacramento, Calif.

A. Cheryl Crane works as a hostess in one of her dad's restaurants.

Q. In his speech on Vietnam, President Nixon said: "A great nation cannot renege on its pledges." Did the SEATO Treaty compel us to go to the aid of South Vietnam? Why does Nixon seek to perpetuate the illusions President Johnson and Dean Rusk tried to foist on the American public?—F. T., Washington, D.C.

A. Says historian Arthur Schlesinger in his book, The Bitter Heritage: "No President of the U.S. before President Johnson interpreted the SEATO Treaty as compelling American intervention, and no other signatory so interprets the Treaty today." The U.S. intervened in South Vietnam not because of any SEATO commitments but as an extension of our foreign policy to contain communism. For President Nixon to maintain the SEATO commitment as a reason for U.S. intervention is to open himself to the same credibility gap which caused Johnson's downfall. His security adviser Henry Kissinger is much too knowledgeable and prudent to permit Nixon to fall into that trap.

Q. For years and years MGM has been preparing Say It With Music, a musical based on Irving Berlin tunes. When will it be ready for release? How old is Berlin? Is MGM finished?—Harold Cornado, Culver City, Calif.

A. Say It With Music has been abandoned after $3 million was spent on its preparation. Irving Berlin is 81. As a production studio MGM is in serious trouble. The company desperately needs some box-office winners.

SAMMY AND LOLA TOGETHER IN "GOLDEN BOY."

Q. Can you tell me if Sammy Davis Jr. is going to marry Lola Fontana, who has succeeded Mai Britt in his affections? Also what is Fontana doing these days?—Knobby Arthur, Charlotte, N.C.

A. Davis has no immediate marital plans. His girlfriend, Lola Fontana, is currently playing the film role of a black undertaker's wife who has an affair with a white sheriff in a Southern town. The film is called The Liberation of Lord Byron Jones from the novel of the same title.

Q. How did Betty Grable make out in her London stage debut?—Claire Gihbons, Las Vegas, Nev.

A. Belle Starr, with Miss Grable in the title role, folded after 22 performances.

Q. What's with Steve Boyd and Brigitte Bardot?—Illa Rosoff, West Palm Beach, Fla.

A. They have an off-and-on relationship.

JIMMY AND WIFE WITH DAUGHTER.

Q. How old is Jimmy Durante? Is he the natural father of his daughter?—Milton Deelev, Del Rio, Tex.

A. Durante is 76. His daughter is adopted.

Q. My son, just back from Vietnam, says that in April the Marines lost a 45-day supply of ammunition which cost about $80 million. I'd like to find out if this is true. He says it happened at Danang. Also why was nothing reported about the loss in our free press?—Mrs. J. L., New York, N.Y.

A. On April 27th, 1969, an accidental fire started by Vietnamese civilians in a trash disposal area spread to a U.S. ammunition supply area southwest of the Danang airbase. The supply depot went up in flames igniting a 40-day supply of ammunition, worth about $75 million.

News of the fire appeared in the U.S. press, but no evaluation of the damage was printed since it could not be accurately estimated at the time. It took ten days of ammunition production in this country to replace the ordinance loss in Vietnam.

Q. I understand that Leslie Uggams was originally offered the starring role in the TV series, Julia. After she turned it down, Diahann Carroll was signed. Is this so?—Mae Russell, Charleston, S.C.

A. It is so. Miss Uggams turned down the original offer, because she was appearing at the time in a Broadway play, Her First Roman. She expected the show would enjoy a long run. It closed after two weeks.

THE GREAT CHECK HUNT

Every month approximately 18,000 worried people phone their local Social Security offices with one question: "What's happened to my check?"

In the past, obtaining an answer involved an exchange of correspondence that frequently lasted more than a month.

Now, all no-check complaints made to any of the 800 Social Security district offices trigger a teletype query to headquarters outside Baltimore. There, the world's largest battery of computers is housed in a building large enough to hold two football fields. As soon as a query is received, a bank of IBM computers rapidly scans the master records to find the cause of the beneficiary's problem. Within 48 hours the answer is teletyped to the district office without a human hand intervening anywhere in the process.

The usual answer: Either the check is on its way, or the citizen wasn't entitled to one in the first place. In any case, getting a speedy answer to a worried citizen is just one more way in which Social Security is working to improve its service.

Ohio, and Congressman Cornelius Gallagher of New Jersey.

These exposes have inspired other publications to investigate the finances and affiliations of others in high government office. Several zealous reporters are currently zeroing in on the extra-curricular activities of that lovable old rascal, Sen. Everett McKinley Dirksen of Illinois.

FIGHT AND ENJOY IT

The process of living is no bed of roses, never has been and never will be. And it isn't realistic or particularly helpful to exempt marriage from this viewpoint.

Modern explorers of the psychotherapy of marriage offer enlightened observations on coping with difficulties.

But for Dr. Israel W. Charney of Paoli, Pa., these are only half truths.

Charney believes that the conflict in marriage is not only inevitable, but also desirable. Those unions marked by conflicts are not the unfortunate few, but the common many. There is nothing wrong with this. Like aggression, conflict can be expressed either destructively or constructively.

Charney lists some constructive suggestions about marital fighting and loving in a recent issue of Family Process magazine:

"It is natural and right to feel anger.

"It is very much wrong to hurt another person, overtly, in acts against the other's person, but to feel like hurting another is a natural expression of anger.

"Feelings are not the same as actions; our feelings of anger in no way really punish or hurt the other party in a literal sense."

Charney emphasizes the need to distinguish between Feelings and actions. He also has firm notions about fighting in front of children.

Since Charney sees anger as natural and fighting as a necessary means of expression, he favors allowing children to view this process.

There is, as Ecclesiastes puts it, "a time to love and a time to hate." A study of murders between spouses reveals that the murderers are often those who are least able to express their anger on a reasonable level, finally explode into a murderous battle. Fighting, says Charney, is "inevitable and necessary and desirable -- simply not a byproduct of emotional immaturity or disturbance."

Dr. Charney concurs with other current research which contends that violence is an outdated method of coping in our technological society. If we wish to survive, with some ability to form unions between people, as individuals or nations, we must learn to express and channel aggressions non-violently.

HANGOVER CURE

According to the Automobile Association of France--the French are a nation of wine-drinkers with long experience in the realm of alcoholism--the best way to cope with a hangover is as follows:

"Drink lots of water before you sleep and, when you wake, a cold shower followed by breakfast and a brisk walk, will work wonders... Should you still be unable to face what the day has in store for you, after you have done all this, drink an Italian Fernet Branca."

THE PRICE OF WAR

The feeling in Japan, Taiwan, Australia, and other Asian countries is that South Vietnam will show no sincere disposition to end the Vietnamese War until the U.S. starts to withdraw some troops.

Prosperity in Saigon has reached such an all-time high, so many profiteers are making huge fortunes because of the U.S. presence, that there is now a vested interest in maintaining the war as long as possible.

A group of South Vietnamese businessmen, visiting Tokyo to speed up their orders for consumer goods--cars, TV sets, transistor radios, tape recorders, etc.--admitted to a PARADE reporter that the ARVN (Army of Republic of Vietnam) is pretty much a corrupt joke, that it will fold like an accordion once the Americans pull out. Sen. John Stennis of Mississippi, head of the Senate Armed Services Committee and one of Lyndon Johnson's original war-hawks, is also honest and realistic enough to acknowledge the same truth. The South Vietnamese Army simply lacks the will to fight, to kill other Vietnamese, prefers to let the Americans do the killing and the dying.

The Saigonese businessmen predict that the U.S. will begin to withdraw some troops in August unless President Thieu can manufacture emergency reasons for their indefinite retention such as another imminent enemy offensive. They also have the feeling that the U.S. military in Vietnam will try to retain American troops there as long as possible, always on the grounds that the enemy has just about had it and that one more big push will do the trick.

Meanwhile, the price of the U.S. involvement continues to skyrocket with more than 40,000 Americans dead in action and accidents, more than 200,000 wounded, more than $110 billion already spent. Worse yet, the future costs to the nation in veterans benefits will approach another $50 billion. Add to this the interest payments on federal debts directly attributable to the Vietnamese war, and the final cost will approach $350 billion.

Professor James Clayton of the University of Utah, an authority on the economic costs of wars to the American people, has just finished a book, entitled The Economic Impact of the Cold War which Harcourt, Brace & World will publish next year.

"I estimated $330 billion as the final total of the Vietnamese war, providing we deescalate in a hurry," Dr. Clayton declares. "But that figure is an absolute minimum. A more realistic figure would be $400 billion."

"I know that figure boggles the mind. But it's true. People simply have no idea how much this nation spends on veterans' benefits and war interest payments."

"For example, World War II cost $381 billion. Veterans' benefits from that war have already cost the nation $75 billion and will in the end reach the staggering total of $476 billion. In addition, the nation will have to pay $200 billion in interest payments. Do you realize what that adds up to? One trillion and fifty-seven billion dollars."

Dr. Clayton points out that many politicians are worried about the $28 billion specifically allotted this year for the war in Vietnam. "What they do not know," he adds, "or seem to realize is that this year we will also spend $21 billion on interest payments for World War I, World War II and the Korean War."

"War is not only hell," he explains, "but fantastically expensive."

FOREIGN CARS

In the first four months of this year, sales of all imported cars in the U.S. increased 5% over the 1968 level to 331,711.

Biggest gainer was Toyota, biggest loser was Volkswagen. Here are the figures for the ten leading imports:

CAR	FIRST FOUR-MONTHS SALES		CHANGE
	1968	1969
1. Volkswagen	188,521	165,675	-12.11%
2. Toyota	16,687	37,688	+126%
3. Opel	30,182	33,706	+11.7%
4. British Austin, etc.	16,962	20,950	+23.5%
5. Datsun	9,323	17,491	+87.6%
6. Volvo	12,945	11,994	-7.7%
7. Fiat	7,307	11,564	+58%
8. British Ford	7,407	6,546	-11.6%
9. Renault	6,441	6,471	+0.5%
10. Mercedes-Benz	6,985	6,421	-8.8%

STUNTGIRL: ERROL FLYNN'S DAUGHTER DEIRDRE.

VIOLENCE DEPRESSION

They're putting the horses out to pasture and sending the stuntmen home. The uproar over violence on television has played havoc with the men who made westerns for video-viewing.

The number of TV westerns has decreased so rapidly this year that horses especially trained for rough, shoot-em-up action episodes just aren't worth keeping any more. Fat Jones, whose stables provide the studios with 90% of their trick horses, has had to give up 20 horses. And Chuck Hicks, president of the 200-member Hollywood Stunt-men's Union, estimates that business is down at least 40%. Risk-taking cowboys just aren't "in" these days. And extras who specialize as Indians are feeling the pinch as well. Some westerns like Bonanza and High Chaperal are still scheduled. But according to their producer David Dortort, "We've succeeded because we anticipated the opposition to violence. We started changing our format more than a year ago. The Glorious Fourth deserves a gloriously American menu. And what could be more traditional than franks and marvelously flavored beans served out-of-doors on porch or patio or even under a tree.

Our recipe for Party Baked Beans serves four generously, but if you are expecting a crowd, you can easily make three or four casseroles or two big baking pans. Green pepper cole slaw and sandwiches made of buttered canned Boston brown bread go well with the beans and franks. Make plenty of refreshing lemonade with convenient frozen concentrate. Add lemon slices for those who like drinks more tart. Wind up with big crescents of rosy watermelon, with a favorite layer cake or blueberry pie in reserve.

THE PRICE OF WAR

The feeling in Japan, Taiwan, Australia, and other Asian countries is that South Vietnam will show no sincere disposition to end the Vietnamese War until the U.S. starts to withdraw some troops.

Prosperity in Saigon has reached such an all-time high, so many profiteers are making huge fortunes because of the U.S. presence, that there is now a vested interest in maintaining the war as long as possible.

A group of South Vietnamese businessmen, visiting Tokyo to speed up their orders for consumer goods--cars, TV sets, transistor radios, tape recorders, etc.--admitted to a PARADE reporter that the ARVN (Army of Republic of Vietnam) is pretty much a corrupt joke, that it will fold like an accordion once the Americans pull out. Sen. John Stennis of Mississippi, head of the Senate Armed Services Committee and one of Lyndon Johnson's original war-hawks, is also honest and realistic enough to acknowledge the same truth. The South Vietnamese Army simply lacks the will to fight, to kill other Vietnamese, prefers to let the Americans do the killing and the dying.

The Saigonese businessmen predict that the U.S. will begin to withdraw some troops in August unless President Thieu can manufacture emergency reasons for their indefinite retention such as another imminent enemy offensive. They also have the feeling that the U.S. military in Vietnam will try to retain American troops there as long as possible, always on the grounds that the enemy has just about had it and that one more big push will do the trick.

Meanwhile, the price of the U.S. involvement continues to skyrocket with more than 40,000 Americans dead in action and accidents, more than 200,000 wounded, more than $110 billion already spent. Worse yet, the future costs to the nation in veterans benefits will approach another $50 billion. Add to this the interest payments on federal debts directly attributable to the Vietnamese war, and the final cost will approach $350 billion.

Professor James Clayton of the University of Utah, an authority on the economic costs of wars to the American people, has just finished a book, entitled The Economic Impact of the Cold War which Harcourt, Brace & World will publish next year.

"I estimated $330 billion as the final total of the Vietnamese war, providing we deescalate in a hurry," Dr. Clayton declares. "But that figure is an absolute minimum. A more realistic figure would be $400 billion."

"I know that figure boggles the mind. But it's true. People simply have no idea how much this nation spends on veterans' benefits and war interest payments."

"For example, World War II cost $381 billion. Veterans' benefits from that war have already cost the nation $75 billion and will in the end reach the staggering total of $476 billion. In addition, the nation will have to pay $200 billion in interest payments. Do you realize what that adds up to? One trillion and fifty-seven billion dollars."

Dr. Clayton points out that many politicians are worried about the $28 billion specifically allotted this year for the war in Vietnam. "What they do not know," he adds, "or seem to realize is that this year we will also spend $21 billion on interest payments for World War I, World War II and the Korean War."

"War is not only hell," he explains, "but fantastically expensive."

FOREIGN CARS

In the first four months of this year, sales of all imported cars in the U.S. increased 5% over the 1968 level to 331,711.

Biggest gainer was Toyota, biggest loser was Volkswagen. Here are the figures for the ten leading imports:

VIOLENCE DEPRESSION

They're putting the horses out to pasture and sending the stuntmen home. The uproar over violence on television has played havoc with the men who made westerns for video-viewing.

The number of TV westerns has decreased so rapidly this year that horses especially trained for rough, shoot-em-up action episodes just aren't worth keeping any more. Fat Jones, whose stables provide the studios with 90% of their trick horses, has had to give up 20 horses. And Chuck Hicks, president of the 200-member Hollywood Stunt-men's Union, estimates that business is down at least 40%. Risk-taking cowboys just aren't "in" these days. And extras who specialize as Indians are feeling the pinch as well. Some westerns like Bonanza and High Chapparral are still scheduled. But according to their producer David Dortort, "We've succeeded because we anticipated the opposition to violence. We started changing our format more than a year ago. We were the first to realize that you could make a good western without killing eight characters, having ten shootdowns, 15 fist fights, and 20 massacres."

The Strange Treatment of General Loan

by Lloyd Shearer

How would you like to receive absolutely free the best medical care in the world?

The way to do it is to get yourself assigned to some foreign embassy in Washington, D.C. Automatically this entitles you to free care at the Walter Reed Army Hospital.

This is the method employed by Maj. Gen. Nguyen Ngoc Loan, former South Vietnamese national police chief. Loan was the subject of a photograph recently awarded a Pulitzer Prize. The photo shows him emptying a pistol into the brain of a captured, tied-up member of the Viet Cong in violation of the Geneva regulations on the treatment of war prisoners. It is one of the most memorable, cruel, and shocking photos to come out of the Vietnamese War. It was taken during the 1968 Tet offensive.

Ky's buddy

Gen. Loan is one of Marshal Ky's closest buddies. They both served in the French Air Force. They are both high school dropouts. When Ky became Premier of South Vietnam in 1965, Loan was appointed Air Force chief of staff. Afraid of a military coup, Ky then appointed Loan his military security chief, assigned him the job of ruthlessly crushing all Ky opposition. After Loan succeeded in quelling the Buddhist rebellion, he was appointed director general of the national police.

Wounded in a street fight, he was subsequently removed from office, ostensibly for a period of recuperation. Loan, however, was not reappointed by President Thieu.

On April 4th of this year, Vu Ngoc Hoan, surgeon general of the ARVN (Army of the Republic of Vietnam), wrote Gen. Fred Hughes, commanding general of Walter Reed Hospital, explaining that "Maj. Gen. Nguyen Ngoc Loan is being assigned by the government of Vietnam to the Vietnamese embassy in Washington. During the 1968 Tet offensive, Gen. Loan sustained a serious battle wound... I would appreciate your help in providing any medical help that Gen. Loan may need during his time in Washington."

Gen. Loan arrived in the U.S. early in May with his wife, four children, an aide, a nurse for his children, and a chauffeur.

He reported to Walter Reed Hospital on May 13th as an outpatient, was examined and fitted with a leg brace.

Outraged that a man of Loan's controversial background should be treated at the American taxpayers' expense, Sen. Stephen Young of Ohio made a fiery speech, describing Loan as a murderer and calling his treatment at Walter Reed "a disgraceful end to a disgraceful murderous episode."

'We don't know'

The Vietnamese embassy in Washington, when questioned by PARADE as to Gen. Loan's specific assignment at the embassy, described him alternately as air attaché designate, assistant to the military attaché, "we don't know what he is going to do, where he is staying, when he plans to return home."

Mrs. Bui Z. Lan, the general's sister, whose husband works for the World Bank in Washington, D.C., was equally confusing and evasive. Mr. Lan claimed that he had no idea where his brother-in-law and family were staying "except somewhere in Washington. I do not know what his job is. I think after all this fuss, he will stay away from Walter Reed Hospital, maybe pay private doctors for his medical help."

Had it not been for the timely intervention of Senator Young, it is possible that Gen. Loan would have been granted a suite at Walter Reed Hospital, been treated and attended by U.S. surgeons and doctors with the American taxpayer footing the bill.

Nice work if you can get it.

Sherman Edwards, who made "a hell of a show" out of the American Revolution.

'1776' A musical makes history & vice versa

by Herbert Kupferberg
COVER PHOTOGRAPH BY BEN ROSS

NEW YORK, N.Y. For ex-history teacher Sherman Edwards, this is going to be the most dazzling July 4th ever. For years Edwards has been telling people he could make a successful Broadway musical out of the signing of the Declaration of Independence, and for years people have been telling him he was crazy. But he went ahead and did it anyway, and now his show, called 1776, is one of the biggest hits on Broadway. It won the Tony Award and the Drama Critics Award as the season's best musical and is a "hot ticket" with long lines at the box office. Movie companies are bidding for the screen rights and a national company will take the show on tour even while it's packing them in on Broadway.

All of this has been accomplished despite the fact that 1776 breaks most of the rules for Broadway success. Its subject matter is patriotic, its sex interest is minimal, it hasn't got a big star in the cast, and instead of lavish production numbers with beautiful girls, its dance scenes consist of things like John Adams, Thomas Jefferson and Benjamin Franklin doing a jig when the Declaration of Independence is finally completed (see cover).

Skyrocket to fame

To the 50-year-old Mr. Edwards, who has never written a Broadway show before, it's like riding a skyrocket to fame. He has had a thing about American history ever since he majored in the subject at N.Y.U. and Cornell, and he actually began a career by teaching it for a year at James Monroe High School in the Bronx.

Nor did he lose his interest in the field when, being a talented jazz pianist and composer, he switched to songwriting for a livelihood.

"I always thought the American Revolution would make a hell of a show," he recalls. "I was grabbed by the humanity of the men who were involved—Adams, Jefferson, Franklin, Washington. I was convinced they weren't the cardboard characters most of us study and grow up with in school. They were magnificent men, with a sense of commitment, a sense of passion, a sense of idealism, and a sense of humor. I worked on the idea ten years and 13 Broadway producers turned me down. They said it was about history and history is dull. Well, history isn't dull, though maybe the way it's taught is."

Edwards' enthusiasm was finally shared by producer Stuart Ostrow and by movie and TV scriptwriter Peter Stone, who was called in to write the book to go along with Edwards' songs and lyrics. Stone says he had previously had no notion of how much drama and suspense was involved in the signing of the Declaration of Independence. "The debates went on for days," he says. "Between the first and final drafts there were 86 changes and over 400 words were taken out." Stone's lines employ some of the actual words spoken by the participants, such as John Hancock's remark that he was signing his name big so that King George III could read it without his spectacles. Others he made up, such as Hancock's jocularly urging his fellow delegates to hurry up and add their signatures lest he be the only one hanged if the Redcoats suddenly arrived.

Both Stone and Edwards are happy that schoolchildren have been noted among those attending 1776. They think their show, written with what they call "affectionate accuracy," gives the kids a more realistic depiction of the times than many a textbook. Edwards said he found that his 15-year-old daughter's school history gave Jefferson three pages and John Adams only one paragraph, whereas Adams played a far more important role in pushing through the Declaration.

A human Jefferson

Similarly, the play shows Jefferson not as a periwigged senior statesman, but as a tall, gangling, red-headed squire of 33 who undertook the job of writing the Declaration only reluctantly. When Abigail Adams, one of the two feminine characters in the show, sings the line "I live like a nun in a cloister" in a song called "Yours, Yours, Yours," it comes right out of an actual letter she wrote, says Mr. Edwards.

Asked for his impression of what some of these historical personages might say if they could come back and see the show, Mr. Edwards pondered a bit and said: "Well, I think Franklin might say: 'Come now, I was a little better looking than that!' Adams might say: 'You haven't told the half of it. Let me tell you about the troubles and problems I really had.' As for Jefferson, well, he might refuse to discuss it at all. He was a terribly private person."

Numbers game

If Broadway runs true to form, the success of 1776 may be followed by a rash of other historical shows, even some with numerical titles. A production called 1491 has been in the offing for some time, and there's talk of an 1812.

That'll be all right with Mr. Edwards. "Kids today are more sophisticated and responsive, even on the grammar school level, than they were in my day," he said. "They have the capacity for seeing the people of the past as they were, and approaching history in new ways."

As for his own plans, aside from counting the returns from 1776, Mr. Edwards said he was already working on another show, but that he wasn't ready to talk about it yet.

"Is it about history?" he was asked. "Is there anything else?" he said.

Uniform Warning

Most kids don't know it, but it's against the law to wear a military uniform or any part of one if not authorized to do so.

The U.S. Code provides for a six-month jail term, a fine of $250 or both on conviction.

Recently, Stuart Bittel Cohen, 22, whose father, Wilbur Cohen, was Lyndon Johnson's Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, was arrested in Washington, D.C., for wearing an Air Force jacket. He and a pal, charged with wearing a Marine Corps overcoat, were booked at 13th Precinct headquarters by zealous guardians of the law. Fortunately, both young men had no previous police records, so the government decided not to prosecute them.

Jo Ann Plig of forthcoming film, Mosh, could be arrested for wearing unauthorized Army tunic.

Abortion and Youth

The two states with the most liberal abortion laws in the nation are California and Colorado where mental health reasons sometimes constitute grounds for medically approved abortions.

In California, statistics show that half the women applying for therapeutic abortions have never married. Their age-range is 12 to 43, with the average 23.

It's shocking that 25 percent are under the age of 16. This is one reason why the California Senate recently passed a law permitting the sale of birth control devices to unmarried minors.

U.S. Versus Drugs

The government is going all out to discourage young people from experimenting with drugs.

This July 68,000 Post Office trucks will be plastered with brightly colored posters that read: "Will the drugs turn you on, or will they turn on you?"

In addition, the government is supplying TV and radio stations with material for spot announcements which explain to youngsters and parents the dangers of drug use and addiction.

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare has also published a series of excellent pamphlets on youth and the drug problem: Marijuana: Some Questions and Answers; Narcotics: Some Questions and Answers; LSD: Some Questions and Answers. They are available at 5 cents each or $3.75 per 1000 from the U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402.

Coed Transfers

Yale University, coeducational for the first time in its long and colorful history, has accepted 370 coed transfers for undergraduate entrance this fall.

Where do the girls come from? They represent 86 colleges, with the largest groups transferring out of Wellesley (49), Smith (48), Vassar (26), Mount Holyoke (19), Cornell (13), and Barnard (12).

No doubt, some of these girls feel that there is more to college than the pursuit of knowledge. There is the subject of young men, for example, a discipline that also requires study in depth.

It may well be that sex-segregated liberal arts colleges are slowly but inexorably on their way out of the U.S. educational scene.

Jobs After College

Newell Brown, director of Princeton University's Career Services, has written a handbook on career possibilities for undergraduates.

It's entitled After College . . . What? and can be bought for $2.95 plus 25 cents postage from Branch Sales Company, Box 587, Princeton, N.J. 08540. It's worth every penny.

The 246-page book is practical, contains job descriptions, salary scales, case studies, aptitude charts and, most important of all, considerable wit and wisdom.

His Final Decision

Just prior to his retirement, Earl Warren, Chief Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court from 1953-1969, issued his personal verdict on newspapers:

"I always turn to the sports section first. The sports page records people's accomplishments. The front page usually records nothing but man's failures."

Black Students

Approximately 11 percent of the nation's population is black. Less than 2 percent of the students in the nation's major state universities are black.

These two statements point up that desegregation of the nation's public colleges and universities is "far out of proportion to the ratio of whites to Negroes in the population."

This is the basic conclusion of a survey, State Universities and Black Americans, issued by the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges and the Southern Education Foundation.

The survey was difficult to conduct because many universities keep no records by race. In 80 predominantly white state universities, however, a total student membership of 1,222,382 included only 23,630 Negroes—or 1.93 percent.

Other facts: Only two major white-majority universities, Wayne State in Detroit and Southern Illinois in Carbondale, have full-time undergraduate enrollments which are more than 5 percent black.

In 1968 there were more foreign students in American universities than U.S. blacks.

Nearly half the black students at predominantly white schools are freshmen, indicating a trend toward increased enrollment of blacks.

The percentage of black students does not vary greatly from one section of the country to another. Predominantly white universities in the South have an average black enrollment of 1.76 percent; in the East, 1.84 percent; in the Midwest, 2.98; in the West, 1.34.

Copies of the report are available for $1 from the Southern Education Foundation, 811 Cypress St., N.E., Atlanta, Ga. 30308.

In Broadway hit "1776," Thomas Jefferson (Ken Howard, left), Benjamin Franklin (Howard da Silva), and John Adams (William Daniels) foretell hatching of American independence in song entitled "The Egg." They're also on cover.

employ some of the actual words spoken by the participants, such as John Hancock's remark that he was signing his name big so that King George III could read it without his spectacles. Others he made up, such as Hancock's jocularly urging his fellow delegates to hurry up and add their signatures lest he be the only one hanged if the Redcoats suddenly arrived.

Both Stone and Edwards are happy that schoolchildren have been noted among those attending 1776. They think their show, written with what they call "affectionate accuracy," gives the kids a more realistic depiction of the times than many a textbook. Edwards said he found that his 15-year-old daughter's school history gave Jefferson three pages and John Adams only one paragraph, whereas Adams played a far more important role in pushing through the Declaration.

A human Jefferson

Similarly, the play shows Jefferson not as a periwigged senior statesman, but as a tall, gangling, red-headed squire of 33 who undertook the job of writing the Declaration only reluctantly. When Abigail Adams, one of the two feminine characters in the show, sings the line "I live like a nun in a cloister," in a song called "Yours, Yours, Yours," it comes right out of an actual letter she wrote, says Mr. Edwards.

Asked for his impression of what some of these historical personages might say if they could come back and see the show, Mr. Edwards pondered a bit and said: "Well, I think Franklin might say: 'Come now, I was a little better looking than that!' Adams might say: 'You haven't told the half of it. Let me tell you about the troubles and problems I really had.' As for Jefferson, well, he might refuse to discuss it at all. He was a terribly private person."

Numbers game

If Broadway runs true to form, the success of 1776 may be followed by a rash of other historical shows, even some with numerical titles. A production called 1491 has been in the offing for some time, and there's talk of an 1812.

That'll be all right with Mr. Edwards. "Kids today are more sophisticated and responsive, even on the grammar school level, than they were in my day," he said. "They have the capacity for seeing the people of the past as they were, and approaching history in new ways."

As for his own plans, aside from counting the returns from 1776, Mr. Edwards said he was already working on another show, but that he wasn't ready to talk about it yet.

"Is it about history?" he was asked. "Is there anything else?" he said.

Uniform Warning

Most kids don't know it, but it's against the law to wear a military uniform or any part of one if not authorized to do so.

The U.S. Code provides for a six-month jail term, a fine of $250 or both on conviction.

Recently, Stuart Bittel Cohen, 22, whose father, Wilbur Cohen, was Lyndon Johnson's Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, was arrested in Washington, D.C., for wearing an Air Force jacket. He and a pal, charged with wearing a Marine Corps overcoat, were booked at 13th Precinct headquarters by zealous guardians of the law. Fortunately, both young men had no previous police records, so the government decided not to prosecute them.

Jo Ann Plug of forthcoming film, "Mash," could be arrested for wearing unauthorized Army tunic.

Abortion and Youth

The two states with the most liberal abortion laws in the nation are California and Colorado where mental health reasons sometimes constitute grounds for medically approved abortions.

In California, statistics show that half the women applying for therapeutic abortions have never married. Their age-range is 12 to 43, with the average 23.

It's shocking that 25 percent are under the age of 16. This is one reason why the California Senate recently passed a law permitting the sale of birth control devices to unmarried minors.

U.S. Versus Drugs

The government is going all out to discourage young people from experimenting with drugs.

This July 68,000 Post Office trucks will be plastered with brightly colored posters that read: "Will the drugs turn you on, or will they turn on you?"

In addition, the government is supplying TV and radio stations with material for spot announcements which explain to youngsters and parents the dangers of drug use and addiction.

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare has also published a series of excellent pamphlets on youth and the drug problem: Marijuana: Some Questions and Answers; Narcotics: Some Questions and Answers; LSD: Some Questions and Answers. They are available at 5 cents each or $3.75 per 1000 from the U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402.

Coed Transfers

Yale University, coeducational for the first time in its long and colorful history, has accepted 370 coed transfers for undergraduate entrance this fall.

Where do the girls come from? They represent 86 colleges, with the largest groups transferring out of Wellesley (49), Smith (48), Vassar (26), Mount Holyoke (19), Cornell (13), and Barnard (12).

No doubt, some of these girls feel that there is more to college than the pursuit of knowledge. There is the subject of young men, for example, a discipline that also requires study in depth.

It may well be that sex-segregated liberal arts colleges are slowly but inexorably on their way out of the U.S. educational scene.

Glance through just one chapter. And get ready for one of the most thrilling weekends of accomplishment in your entire life!

The Very First Hour After You Pick Up This Book, You Will Perform A Feat Of Mind Power That Will Astound Your Friends!

What you are going to do in that very first hour you receive the book, is this. Turn to page 241. Read three short pages—no more! And then, put down the book. Review in your own mind the one simple secret I've shown you — how to feed facts into your mind so that they stay there — permanently — as long as you wish! Then put this simple trick to work for you — that very same hour!

Call in your family or friends. Ask them to make a list of any TWELVE facts, names or objects they wish, as fast as they wish. Have them write down the list so they won't forget it! But, as they give you each fact, YOU are going to perform a simple mental trick on that fact, that will burn it into your mind, IN PERFECT ORDER, as long as you wish!

And then — INSTANTLY AND AUTOMATICALLY — you are going to repeat that list backwards and forwards, in perfect order exactly as if you were reading that list in your friend's hand! And you are going to have one of the most exciting moments of your life, as you watch the expression on those people's faces as you reel off those facts as though they were flashing on a screen on the inside of your memory!

Thrilling? Yes! But also one of the most profitable secrets you will ever learn. For that list of twelve facts can just as easily be an appointment schedule — with each appointment flashing automatically into your mind at just the right time and place that you need it! Or a shopping list — or the outline of a speech — or a sales presentation — or the highlights of an important article — or a list of things that have to be done in perfect order!

Any one of them — they flash into your mind automatically, as though you pressed a button! And this astonishing mental gift — which will serve you every day for the rest of your life — is yours from the very first hour that you pick up this book!

And yet it's only the beginning!

Which Areas Of Your Mind Do You Want To Strengthen In A Single Weekend? Concentration, Will-Power, Self-Confidence, Habit-Breaking!

Yes! From this moment on, in less than one thrilling hour a day, you begin testing the wonder-working techniques of Automatic Organization on every untrained corner of your mind! You begin breaking through mental barriers—mental limitations that have been blocking you for years!

You begin tapping the buried powers of your own mind... powers that you have glimpsed before in brief flashes... now brought to the surface—organized with simple formulas to double their potency — and placed forever at your beck and call, ready to go to work for you at the blink of an eyelash!

For example — DO YOU WANT TO DEVELOP "RADAR-LIKE CONCENTRATION?"

Then turn to page 9... master one simple exercise and thrill to your ability to absorb huge amounts of information — easily and swiftly — even in a room filled with half a dozen howling children!

DO YOU WANT TO DEVELOP "X-RAY EYES" — POWERS OF OBSERVATION THAT AMAZE YOUR FRIENDS?

Then turn to page 299... play three fascinating games... and then startle your friends, time and time again, by your ability to spot revealing details — put together hidden pieces of evidence — that they never even dreamed were there at all!

DO YOU WANT TO SEE HOW EASY IT IS TO REPLACE BAD HABITS WITH HABITS YOU CAN BE PROUD OF?

Then get ready for the revelation of your life on page 311... that replaces agony with fun... that actually lets your bad habits break themselves without your hardly touching your will power.

YES! AND DO YOU WANT TO GENERATE ENTHUSIASM... FRIENDLINESS... PERSONALITY AT AN INSTANT COMMAND?

Then read every word starting on page 368! Learn how to overcome shyness and fear, automatically... make anyone like you... dissolve opposition with as little as a single word... earn both trust and respect from everyone you meet — and keep them — for good!

THE FIREWORKS SCANDAL

by Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON, D.C. In a wooded hollow two miles east of the tranquil little town of North East, Md., sparrows flitted from roof to roof of seven tar-paper-covered shacks, which formed a semicircle around a larger building. Suddenly the main building erupted like a massive firecracker, sending flame and smoke billowing into the azure April sky. On a nearby hillside, Mrs. Vernon Kincaid rushed to check the windows of her home. "This one didn't blow the windows out like it did a couple of years ago," she said afterward.

For the second time since January, the Mid-State Fireworks Manufacturing Co. was rocked by an explosion. Several hours later, after the fire had been extinguished, 30 acres of woodland lay charred and smoking. A tangle of blackened pipes marked the spot where the main plant had stood. Three men lay in hospital beds with severe burns. Three women were in the Baltimore morgue, dead of "partial cremation."

But shacks keep going

This explosion, if not as big as the one Mrs. Kincaid remembered two years earlier, was worse than the January blast which had killed only two people. Yet the seven shacks, each loaded with gunpowder, had miraculously survived the holocaust, and Mid-State continued to produce fireworks until, four days later, still another fire injured three more workers.

Of course, most fireworks manufacturers operate strictly within the law and produce "safe and sane" fireworks by federal standards. These accidents are but footnotes to the sordid story of the fireworks industry, which has turned the Fourth of July, our proudest national holiday, into a national scandal. Across the country, year in and year out, fireworks users are burned, maimed, blinded and dismembered. Based on past records, the National Fire Protection Association estimates that fireworks used to celebrate Independence Day this week will cause 5000 injuries (at least four of them fatal) and 7400 fires. Most of the victims, sadly, will be children and teenagers.

Yet the industry has done little to protect the public from the shady manufacturers and seedy dealers, whose operations are shrouded in acrid clouds of gunpowder smoke. They traffic in illegal and substandard fireworks, which are a hazard to the youngsters who shoot them off.

Two national organizations—American Pyrotechnics Association and Pyro-technic Distributors Association—represent most major fireworks producers and distributors. An APA spokesman piously called these the "responsible members of the industry." Yet the membership rosters of both associations are loaded with unprincipled manufacturers and dealers who violate the law or stay barely within its loopholes.

The APA's statements exude an air of innocence. Compare them, however, with recent happenings.

APA: "Class B fireworks (cherry bombs, M-80's, silver salutes, bulldogs, etc.) are illegal now. The situation is pretty well in hand."

Fact: On Feb. 28, two teenagers climbed atop a Standard Oil tank in La Mirada, Calif., and dropped in a cherry bomb. They liked the resounding boom and dropped another. The fumes ignited, buckling the top of the tank and destroying 14,000 barrels of oil. The boys miraculously escaped injury.

APA: "We operate under Food and Drug Administration regulations. They have eliminated hazardous items."

Fact: On April 14, Gary Thomas, 21, of Cleveland, held a firecracker too long, lost the tips of two fingers. A few months earlier, a 14-year-old Wingate, N.C., youth was literally blown apart when 65 cherry bombs exploded on his person.

APA: "Since the FDA cracked down, Class B items are hard to get. They are in short supply."

Fact: Last Fourth of July, a 17-year-old Pittsburg, Kans., girl was killed and her companion seriously injured when a tossed M-80 fell back into their pickup truck into a pile of fireworks. The truck was demolished. About the same time, an automobile trunkload of heavy fireworks exploded in St. Cloud, Minn., killing an occupant of the car, age 24, and two bystanders—a girl, 4, and a boy, 19.

Incidents on rise

Both the Food and Drug Administration and National Fire Protection Association claim that, despite their efforts, incidents like these are on the rise. Most of the serious accidents, incidentally, are caused by bootleg fireworks.

Under the 1954 federal fireworks law, only interstate commerce of certain fireworks was forbidden, then only if a state law was violated in the course of shipment. The law was about as effective as a wet firecracker and produced only one conviction. This singular triumph occurred when the defendant walked into court and pleaded guilty.

In 1963, Sen. Tom Dodd (D., Conn.) began investigating the fireworks industry after plastic-covered cherry bombs had caused an alarming number of injuries and deaths in the Washington-Maryland-Virginia area. Dodd's investigators turned up the "father" of the plastic cherry bomb, Bernard J. Semel, who had tried to patent his in-

Fireworks light up the Statue of Liberty. They can be a thing of beauty, but illegal, substandard and bootlegged products often spell tragedy for children.

THE FIREWORKS SCANDAL

by Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON, D.C.

In a wooded hollow two miles east of the tranquil little town of North East, Md., sparrows flitted from roof to roof of seven tar-paper-covered shacks, which formed a semicircle around a larger building. Suddenly the main building erupted like a massive firecracker, sending flame and smoke billowing into the azure April sky. On a nearby hillside, Mrs. Vernon Kincaid rushed to check the windows of her home. "This one didn't blow the windows out like it did a couple of years ago," she said afterward.

For the second time since January, the Mid-State Fireworks Manufacturing Co. was rocked by an explosion. Several hours later, after the fire had been extinguished, 30 acres of woodland lay charred and smoking. A tangle of blackened pipes marked the spot where the main plant had stood. Three men lay in hospital beds with severe burns. Three women were in the Baltimore morgue, dead of "partial cremation."

But shacks keep going

This explosion, if not as big as the one Mrs. Kincaid remembered two years earlier, was worse than the January blast which had killed only two people. Yet the seven shacks, each loaded with gunpowder, had miraculously survived the holocaust, and Mid-State continued to produce fireworks until, four days later, still another fire injured three more workers.

Of course, most fireworks manufacturers operate strictly within the law and produce "safe and sane" fireworks by federal standards. These accidents are but footnotes to the sordid story of the fireworks industry, which has turned the Fourth of July, our proudest national holiday, into a national scandal. Across the country, year in and year out, fireworks users are burned, maimed, blinded and dismembered. Based on past records, the National Fire Protection Association estimates that fireworks used to celebrate Independence Day this week will cause 5000 injuries (at least four of them fatal) and 1400 fires. Most of the victims, sadly, will be children and teenagers.

Yet the industry has done little to protect the public from the shady manufacturers and seedy dealers, whose operations are shrouded in acrid clouds of gunpowder smoke. They traffic in illegal and substandard fireworks, which are a hazard to the youngsters who shoot them off.

Two national organizations—American Pyrotechnics Association and Pyro-technic Distributors Association—represent most major fireworks producers and distributors. An APA spokesman piously called these the "responsible members of the industry." Yet the membership rosters of both associations are loaded with unprincipled manufacturers and dealers who violate the law or stay barely within its loopholes.

The APA's statements exude an air of innocence. Compare them, however, with recent happenings.

APA: "Class B fireworks (cherry bombs, M-80's, silver salutes, bulldogs, etc.) are illegal now. The situation is pretty well in hand."

Fact: On Feb. 28, two teenagers climbed atop a Standard Oil tank in La Mirada, Calif., and dropped in a cherry bomb. They liked the resounding boom and dropped another. The fumes ignited, buckling the top of the tank and destroying 14,000 barrels of oil. The boys miraculously escaped injury.

APA: "We operate under Food and Drug Administration regulations. They have eliminated hazardous items."

Fact: On April 14, Gary Thomas, 21, of Cleveland, held a firecracker too long, lost the tips of two fingers. A few months earlier, a 14-year-old Wingate, N.C., youth was literally blown apart when 65 cherry bombs exploded on his person.

APA: "Since the FDA cracked down, Class B items are hard to get. They are in short supply."

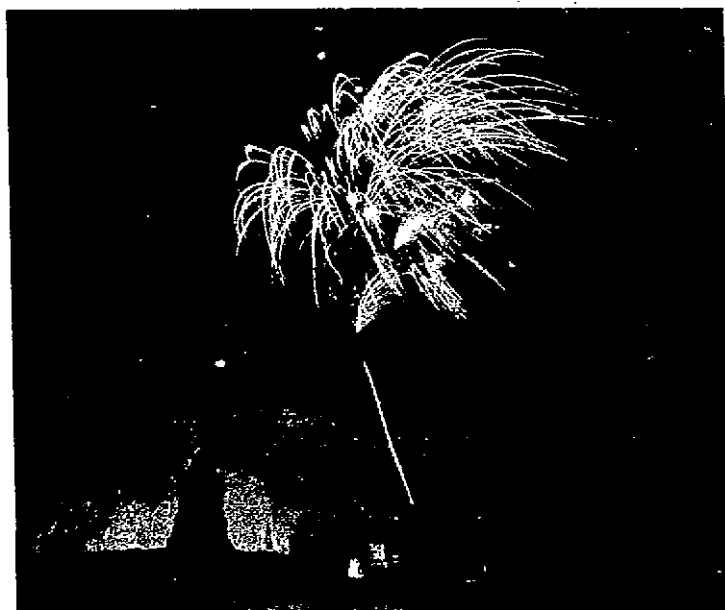

Fact: Last Fourth of July, a 17-year-old Pittsburg, Kans., girl was killed and her companion seriously injured when a tossed M-80 fell back into their pickup truck into a pile of fireworks. The truck was demolished. About the same time, an automobile trunkload of heavy fireworks exploded in St. Cloud, Minn., killing an occupant of the car, age 24, and two bystanders—a girl, 4, and a boy, 19.

Incidents on rise

Both the Food and Drug Administration and National Fire Protection Association claim that, despite their efforts, incidents like these are on the rise. Most of the serious accidents, incidentally, are caused by bootleg fireworks.

Under the 1954 federal fireworks law, only interstate commerce of certain fireworks was forbidden, then only if a state law was violated in the course of shipment. The law was about as effective as a wet firecracker and produced only one conviction. This singular triumph occurred when the defendant walked into court and pleaded guilty.

In 1963, Sen. Tom Dodd (D., Conn.) began investigating the fireworks industry after plastic-covered cherry bombs had caused an alarming number of injuries and deaths in the Washington-Maryland-Virginia area. Dodd's investigators turned up the "father" of the plastic cherry bomb, Bernard J. Semel, who had tried to patent his invention in 1961. His application was disapproved, but Semel went into production anyway. His company, Capital Fireworks, Inc., of Brandywine, Md., produced plastic fireworks which immediately began taking their terrible toll. Semel's diabolical contraption spread fragments of plastic with tremendous velocity. For instance, 25 pieces of plastic shrapnel were removed from the body of one youthful victim.

It isn't altogether irrelevant that Semel was a bona-fide, dues-paying member of the sacrosanct American Pyrotechnics Association. In return for a promise of immunity from prosecution, Semel gave some frank secret testimony. Dodd's chief investigator, Carl Penan, later acknowledged that Semel "gave us a wealth of information that resulted in the identification of several major manufacturers who were illegally transporting outlawed fireworks to a variety of states on the East Coast... as a result, many of the companies were subjected to investigation by the bureau [FBI] and many of the persons who had been trafficking these items were investigated and interrogated." However, none of these persons was convicted—or even hauled into court.

As for Dodd, he held a few hearings and reaped a few headlines. Then a delegation of APA officers closeted him and "convinced him" that his "present investigation is casting a somewhat undesirable reflection upon the industry as a whole." After a series of meetings, Dodd's aides and APA members "co-operated" in drafting a fireworks bill, which merely gathered dust in a Senate cubbyhole.

'Cracker balls'

In 1965, Food and Drug seized 60 million "cracker balls"—small, round, gay-colored torpedoes which exploded on impact and were almost indistinguishable from candy balls and certain cereals. Often sold at candy counters, the cracker balls also contained arsenic. Thus not only burned-out mouths and loosened teeth but arsenic poisoning awaited the child who couldn't read the label and innocently bit into a cracker ball.

The 1967 Hazardous Substances Act, which bans outright all fireworks except "properly labeled" Class C items, gave FDA the authority to crack down on illegal fireworks sales. Within a week after the law went into effect, the agency seized over $16,700 worth of bootlegged fireworks in South Carolina. Food and Drug officer Dale Miller told PARADE that FDA made over 50 seizures in the past year. One netted about $12,000 worth of bootleg fireworks.

Still, the illegal fireworks traffic continues to increase. Why? Three loopholes in the 1967 law are big enough for the bootleggers to drive their unmarked trucks through. First, the law permits the sale of explosive items for "agricultural use." Cherry bombs or large salutes are attached at intervals to a long, slow-burning rope fuse which is then lit and left to boom intermittently—effective for keeping crows out of the cornfield. Second, "public displays" are permitted under the law and, third, the armed services use millions of fireworks each year to simulate sounds of the battlefield in training camps.

These loopholes provide ready-made alibis for unscrupulous manufacturers. Thus "agricultural sales" run into the millions of dollars each year—enough to turn the nation's cornfields into a Vietnam. The FDA recently made a seizure of cherry bombs manufactured by an APA member; they were labeled "pilot control bombs."

'Mr. X'

PARADE has uncovered confidential reports of bootleg dealings. Typical was a sworn statement from Charles S. Omohundro who was in Virginia to sell "safe and sane" fireworks. On two occasions in 1963, Omohundro decided to bypass the distributor and buy direct. His testimony:

"I drove to a fireworks company [in a nearby state] and purchased cherry bombs there from a Mr. X of that firm. I transacted business solely with Mr. X, and no other person was present. He did not ask to see my fireworks license that I might have and in fact did not care if I had a license or not. I walked in and told him what I wanted and he did not ask for any license. I hauled the cherry bombs into Virginia in a rented U-Haul trailer, which had no other markings.

"I told him that it was against the law to sell cherry bombs in Virginia; and he made out the invoices to Atlanta, Ga., even though he has my... address and knows that I live in Virginia. He told me that if I were stopped by police on the trip to Virginia, I was to indicate that I was taking the cherry bombs to Atlanta, Ga."

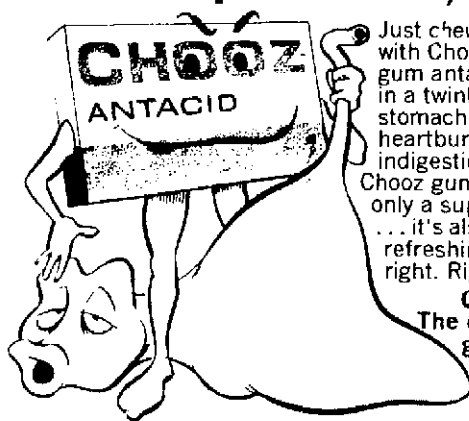

Mr. X, incidentally, was among the APA members who worked so industriously to help Senator Dodd's aide draft their aborted fireworks bill.

According to the FDA's Dale Miller, some bootleg fireworks are actually shipped through the U.S. mails. This a risk taken only by "garage and basement" manufacturers who frequently change their addresses to keep a jump ahead of the law.

Today, 18 states ban fireworks altogether, allowing only caps and pistols. Eight others allow only the popular sparkler—which, incidentally, reaches temperatures up to 2000 degrees Fahrenheit when ignited. The rest are "Class C" states; they permit the sale and use of almost all fireworks not banned by federal law. The APA, meanwhile, is working diligently but quietly to revoke or amend those state laws which forbid fireworks.

Over the last 50 years, fireworks accidents have killed approximately 4000 Americans—just about as many as died in the Revolutionary War. The latter died for independence, most of the others died celebrating independence.

Revolutionizes Denture Wearing

The big difference between natural teeth and dentures is in performance. Natural teeth are held solidly in place by living connective tissue. Without connective tissue, even the most expensive dentures may slip and rock. Gums often get raw and sore. Constant rubbing may cause serious bone damage. Eating can be slow, painful. You speak less clearly. You dare not laugh for fear of dentures dropping.

Now chemists have developed an artificial connective membrane—FIXODENT. It connects dentures with gums and mouth surfaces. It is incredibly effective for both uppers and lowers. FIXODENT's elastic membrane absorbs the shock of biting and chewing —helps protect gums from bruising and irritation. You eat faster—bite harder, without pain—enjoy your food more. Eat hard-to-chew foods—steaks, fruits—prevent "denture malnutrition," a problem of older people. FIXODENT helps you speak easier, faster, more clearly. When dentures slip you hold them in place with tongue and cheek muscles that ache. FIXODENT helps prevent strain.

The special pencil point dispenser spots FIXODENT with precision—no oozing over. Often lasts "round the clock." It even resists hot drinks. Dentures that fit are essential to health. See your dentist regularly. Get special FIXODENT at all drug counters.

Science Finds Way To Shrink Painful Hemorrhoids

And Promptly Stop The Itching, Relieve Pain In Most Cases.

A scientific research institute has discovered a medication with the ability, in most cases—to promptly stop burning itch and actually shrink hemorrhoids.

In one hemorrhoid case after another very striking improvement was reported by doctors who conducted the tests. Pain and itching were promptly relieved. And while gently relieving pain, actual reduction (shrinkage) took place.

Tests conducted on hundreds of patients by doctors in New York City, in Washington, D.C. and at a Midwest Medical Center proved this so. And it was all done without narcotics or stinging astringents of any kind.

This secret is Preparation H®. There is no other formula for the treatment of hemorrhoids like it! Preparation H also lubricates, soothes irritated tissues and helps prevent further infection. Preparation H comes in ointment or suppository form. No prescription is needed.

PLAYTEX INVENTS THE FIRST-DAY™ TAMPON

IS YOUR FIRST DAY YOUR WORST DAY?

Maybe you've never thought about it. But with a lot of girls and women, the first days of the period are always the worst. With others, it's the second day. Doesn't matter. Whenever you flow the heaviest, you need the greatest protection.

LET'S BE HONEST.

Lots of tampons simply don't do the job they ought to. Particularly, when you're on the go and can't change as often as you'd like. That's when mishaps most often happen.

PLAYTEX HAS CHANGED ALL THAT.

By designing a better-protecting tampon. It's totally different, both inside and out. So different, we felt it deserved a new name.

WE CALL IT THE FIRST-DAY TAMPON.

Because that best describes its improvement over ordinary tampons. It's so absorbent, it even protects on your first day, your worst day. That's because it's self-adjusting—it fans out and adjusts to your own personal inner figure as no other tampon can. Protects every inside inch of you.

THINK OF A FLOWER.

A tulip, that's closed. Now, imagine it open, in full bloom. That's the way the Playtex first-day tampon acts to protect you. It blooms. Flowers out. Fluffs out. Forms a cup to absorb moisture in a new way. And the more it absorbs, the more it blooms.

HOW IS IT DIFFERENT FROM ORDINARY TAMPONS?

They're straight up and down, and retain this shape even when exposed to moisture. So there's nothing to stop a heavier flow.

SEE THIS UNIQUE BLOOMING ACTION YOURSELF.

By dipping a Playtex tampon and an ordinary tampon in water. The ordinary tampon thins and flattens out, doesn't change its shape appreciably. But moisture makes the Playtex tampon fan out, expand, take on a different shape.

TESTS PROVED WE HAD MADE A BETTER TAMPON.

For more than a year, we conducted laboratory comparison tests, and in every case the Playtex tampon proved to be more absorbent. Actually 45% more absorbent on the average than the leading tampon. So now you don't have to worry about mishaps anymore.

With all this extra absorbency, you can't help but feel secure.

WE ALSO DESIGNED A BETTER APPLICATOR.

To make insertion easier. Those stiff cardboard applicators sometimes pinch. Not so with ours. It's all soft, gentle, clear plastic, so its smooth, satin finish acts like a self-lubricator. Makes it easier to use your first day or last.

With all this extra absorbency, you can't help but feel secure.

WE ALSO DESIGNED A BETTER APPLICATOR.

To make insertion easier. Those stiff cardboard applicators sometimes pinch. Not so with ours. It's all soft, gentle, clear plastic, so its smooth, satin finish acts like a self-lubricator. Makes it easier to use your first day or last.

My Favorite Jokes

by Leopold Fechter

EDITOR'S NOTE: Viennese-born Leopold Fechter has been collecting American humor for 30 years and now has one of the best private humor libraries in the country right in his home and studio in Queens, N.Y.

His interest in humor started 40 years ago when young Leopold was a portrait photographer in Vienna. In order to make his sitters smile at the camera, he would tell a joke or two, drawing on material from his many German jokebooks. When Fechter came to the United States 30 years ago, he hoped to evoke smiles from his American customers with a gag or two and began buying humor books. As his photography business grew, so did his collection. He now has 3000 books and is still collecting them. His wife now handles the photography business since he's too busy with his hobby to take pictures anymore. Fechter has selected items from his files for a book called 'American Wit and Gags,' just published by Vantage Press.

Herewith some of his favorites:

At my age, when a girl flirts with me in a movie, she is after my popcorn.

In most of our beauty shops, the gossip alone would curl your hair.

I've finally found out a great way to start the day. Go back to bed.

My wife is a light eater, as soon as it gets light, she starts eating.

When everything else fails, read the instructions.

If you want to watch a baseball game in the worst way—take your wife along.

Every woman knows that the secret of everlasting youth is to lie about your age.

Business is what—when you don't have any—you go out on!

I'm the master of my house, and I have my wife's permission to say so.

I had a good job with a tea company until I asked for a coffee break.

Marriage is the most expensive way I know to get your laundry free.

My wife always says: "If you really loved me, you would have married someone else."

I never drink coffee in the morning—it keeps me awake all day.

I heard you applied for a government job. What are you doing now? Nothing, I got the job.

Waiter, this plate is wet.
That's your soup, sir.

A man who gives in when he is right is married.

Sometimes it is better to have loved and lost than to have to do homework for three children.

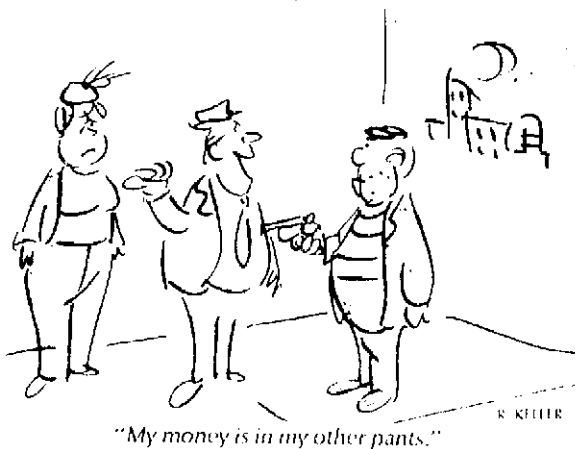

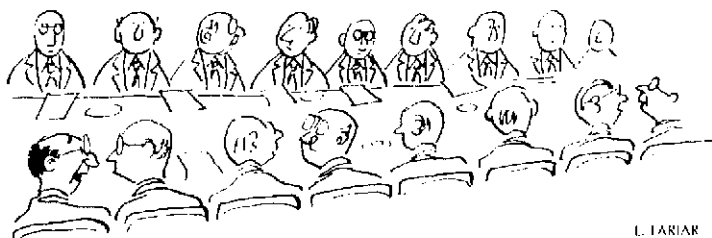

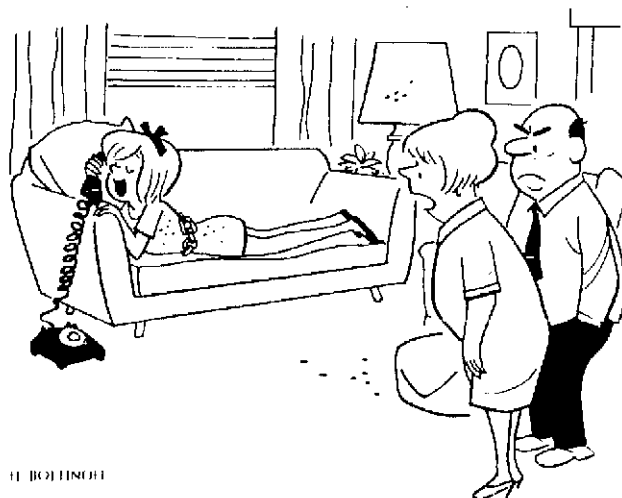

If Alexander Graham Bell had had a daughter, he never would have invented the telephone.

It's always the last key that opens the lock.

Even if a man could understand women, he still wouldn't believe it.

10 Bright Barbecue Ideas from Reynolds Wrap

LINE YOUR GRILL
Use Heavy Duty Reynolds Wrap. The foil reflects the heat evenly over the entire grill. Foods cook more evenly. Faster, too. And at clean-up time just bundle up the ashes in the foil and throw 'em away.

CLAMBAKE-IN-A-BUNDLE. On a 24" piece of Heavy Duty Reynolds Wrap arrange a large frozen lobster tail (or a 1 lb. fresh-killed lobster as shown above); a chicken leg; 6 clams; an ear of corn, silk removed; a scrubbed potato; an onion; ½ cup clam juice. Bring up sides of foil and seal with double fold. Double-fold ends. Place bundle, seam side down, on a second sheet of Heavy Duty foil. Wrap and seal with double fold. Place on grill 4 inches from coals. Cook 1 hour turning every 15 minutes. Serve with melted butter and lemon. Serves one. (The big idea is the no-fuss foil bundle. Works fine, too, with beef or lamb or chicken, and vegetables.)

PEACHES-IN-A-POKE. Arrange two peach halves on a 9 inch square of Heavy Duty Reynolds Wrap. Sprinkle with sugar, cinnamon, chopped almonds and (optional) a teaspoon of brandy or rum. Bring foil up and twist-top to close tight. Cook on grill over medium-hot fire about 15 minutes.

HOT GARLIC BREAD. Cut a loaf of Italian Bread in ¾ inch slices, not quite through bottom crust. Combine ½ cup softened butter or margarine with 1 minced garlic clove, 1 teaspoon parsley flakes, ¼ teaspoon oregano, ¼ teaspoon dried dill. Spread mixture generously between slices. Wrap loosely in Reynolds Wrap and heat on grill 15 minutes.

"INSTANT HIBACHI"

While the main dish is cooking on your big grill, let your guests cook their own appetizer-kebobs on your "instant hibachi." Just line a big cast iron kettle (or even an old bucket) with Heavy Duty Reynolds Wrap and build the fire right on the foil.

Delight your family...dazzle your friends...with delicious (and different) dishes that end forever the same-old-thing cookout.

What does it take? Two important ingredients: Reynolds Wrap and your own creativity. Reynolds Wrap is a must for outdoor barbecuing because you can cook in it, even over the hottest coals! It has a special resistance to tearing, so it safely seals in juices and flavors. It keeps hot foods hot till ready to serve. Molds tight and holds tight to any shape...from a lobster to a peach-in-a-poke. How come? Because every inch of Reynolds Wrap is oven-tempered for flexible strength. Strong, dependable Reynolds Wrap. The barbecue buff's best friend.

FOIL-ROASTED CORN ON THE COB

Remove husks and silk. Brush corn with melted butter or margarine. Wrap each ear tightly in Reynolds Wrap. Roast on top of grill over hot fire about 15 minutes. Foil seals in the fresh-corn flavor and aroma. Foil baked potatoes are great, too. Just scrub the spuds and wrap each one tightly in Heavy Duty foil. Place them directly on the coals around the edge of the fire. Bake about 45 minutes.

SUMMER SQUASH TREAT

Put half-inch slices of squash on very thin onion slices in center of a square of Heavy Duty Reynolds Wrap. Season with salt, pepper and snips of fresh dill. Dot with butter. Seal foil with double-fold and cook on grill about 25 minutes. Divine! And, you can cook tomatoes, pearl onions and all kinds of frozen vegetables on your outdoor grill, too. The real secret is the tightly sealed foil packet idea.

SPIT ROASTING?

Make a foil pan to catch the drippings. Just turn up all four edges of a double-thickness length of Heavy Duty Reynolds Wrap in the shape of a narrow rectangular pan and place in front of the coals, directly under the meat. Avoids flame flare-ups.

QUICKIE OVEN

Bake-and-serve biscuits and rolls bake beautifully on the grill. Place them on a sheet of Heavy Duty foil and cover them with another sheet. Good idea with hot dog and hamburger rolls, too.

WONDERFUL WOODSY FLAVOR

Soak hickory chips in water and wrap them tightly in foil. Punch holes in the foil to let smoke escape and place the packet right on the coals. Hickory chips won't flame up and burn.
